Reinstatement of NRA Union Chief at Once Is Demanded.

He Must "Toe the Mark," Says Peck

Administrator Is Scored for His "Unjustified Interference."

Immediate reinstatement of John Donovan, discharged president of the NRA union, was called for in a decision last night by the National Labor Relations Board. Mr. Donovan was a technical adviser to the NRA's Labor Advisory Board.

The board accused Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, who personally dismissed Mr. Donovan June 18, of "unjustified interference with his employes' right of self-organization," and criticized him by implication for failing to observe Section 7(a), the collective bargaining guarantee of the recovery act.

Dr. Gustav Peck, Labor Advisory Board executive director, later announced Mr. Donovan "will find his job if he reports for duty." He added, however, that the union president would have to "toe the mark."

Because of its efforts to compel observance of Section 7(a) by private employers, the board held the NRA should carry out that provision with "even more scrupulous care" than might be expected of ordinary employers.

It was recalled that Gen. Johnson discharged Donovan for what he considered "inefficiency, inattention to duty, unauthorized absences from duty and insubordination."

The board ruled the evidence presented to it at a recent hearing indicated Mr. Donovan never would have been discharged except for his conduct June 18, when he insisted on an interview with Gen. Johnson in his capacity as union president to seek reinstatement of a stencil cutter and union member previously dismissed and subsequently reinstated. Mr. Donovan's conduct that day, the board held, did not justify his dismissal.

Mr. Donovan's action in demanding an appointment with Gen. Johnson within 24 hours was criticized by the board as "injudicious and needlessly provocative," and the size of the delegation which accompanied him to the adminis-

Russo-Japan War Feared

Nipponese Minister Cites "Unhappy Incidents" in Manchukuo.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Tokyo, Aug. 21.—Menace of a second Russo-Japanese war appeared nearer tonight as a result of increasing tension between the two nations over recurrent incidents along the Manchukuo-Siberian border.

Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, war minister, entered the troubled picture with an appeal to the Japanese government to send "strong representations" to Moscow concerning no less than 24 "unhappy incidents" of recent months along the frontier.

The war ministry's appeal was regarded as highly significant as the army leaders are in control in Manchukuo and are able to proceed practically on their own in the event of an emergency.

It also was significant because it follows the break-up of negotiations between Moscow and Manchukuo, through Japan, for the sale to Manchukuo of Russia's half interest in the strategic Chinese Eastern Railway in north Manchuria.

The Japanese foreign office published an account of the negotiations which failed last week, revealing a difference of 40,000,000 gold roubles is separating Manchukuo and Russia in the sale. It was presumed that Japanese record was the same as that previously published in Moscow.

Machine Gun Bandits Get $427,000 in N. Y.; Biggest Cash Holdup

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 21 (AP).—Swiftly and sensationally, a dozen bandits today held up and looted an armored bank truck of $427,000—the biggest cash robbery on record.

They escaped in a roar of fire from one of their own machine guns, which had been dropped, as their cars sped off. At the waterfront 19 blocks away they transferred the money and dashed away in speedboats.

More than 40 police cars raced in pursuit. Airplanes and police launches joined the chase. Tonight an armed cordon of thousands of officers continued a wide search over Brooklyn and Manhattan and nearby cities.

"Stop all suspicious cars. These men are dangerous. Use caution. They are armed," concluded alarms broadcast every few minutes over the wireless system.

The brazenness with which the thugs attacked the heavily armed

Il Duce Seals Austrian Pact Of Autonomy

To Brook No Interference, He Assures Schuschnigg at Conference.

Florence, Italy, Aug. 21 (AP).—The destinies of two nations were linked closer than ever today by two premiers who talked in an ancient villa overlooking Florence.

Premier Mussolini of Italy told Chancellor Schuschnigg of Austria that, come what may, Italy will tolerate no interference with the freedom of Austria.

Some observers thought they saw a distinctly monarchical angle to the conference, but there was nothing of royal splendor in the appearance of the men who conferred. The head of the Austrian state wore civilian clothes. Il Duce outdid his visitor in the matter of democratic garb, for he came to the meeting fresh from army maneuvers wearing a business suit with his trousers jammed into riding boots, and on his head was a worn yachting cap.

To Pass Near Zita's Home.

The suggestion that the Austrian monarchy was concerned in the meeting came with an announce-

Spanish Princess To Enter Convent

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Paris, Aug. 21.—The Infanta Beatrice, daughter of the former King of Spain, may cover her blonde hair beneath the black veil of a nun, and forever bar her blue eyes from the world in sorrow because of the death of her brother, the Infante Gonzalo, it was learned today.

The 25-year-old Spanish princess, whose English blondeness was an inheritance from her mother, is insistent upon seeking consolation in a convent. The royal family will make its decision, it was learned, within a few weeks, and it is believed Beatrice's request will be granted.

Jews Favor Nazi Boycott Continuance

World Conference Issues Communique to Redouble Fight for Rights.

Geneva, Aug. 21 (U.P.).—Delegates to the World Jewish Conference tonight issued a communique declaring themselves in favor of continuing the anti-German goods "boycott with redoubled force until German Jews have been reinstated with all their rights as citizens."

The communique was issued after a troubled session of the conference's boycott committiee. Delegates intimated the conference as a whole was expected to adopt this resolution tomorrow or Thursday, the last day of the four-day meeting.

The action followed a heated debate, during which disorders broke out and the meeting temporarily was the scene of confusion as delegates berated each other. Palestine Jews were severely criticized for permitting shipment of German products into the Holy Land as one way of obtaining value received for cash sequestered in Germany which, under exchange restrictions, they are unable to send abroad.

The committee finally reached an agreement on redoubling their boycott efforts against Germany for another year, however, and action by the general conference will be

30 Hurt, Seaman Lost, As Gale Batters Liner

Glasgow, Scotland, Aug. 21 (AP).—More than 30 passengers were injured and one seaman lost overboard when a terrific gale struck the liner Cameronia in mid-Atlantic, it was learned on the ship's arrival at Clyde today.

Passengers said some waves 60 feet high broke against the Anchor liner, which sailed from Boston August 12, and from New York the previous day. A team of Penn State football players was aboard but escaped injury.

Idle Salesman Crawls on Pipe To End Life by Plunge in Lake

Baltimore, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Hand over hand, Leonard B. Nelson, 45, a jobless salesman, made his way along a small iron pipe extending from the shore of Druid Lake, in Druid Hill Park, to a stone water gate about 60 feet from land.

Reaching a point over water about 40 feet deep, Nelson let go and plunged into the lake. He did not struggle in the water and drowned within a few minutes—thus accomplishing what police termed the most unusual suicide in many years.

Nelson had lost his job in a downtown store last Saturday. Today he went to Druid Hill Park and stood looking over the waters of the lake. A small boy approached.

"What time is it?" asked Nelson.

He was told it was 5 minutes of 10.

"I'm going to commit suicide at 10 o'clock," Nelson told the boy. The youngster, incredulous, walked on.

A few minutes later, two passers-by saw Nelson inside the iron fence which surrounds the lake. He had a pistol pointed to his head. The men, unable to get to him quickly, pleaded with him to desist.

"It doesn't work," said Nelson, pulling the trigger. The gun failed to explode. "You see," said Nelson.

Then he started making his way along the iron pipe. The men watched, helpless, as he released his hold and fell to his death. Police recovered his body.

Mob Turns On Troops In Nazi Raid

Many Seized in Drive on "Nein" Voters in Election.

Berlin, Aug. 21 (U.P.).—Open revolt against the Nazi Storm Troops broke out in the outskirts of Berlin tonight for the first time since Adolf Hitler rose to power as chancellor of the Reich 18 months ago.

Scores of excited workers mobbed Nazi Brown Shirts who swarmed down upon the labor quarters in the suburbs, making wholesale arrests in Hitler's first move to "convert" the "erring 10 per cent" who dared vote aginst him in last Sunday's plebiscite on approval of his seizure of complete power in Germany.

The arrests were made presumably as part of this drive against those who voted "nein." They were accompanied by open resistance as the workers milled about in bold revolt against the heavy-handed measures of the Storm Troops. They refused to permit the victims to be taken to Brown Shirt headquarters.

The mobs, by sheer force and fisticuffs, compelled several to be taken to the regular police for hearings.

A Nazi analysis of the Sunday ballot established that at least 2,000,000 of the 4,000,000 "nein" votes centered in the Catholic districts, chiefly in the Rhineland to the south.

Hence, the campaign will concentrate there in greatest efforts to bring the Catholics into the Nazi fold.

There appeared to be a chance that the banned Catholic Youth Organization would be permitted to appear again, in exchange for assurances that they would abandon opposition to Nazism. Nazi leaders consider the "youth question" played a most important role in the recent troubled concordat negotiations with the Vatican, and some concession to the Catholics on this score was expected.

The other 2,000,000 "nein" voters centered principally in Berlin, Hamburg and other large cities. It was admittedly harder to convince these citizens of the value of Nazi "idealism," leaders said.

Hitler to Act at Once.

Hitler's "measures" regarding this huge element still are shrouded in mystery, but may be expected to come into the open shortly, as tonight's activities around the capital indicated.

The Fuehrer's stern declaration that he intended to take these "measures" at once caused renewed nervousness among families of men recently freed on the government's general amnesty order, following Hitler's ascension to his new power. They fear many who have just returned home may soon be returned to concentration camps.

Meanwhile it was learned the future Nazi penal code may include a revival of the ancient custom of placing a cup of hemlock or a pistol at the disposal of certain offenders, permitting them to commit suicide rather than submit to execution. However, no final decision has been taken by judicial authorities on this suggestion. It was outlined in a

Anti-Jew Riots Stir Lithuania

Headquarters of Semitic Youth Organization Attacked.

Kovno, Lithuania, Aug. 21 (U.P.). Anti-Jewish excesses broke out in Skaulen, Lithuania, tonight, following an attack upon a Gentile chemist by a group of Jewish Fascists. The chemist was badly injured.

In retaliation, a mob raided the city market, beating all Jews found trading there. Simultaneously, headquarters of the Jewish youth organization, "Palestine Pioneers," was raided and several members maltreated.

A new anti-Semitic movement, named the "Verlas," recently was organized at Skaulen, aiming at restraining the Jews in commercial and financial life.

The movement's organ, Tevu, recently announced that the Jews were turning to agriculture in rising numbers, and that in the district of Rossjeney alone hundreds of acres of land had been acquired by Jews, including numerous small farms.

The organ denounced the acquisition of land by Jews, demanding the country put a stop to it.

"Big Bill" Thompson Sued for Unpaid Taxes

Chicago, Aug. 21 (AP).—Cook County took another little chop at its $122,128,599 bill for delinquent personal property taxes today by suing the former Mayor of Chicago, William Hale Thompson, for $6,551. The county assessor said Thompson owed that amount on his 1932 tax bill.

The suit was just one item in a long campaign by State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney to clean up the heap of unpaid taxes. From 50 to 100 similar suits are being filed daily.

30,000 Ask FHA Jobs; Rush Is On

Slightly More Than 500 Win Scramble for Coveted Plums.

Most Workers Accepted on 90-Day Basis as Confusion Rules.

By Robert C. Albright.

The greatest patronage offensive in the history of job-dizzy Washington is being staged in a first floor corridor of the imposing white structure at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, where the Federal Housing Administration has taken temporary hold.

Thirty thousand job seekers, with and without political preferment, already have run the gantlet of information booths and outer offices to file applications for the last of the Arministration's patronage plums. Slightly more than 500 have plucked the coveted fruit.

And the drive is still on, even though the organization, suddenly startled at its own unwieldly growth, has begun to trim sails. Last week 75 workers were let out. Most of the other employes are privately uneasy about their jobs.

Confusion Apparent.

The same confusion of offices and personnel that marked the awkward launching of the NRA and the PWA is again apparent in the Housing Administration's struggles to get under way.

Most successful applicants for jobs receive appointments for only 90 days. Hardly ensconced at filing cabinet, mail desk or typewriter, rumors of retrenchment and release at the end of their three-month tenure has not improved morale.

Uncertainty over jobs in the unit compares with a new sense of security in a number of other agencies affected by new legislation. The new Communications Commission, for example, which had made only temporary reappointments from the old Radio Commission, yesterday placed all such employes on a permanent basis.

Some temporary workers have received little white slips announcing their dismissal without cause, only to be recalled the next day, usually without explanation.

Organization Difficulties Cited.

Officials ascribe the confusion to the usual organization difficulties, while others point to the patronage scramble by Senators and Representatives anxious to grant preelection favors. The unit offers virtually the last chance members of Congress have at job-angling in already overmanned emergency set-ups, and the influential are missing no bets.

Adding to the bedlam is the profusion of bureaus dropped into Postmaster General Farley's new quarters. Everything from the Federal Communications Commission and the Home Owners Loan Corporation to the Bureau of Reclamation and usual postoffice functions has been dumped in the sprawling structure.

In some cases it has been necessary to furnish maps of the building to workers who frequently get lost in the winding corridors. Every day is moving day, and a week seldom passes without numerous shifts in personnel and equipment.

Girl Student Missing After Jump From Auto

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 21 (AP). Missing from her home since last night, Miss Fay New, 19-year-old Howard College senior, was sought tonight by hundreds of persons who combed the countryside northeast of the city. Police believed she had been the victim of foul play.

Miss New went for a ride with a young man last night and police were called in when she failed to return. Detectives questioned her escort at headquarters and quoted him as saying that the girl jumped from his car at midnight with the statement that she would walk home.

Bandits Rob Banks In Georgia, Florida

More Than $4,000 Taken in Two Raids.

Clayton, Ga., Aug. 21 (AP).—Scattering tacks behind them in an effort to shake off pursuers, five bandits today fled through north Georgia after robbing the Bank of Clayton of between $1,200 and $1,500. The bandits fled in the direction of Cornelia with Sheriff L. F. Richman and a posse in pursuit.

P. W. Duckett, cashier, said the men entered the bank about 3 p. m and trained revolvers and a machine gun on Miss Drewilla Bleckley, a clerk, and two customers. Miss Bleckley screamed and the robbers, apparently frightened, left with only the contents of the cash box.

Malone, Fla., Aug. 21 (AP).—Two bandits today robbed the Bank of Malone of $2,700. The pair escaped in an automobile bearing a Georgia license tag. L. H. Bell, cashier, and Miss Bernice Hatton, bookkeeper, were ordered to stand against the wall as the two bandits took all the cash in sight and fled.

NRA Revision Alters Plans of President

Executive Leaves for Rainey Rites; Will Hurry Back; Banking Leaders Pledge Aid in New Housing Program.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Reversing his plans because of the need for further conferences on the future of the NRA, President Roosevelt left Washington early last night with the intention of returning immediately after the funeral of Speaker Rainey at Carrollton, Ill.

Rapidly becoming the most-traveled Chief Executive in history, he boarded a special train at Union Station for a quick round trip to the little farming community, returning tomorrow night. He will remain here until late Saturday before leaving for Hyde Park, N. Y.

Originally, Mr. Roosevelt had planned to proceed to Hyde Park following today's services at Carrollton. But the pressure of business, including the forthcoming reorganization of the NRA, forced him to change his schedule and return to the Capital, the White House explained.

Before taking his departure, Mr. Roosevelt canvassed the Administration's struggle with depression at a joint meeting of the National Emergency and Executive Councils, and received assurances of banker cooperation in the vast new housing program from Francis M. Law, president of the American Bankers Association.

With him on his trip to the Middle West, Mr. Roosevelt took only Assistant Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, Col. Edwin Watson, his military aid; Capt. Wilson Brown, naval aid, and Miss Grace Tully, secretary. No Cabinet member or Government official went with him, but Secretary of Agriculture Wallace may accompany him on the return.

At the meeting of the President's two New Deal councils, Chairman Donald R. Richberg submitted what he termed "a very heartening report on the Government's achievements." He said the report, in the nature of a survey, will be checked further and released by sections for publication.

Denying there is any political

Far Western Man Probable Reserve Head

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt made room yesterday for the probable appointment of a far Westerner as governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

By renaming Adolph Miller as a member of the board from the Richmond District rather than from San Francisco, the President opened speculation that either M. S. Eccles, Utah, special assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, or J. F. T. O'Connor, California, Comptroller of the Currency, would be named to the governorship. Both are Democrats.

Miller, appointed to the board in 1914 by President Wilson, came originally from San Francisco. If a far Westerner was to be named to the board, it was necessary to create a vacancy for that district. Since Miller has been in the Richmond area for many years, it was a simple matter for him to become a resident of the Richmond division.

Thomas Vice Governor.

The President yesterday named J. J. Thomas to be vice governor of the board, at the same time he shifted Miller. One report in this connection was the governorship it-

$50,000,000 in Silver Exported From China

Shanghai, Aug. 21 (AP).—Silver consignments valued at $50,000,000, the heaviest outflow from China this year, were shipped to London and New York over the week-end by Shanghai banks. Since August 1 nearly $100,000,000 in silver has left the country, nearly twice the total of the shipments in the preceding seven months.

The Chinese national government let it be known, when the United States nationalized silver recently, that if an exodus of the metal from China reached alarming proportions an embargo would be placed upon it.

Policy Study Is Welcomed By President

Movement Advanced by National Leaders Not Anti-New Deal.

By Elliott Thurston.

President Roosevelt is aware of and entirely agreeable to the movement under way to form a nonpartisan, nonpolitical group of responsible business, banking and professional leaders of the country for the purpose of focusing constructive thought upon vital questions of government and policy.

For the movement is not designed to be anti-New Deal, but takes its inspiration from a recognition of the fact that a large body of competent opinion exists in this country which at present has no effective medium for expression, politically or otherwise. That the prime movers would be drawn from those Democrats and Republicans who are not in accord with some existing policy and are apprehensive about the future goes without saying.

However, the sponsors for this movement, far from being consciously animated by hostility toward the New Deal, take the position that such efforts as they may be able to make in developing and giving expression to responsible opinion on large questions of public policy are in the interest of the New Deal and its success.

Mr. Roosevelt understands and

Flier Down in Arctic; S O S Requests Rescue

London, Aug. 21 (U.P.).—The British trawler Dervish at 8 o'clock tonight received an S O S from John Grierson, British flier, who left Iceland today for Greenland on the next hop in his survey of a North Atlantic air route linking the British Isles and Canada.

Shortly after the relief call, the trawler reported it received the following message from Grierson: "Ice-free fiord. Safe landing about three miles from the sea, where coast runs east and west. Have food 10 days. Please search."

S. P. C. A. Kills Snake, Halting 'Cruel' Death Duel With Spider

Baltimore, Aug. 21 (AP).—An execution by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals put an end to the death duel of a tiny black spider and a garter snake a thousand times its size in the basement of a Baltimore home.

The conflict had raged for four days when a representative of the society, stopping "this display of cruelty," snipped off the head of the snake. At the time the spider, no bigger than the snake's eye, was nearing a complete conquest of its foot-long enemy.

Dismayed, the little spider, which had the snake securely enmeshed in its web, fled the scene of the killing and had been seen no more.

Under the spreading branches of an oak tree lay the remains of the snake, which met its death in search of a morsel of food—the tiny mite of a spider.

Horace P. Lane, jr., at whose home the duel took place, accused the representative of the humane society of using a "very dull pair of scissors" in beheading the luckless snake. He asserted no less than ten snips were required, the little reptile writhing and twisting violently all the while.

Lane conferred with the society's representative for an hour before the execution was decided upon. The society's agent had camped on the front porch for two hours awaiting Lane's arrival from his office.

"If it had been left to me," Lane said, "the fight could have gone on until it reached its natural conclusion. But there were other members of the family who didn't like the publicity, and who didn't like the snake either. However, I was fond of the snake and was sorry to see it go."

By Franklyn Waltman, jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday put a bottom in the cotton market when he instructed the RFC's Commodity Grain Corporation to lend planters 12 cents a pound on low middling cotton, or better, which is and has been continuously in their possession. This corporation last fall loaned 10 cents a pound on cotton.

The President's action in effect pegged cotton for this year at a minimum price of 12 cents a pound, about 1½ cents less than the prevailing spot price yesterday.

This Government loan figure is from 1 to 3 cents a pound less than the sum proposed by Senate farm leaders in recent days, consequently it is bound to be a disappointment to those who visualized Government action to force the price to 15 cents.

Acts Before Leaving.

Mr. Roosevelt acted late in the day just before leaving for Illinois to attend the funeral of the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey, and as the threatened textile strike was assuming more serious proportions. With a strike of some 300,000 cotton textile workers scheduled to take place before September 1, New Deal agencies worked quietly to bring about a settlement, but up to last night no plan for a compromise had crystalized.

Pegging the minimum price of cotton at 12 cents a pound was regarded as directly connected with the textile strike threat. Should this strike materialize, mills in all probability would abruptly cease purchasing cotton until their troubles were adjusted. Coming at a time when this year's cotton crop is moving to market, such action would have a seriously depressing effect on cotton prices, it is believed.

Under the President's order the cotton planter now has the alternative of selling at the current price of borrowing 12 cents a pound on it, with the intention of waiting for a price better than the 13.65 cents which prevailed at New York yesterday.

Planter Protected.

Should cotton prices fall below 12 cents a pound and remain below that figure, the cotton planter will be protected and the government will have to shoulder the loss. Should the price remain at 13.55 cents or advance higher, the planter could sell his cotton, pay off the Government and pocket the added profit.

Meanwhile Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, last night announced that the Government's corn loans of 45 cents a bushel, which matured this month, would be extended to January 1, provided an extension agreement was entered into by October 1 and the borrowers agree to provide satisfactory storage for the corn until March 1 next, without cost to the Government.

The Commodity Credit Corporation made these loans and is now holding about 186,000,000 bushels of corn. No new loans will be made and the purpose of the extension, Mr. Davis said, is to make possible "the orderly liquidation of the stocks now held under the Government loans." The plan of extension provides as needs become manifest that the Government retain such corn the borrower does not need

Bewildered Man, Deserted by Wife, Is Bane to Police

The blow that fate struck William Slingland when his wife of fourteen years deserted him last Thursday has left him like a man in a dream.

Dazed, desperate, insensible to all things except the loss that he has suffered, Slingland has become a bane to District police. After her disappearance he went to Tidal Basin and left note on the bank saying he had committed suicide. Yesterday he tried to convince detectives that his son had been kidnaped.

Slingland lives at 210 C street. When there were more jobs he was a housewrecker. When his wife departed he was just one of the jobless.

Night before last he asked Capt. B. W. Thompson, assistant chief of detectives, to search all the rooming houses in Washington. Then, because his wife has a brother in Baltimore he wanted the search extended there. Capt. Thompson could do nothing for him, so he turned up later with the story that his 12-year-old boy, William, had been kidnaped. Investigation disclosed the boy had been to the movies

Board Orders Reinstatement Of Donovan

"Interference" Criticized.

Gen. Johnson's discharge of Donovan, the board argued, could not be construed as an attempt to stamp out unionism in NRA.

"Upon all the facts," the board added, "we think it fair to conclude that Gen. Johnson's objection was not to the union, but to being bothered by the union's delegations and that his discharge of Donovan was not a conscious and deliberate attempt to cripple the self-organization of his employes."

Failure of Gen. Johnson to treat with the union on the discharge of the stencil cutter amounted, the decision said, to "improper interference with union activity."

Reinstatement of the union president, the board ruled, could not be "a happy outcome" for either side. The board explained, however, that Mr. Donovan's conduct had not been such as to warrant denying him the protection of the law and "the law and its purposes would become a dead letter were reinstatement not to follow."

Job Open for Him, Says Peck.

The statement of Dr. Peck follows in full:

"The National Labor Relations Board has ruled that John L. Donovan should be reinstated to his former position on the staff of the Labor Advisory Board of the NRA. Donovan will find his job if he reports for duty.

"This will be done without in any way subscribing to the Labor Board's conclusions, which its own arguments do not support.

"Donovan was an employe of the Government of the United States and not of Gen. Johnson. The question the Labor Board had to answer was whether the excuse of acting as a representative of other employes justifies the head of a delegation in departing from the ordinary respect due the head of a public agency and in obstructing Government work.

"In private industry, it is usually assumed that discharge of a union leader is for the purpose of breaking the union. The record is clear that Gen. Johnson threw open the gates to the organization of workers in the NRA and in no way interfered with their activities. The Labor Board specifically recognizes that Gen. Johnson had no such intention. The board must have been primarily influenced by the possible effect of this decision upon cases in private industry.

"Union leaders have told me that they themselves, in their official capacities as union presidents, would never have tolerated such conduct as Donovan's from any employes of their own.

"So far as Donovan personally is concerned, I repeat his job is here, but he will have to toe the mark, and he will have to understand that some of the acts tolerated from him in the past will no longer be borne.

"As always in the past, workers on the staff of the Labor Advisory Board will be judged by thir ability, with no regard to affiliation with any organization. Union affiliation or office will not grant immunity to any member of the staff to conduct himself in a manner unworthy of public trust."

Babcock Voices Elation.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, of which the NRA union is a branch, expressed satisfaction with the decision.

"We are elated," he said, "because, first, the decision vindicates Donovan; because, secondly, it definitely recognizes the right of Government employes to unionize and present grievances to superior officers without penalty to the members of a delegation; because, thirdly, it is a practical step toward the establishment of a board of appeals with jurisdiction to override the arbitrary actions of officials.

"The A. F. G. E. desires to express its thanks to the attorneys, L. Harold Sothron and John Kennedy, who so ably conducted the case, and to all the local and central bodies of the American Federation of Labor, who so effectively supported the A. F. G. E. We are sincerely appreciative of the splendid, impartial attitude of the National Labor Relations Board."

John A. Finnerty, of counsel for Mr. Donovan, was enthusiastic over the ruling.

"The decision speaks for itself," he commented. "No other opinion was possible on the record. It is a complete vindication of Mr. Donovan's efficiency and character and the best answer to the unsworn statement of Gen. Johnson. The decision also is a vindication of the right of Government employes to organize for their own protection and to be treated according to ordinary union principles."

The Donovan case was accompanied by a fanfare of publicity due to consideration of the dismissal by many Washington organizations. The Commerce Department was picketed for several weeks by persons friendly to Mr. Donovan.

Treasury Tax Levy Appealed by Mellon

By error, The Post stated in its Sunday issue that the Board of Tax Appeals had charged that Mr. Andrew Mellon, of Pittsburgh, had underpaid his 1931 income tax by $1,319,080, and assessed a $659,540 penalty.

The article should have said that it was the Treasury which charged this underpayment, and had assessed the penalty, and that Mr. Mellon had appealed to the Board of Tax Appeals.

Union Activity Held to Be Responsible for His Discharge.

On June 18, 1934, effective June 30, 1934, John L. Donovan, who had been serving as president of the NRA union affiliated with the American Federation of Government Employes, was discharged by Gen. Johnson from his position as technical adviser to the Labor Advisory Board.

This discharge precipitated a controversy in which the Government maintained that Donovan had been discharged for inefficiency and other sufficient reasons, while Donovan and the union asserted that he had been discharged for union activity.

After a considerable history, which it is unnecessary to recount, Gen. Johnson, the union and Mr. Donovan submitted the case to this board for arbitration, and agreed to abide by its rulings. The board, after endeavoring unsuccesfully to find some other impartial agency acceptable to all parties for the purposes of arbitration, concluded that it should serve.

On August 10, 1934, it held a public hearing, at which testimony was presented by both sides, supplemented later by a written statement from Gen. Johnson and certain letters endorsing Mr. Donovan's character and efficiency.

Union Activity Held To Be Responsible.

After reviewing all of the evidence, we are satisfied that the controlling reason for Donovan's discharge was his conduct as the head of a delegation of union employes which met on June 18 in the anteroom of Gen. Johnson's office, pursuant to a noon appointment with the General. The conduct complained of was as follows. The delegation met (punctually, according to the union; a half-hour or so ahead of time, according to the Government's witnesses) in the anteroom, and occupied all of the chairs and most of the space. The delegation was unnecessarily large, consisting of 13 persons.

When told that Gen. Johnson was not in and that another appointment could not then be made, the delegation insisted upon waiting until such an appointment was made. The delegation remained until 1 o'clock, although requested by Gen. Johnson's receptionist, by Dr. Peck, chief of staff of the Labor Advisory Board, and by Col. Lynch, administrative officer of NRA, to leave. Before leaving, Donovan wrote and left with Gen. Johnson's secretary a note to the general, which was signed by the delegation, and which read substantially as follows: "The union has waited in this matter for one month. The union will wait 24 hours for an appointment."

Interview Sequel to Reinstatement Demand.

The first sentence of this note had reference to the subject matter of the appointment—the desired reinstatement of one Mrs. Luke, a stencil-cutter, who had been discharged some time previously under circumstances which the union had regarded as unjust.

Gen. Johnson, at Donovan's request, had previously directed the chief clerk to try to take care of Mrs. Luke by getting her an equivalent job in some other Government department, but this had fallen through, and the union's subsequent and repeated interviews with the chief clerk and several other officials had, at least so far as the union was aware, failed to produce any results.

Several hours after the meeting in the anteroom, which has been noted, Gen. Johnson sent for Donovan and, in the presence of Dr. Peck, Col. Lynch and two others, informed him that he was discharged for inefficiency, inattention to duty, unauthorized absence from duty and insubordination; or words to that effect. So far as the record discloses, the only particulars which the general gave were that Dr. Peck considered Donovan's work mediocre; that Dr. Wolman, of the Labor Advisory Board, had expressed dissatisfaction with his work, and that on several occasions he had been absent from duty without leave.

Dr. Peck Gives His Version of Discharge.

These particulars had been gathered by Gen. Johnson from Dr. Peck immediately prior to the announcement of Donovan's discharge. The general, upon returning to his office and learning of the events in the anteroom, had sent for Dr. Peck, inquired into Donovan's qualifications, and then sent for Donovan to discharge him. The record compels us to conclude that the general had made up his mind to discharge Donovan for his conduct that day, provided there were other grounds for discharge, and that he had sent for Dr. Peck to inquire whether there were such grounds.

Dr. Peck, when asked what he considered to be the basis for the discharge, testified: "The best way I can make it out is something like this: That the immediate reasons for the general's dissatisfaction with Donovan were the activities of that day * * * in crowding of the office * * * insubordination, the refusal to get out when the general's immediate assistants asked him to, and so on * * *"

In the general's interview with Peck, "the first thing he asked me was whether I knew about all this running around through Government offices on Government time and I said I had observed it and that, that morning, sensing that the thing was getting completely out of hand, I went to see President Green about it."

Johnson Phone Call To Babcock Described.

Having talked with Dr. Peck and before summoning Donovan, Gen. Johnson telephoned Mr. Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, who testified that "he (Gen. Johnson) proceeded to tell me that the union down there was in unfortunate hands, that they were bringing photographers in there, that they were proceeding by many ways to clutter up his office, to make his work more difficult and other things along the same line;" after which he explained that Dr. Peck had recommended that Donovan be discharged for inefficiency, &c., and that he wanted Babcock to hear Dr. Peck further explain the matter over the telephone. Dr. Peck substantially corroborated Babcock's testimony.

Members of the union delegation, which secured an interview with Gen. Johnson immediately after Donovan's discharge, to ascertain the reasons why, testified among other things that Gen. Johnson said to them:

"You have been running up and down the hall wasting a lot of Government time on union activities, and I have had about all my pride will stand for. I am sick of this business * * * this running around on Government time and disturbing everybody."

Gen. Johnson's own statement, after describing the events in the anteroom, goes on to say that "his (Donovan's) behavior demonstrated to me his unfitness for public service or any part in an emergency organization such as NRA. I then called Dr. Peck, his immediate superior, to obtain his opinion as to the value of Donovan's services in other respects."

Fortunately, it is not necessary for us to attempt to weigh the quality of Donovan's services. As against the opinions of Dr. Peck and Dr. Wolman, upon which Gen. Johnson was of course entitled to rely, there is evidence, some of it impressive, from men of standing and judgment who had official contact with Donovan, that his work was of a high order.

Whatever the true estimate may be, we are satisfied that had it not been for the ocurrence of June 18 Donovan would not have been discharged at that time and might never have been discharged. Dr. Peck himself testified that he had said to Gen. Johnson "definitely" that Donovan was "not the worst man on the staff." He also testified that some time in December, after consultation with Dr. Wolman, he had prepared a list of men to be discharged when the work sufficiently slackened to justify, and that Donovan's name was on the list. But another man on the list is still employed, and the discharges which occurred took place (with one exception, which occurred on June 25) at least two weeks prior to Donovan's dismissal by Gen. Johnson on June 18.

Dr. Peck, as the administrative head of the Labor Advisory Board and responsible for its personnel, ordered all of the discharges himself, except that of Donovan, and there is no evidence that he would have discharged Donovan. Apart from his opinion of Donovan's work, which was not very critical, the few absences from duty which he reported to Gen. Johnson at their interview "may," he said, "have occurred prior to December;" his relationship with Donovan had been "reasonably cordial," and he knew of no "insubordination" apart from what had transpired on the day of the discharge.

Doubt Union Conduct Merited Discharge.

If then, the controlling reason for Donovan's discharge was his conduct on June 18, did that conduct justify his discharge? We do not think so. It is true that the note to Gen. Johnson demanding another appointment within 24 hours was injudicious and needlessly provocative; and that the delegation was unnecessarily large and should have left when asked to do so after it was apparent that the general could not keep the appointment. From the union's point of view, on the other hand, the case of Mrs. Luke had been dragging for a month since her discharge, which had become effective two weeks previously; the union was genuinely convinced that her discharge had been unjust and improper; that none of the officials had succeeded in restoring Mrs. Luke to employment, and that unless a firm and immediate stand were taken nothing would ever be done.

The delegation also believed that since Gen. Johnson's secretary had given them their previous appointment, she could give them another, and that her unwillingness to do so justified them in insisting peremptorily that such an appointment be made. With these allowances the conduct of the delegation, and of Donovan as its leader, still remains open to criticism.

Gen. Johnson was justified in resenting the conduct, but his action in discharging Donovan forthwith without any attempt to work out, either directly or through other officials, some more satisfactory procedure for the handling of union grievances, seems to us to have been an unjustified interference with his employes' right of self-organization.

June Meeting Held To Be Significant.

It is true that Gen. Johnson seems not to have been opposed to the existence of the union, and that his discharge of Donovan can not be construed as a conscious attempt to stamp out unionism in the NRA. Gen. Johnson, in fact, had had little to do with the union.

In December, shortly after the formation of the union, he had conferred with a large delegation on the subject of overtime, and had taken steps, as a result of the conference, to bring about an improvement in conditions. So far as the record discloses, his only other contact with the union, outside of the day of Donovan's discharge, was a meeting with Donovan around the first of June. This meeting is not without significance. Donovan and two others, as a delegation, had waited on the general to discuss the Luke matter. The general insisted upon seeing Donovan alone. Donovan declined to go in without the two other members of the delegation, and as he was leaving Gen. Johnson sent for him to come back "as an employe."

Donovan went back alone and saw the general. The general, while asserting that he was talking to Donovan as an employe, proceeded to discuss the Luke matter with him. The union believed, and maintained at the hearing, that Gen. Johnson's conduct on this occasion indicated his hostility to union activity as such, and his desire to deal with his employes as employes, and not as representatives of the union. The record does not compel so strong an inference, but the suspicions around in the union are understandable, and undoubtedly influenced the action of the union on June 18.

Improper Interference With Union Suggested.

Immediately prior to Donovan's discharge, but just after it had been decided upon, General Johnson in his talk with Mr. Babcock assured him that he had no objection to the union as such, nor to the expansion of its membership in the NRA. Upon all of the facts, we think it fair to conclude that Gen. Johnson's objection was not to the union, but to being bothered by the union's delegations, and that his discharge of Donovan was not a conscious and deliberate attempt to cripple the self-organization of his employes.

But the case must be judged objectively; and it is clear that General Johnson's action on the 18th, following upon his previous refusal to deal with Donovan except as an employe, must be considered in its effects, whatever the subjective intent, as a blow to legitimate union activities. Where the normal processes of presenting grievances to an employer are checked, if not destroyed, by the peremptory discharge of the union leader without warning, without even the suggestion of some alternative administrative procedure for handling grievances, and following upon refusal to meet a delegation in its representative capacity, we feel constrained to hold that such action amounts to an improper interference with union activity.

In deciding this case, we can adopt no other standard than that of Section 7(a) of the Recovery Act, and must consider the case as though we were dealing with an employer to whom Section 7(a) applied. It may be asserted that, in the public interest, the NRA should have a wider discretion than ordinary employers in discharging employes. On the other hand, it may also be asserted that when the NRA is engaged in compelling employers to observe strictly the provisions of Section 7(a), it should, in dealing with its own employes, carry out the purposes of that section with even more scrupulous care than might be expected of ordinary employers. The Board is confident that in any event the NRA would not wish to be guided by any standard less exacting than that which applies to industry under the codes.

Letter of Law Calls For Reinstatement.

If this case had involved an employer subject to Section 7 (a), the board would have held, upon the facts submitted, that, whether intentionally or not, he had violated the provisions of Section 7 (a), and that by way of restitution the discharged employe should be re reinstated, unless he had committed acts subsequent to his discharge which entitled him to no further consideration. It has been urged upon us that regardless of the light in which Donovan's discharge may be viewed, his subsequent conduct should disqualify him from reinstatement.

Within an hour after his discharge, Donovan issued an abusive press release, attacking Gen. Johnson and his labor policies. We do not condone the release, but it must be said, first, that the release was issued in the heat of emotion, following upon what Donovan believed to be an unwarranted act of injustice both to himself and to the union, and, secondly, that upon Donovan's discharge, Gen. Johnson also issued a press release, stating that Donovan's discharge was "for inefficiency, inattention to duty, unauthorized absence from duty and insubordination," thus publicly casting reflection upon Donovan's character.

Some time later, when picketing in front of the Commerce Building took place, Donovan bought the placards and the paint for the use of the pickets. He denied having prepared the placards, which contained personal attacks on Gen. Johnson. Still later Donovan presided at a union meeting which indorsed the picketing. There was evidence also of certain telegrams attacking Gen. Johnson, sent by a committee for the reinstatement of Donovan, and designed to hamper Gen. Johnson's recent mediation efforts in San Francisco and Chicago, but it is not proved that Donovan had any connection with these telegrams.

Wisdom of Renewed Contact Questioned.

Under all the circumstances the board has concluded that Donovan should be reinstated. An employer who has been at fault must accept some share of the responsibility for precipitating a struggle which, in the nature of things, can not be altogether polite. More important, when Donovan was discharged, and until the case was finally submitted to arbitration, there existed no method by which he could obtain redress. Unlike the private employe protected by section 7 (a), there was no tribunal to which Donovan could resort. His activities must be weighed in the light of that fact. Conduct more temperate might have been expected of him if he had not had to rely on the methods of agitation alone.

Reinstatement, especially where the employe's position calls for daily contact with his superiors and for mutual confidence, can not always be a happy outcome for either side, but where the employer had been first at fault and the employe's subsequent canduct, in the light of the circumstances, has not been such as to warrant denying him the protection of the law, the law and its purposes would become a dead letter were reinstatement not to follow. The agencies which are administering the law should in their own dealings uphold its purposes.

The board, therefore, rules that John L. Donovan should be immediately reinstated to his former position on the staff of the Labor Advisory Board.

Bandits Get $427,000 in Bank Car Raid

truck and its crew and the precision with which the daring holdup was carried off made it one of the most sensational in criminal annals here.

Two men dressed like laborers were loitering before the Rubel Ice Plant at Bay Nineteenth street when the money truck stopped for a $25,000 collection to be taken to the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

No sooner had Joseph Allen, driver, and John Wilson, guard, dismounted, when the "icemen" lifted an old automobile seat atop their pushcart and exposed a machine gun trained directly at them.

"Say a word and this spits," shouted one of the bandits.

At the same time two automobiles drove up and disgorged more bandits and more machine guns.

They made such an impressive threat that witnesses in the confusion were uncertain just how many bandits there were and how many machine guns they carried. The men numbered probably a dozen, the witnesses agreed.

William Lillienthal, third member of the truck crew, had got as far as the door of the plant when the hold-up occurred. One of the bandits ran up, jammed a machine gun against his back and drew Lillienthal's revolver from his shoulder holster.

An office employe grabbed a telephone. The bandit snatched it away and yanked it out by the wires.

"March out," he ordered Lillienthal.

Meanwhile, four other men entered the truck and transferred the money bags to their own automobiles.

The whole thing took three minutes.

The gang scrambled aboard the three automobiles and sped away. The armored truck immediately gave chase, but was easily outdistanced.

One of the bandits had dropped his machine gun. Lillienthal picked it up, accidentally obliterating the finger prints, and blazed away at the fleeing bandits, but to no apparent effect.

From the story of Mrs. Caroline Bannister, a tennis professional who witnessed the robbery, it appeared carefully planned and that the pushcart bandits had waited for their quarry about four hours. There are tennis courts nearby.

"I was playing on Court No. 1 from 9 to 11 a. m.," she related. "A man with a pushcart appeared shortly after I started and watched the game, looking through the wire screen.

"I thought it funny, a pushcart man should be so interested in tennis, but I never guessed he had a machine gun hidden in the cart.

Players Warned.

"There was another man watching, who I hear was in the holdup. He had no pushcart. At 11 o'clock moved to an inside court and at 1 o'clock one of the men employed here ran in and said: 'Everybody down, down on the ground, there's a holdup.'

"There were about eight of us on the courts, and we all dropped without knowing what was happening. Then there was a rear of autos down the street and we learned the details."

If the bandits had waited until the armored truck crew had made their collection from the ice plant, they would have found $25,000 more in the truck.

These armored cars are familiar sights on New York streets. Twenty-five of them transport an average of $19,000,000 cash a day, according to Reserve Bank officials.

They collect from banks in the Federal Reserve System and from the larger stores and manufacturing plants.

Work by Sealed Orders.

A conductor, a driver and a guard work under sealed orders with no previous knowledge of the collection route. These sealed route orders are entrusted only to the conductor.

The police pursuit comprised the dispatch of every available automobile and motorcycle crew to guard all exits from the Borough of Brooklyn.

The three bridges between Brooklyn and Manhattan and the one between Manhattan and Queens, which adjoins Brooklyn on the north, were intensely guarded. Police were ordered to halt all cars traveling in pairs.

Soon a big sedan which had been used in the holdup was found abandoned on the waterfront.

At the same time it was learned that two speedboats near there had gone.

Chief Inspector Lewis J. Valentine ordered his aviation arm into action with orders to cruise over the bay and hunt for the two craft.

Two boys, gave police the information about the boats. They saw them pull up at the pier there.

Then two men came running from a lumber yard, they said. Several other men were waiting there. Several white bags, which might have been those containing cash, were tossed in, the men jumped aboard and pushed off.

Police flashed the alarm:

"Be on the lookout for two boats, one a cabin cruiser with mahogany raised deck and a white hull from 32 to 38 feet long, and a brown speedboat, 30 feet long. They may be either single or traveling together."

Woman Burned In Bed Succumbs

Her Rescue by Passerby Proves Futile.

Snatched from a burning bed yesterday morning, Mrs. Margarette Roberts, 50, of 1101 Ninth street northwest, suffered burns which caused her death last night at Emergency Hospital.

An unidentified colored man saw smoke curling from Mrs. Roberts' first-floor apartment and, breaking in the door, pulled her from her bed, which was blazing. She was burned on the legs, arms and body. Damage to the apartment was slight. Detectives were assigned to investigate the origin of the fire.

Policy Study Is Wecomed By President

Movement Advanced by National Leaders Not Anti-New Deal.

appreciates this attitude. Hence, interpretations that such a movement is inimical to the New Deal certainly would not square with the conceptions of the interested leaders.

The existence of the now-forming organization was confirmed by Senator Glass, of Virginia, in a brief comment given to the Richmond Times-Dispatch when The Washington Post's article of Monday morning outlining the movement was brought to his notice.

"There is such a movement to bring this Administration back nearer to Democratic fundamentals," the Virginia Senator was quoted as saying. "I am not taking any active part in it. Everybody already knows I am opposed to certain phases of the New Deal."

Seek Practical Results.

Those leaders who have interested themselves in the movement do not appear to regard their objective as one which can be stated in terms of political parties or labels. They are not concerned with whether the policy pursued by the Government is Democratic, Republican, Socialist, Liberal, Conservative, or whatnot. They profess to be occupied entirely with practical results—not with labels. Workability, not terminology, is the test they would apply.

And by such a test, they appear to feel, some existing policy needs correction, much more needs clarification and, above all, the course which the country is steering needs to be more definitely charted and widely comprehended, particularly if there is to be a revival of private enterprise such as they believe indispensable to a sound, normal recovery.

Their idea evidently is that an impressively large body of experienced, authoritative opinion exists in this country which has been relatively voiceless in the development and formulation of existing policies—which still lacks an effective medium for affording whatever counsel and guidance it is capable of offering in arriving at all-important decisions on matters of great national moment.

Not Viewed as Unfriendly.

That Mr. Roosevelt would not regard such a purpose as unfriendly toward him or his Administration; that he would, on the contrary, welcome the expression of opinion thus afforded, as of assistance to him, was therefore to be expected. How effective such a movement can be, how much it may be able to do in channelling and focusing responsible opinion, under the conceptions stated, can hardly be foreseen.

From the standpoint of politics—which the prime movers emphatically disavow—such a movement might accelerate the long-predicted realignments which have been strongly indicated this year by the New Deal's disposition to absorb progressive Republican elements and alienate Eastern Democratic elements. However, that possibility is only in the minds of the interested leaders as something to combat if attempts are made to represent the movement as a "conservative" coalition with political objectives.

The conception, at any rate, is distinctly removed from that end and aim. It rests on the assumption that what is the soundest course for the country, what policies will best promote recovery, are essentially questions of fact, of experience, of theb est available human judgment—not primarily matters of mere political opinion, or theory, however labeled. And it assumes, further, that incidentally what will produce the best results for the country—what is in fact workable—is the best politics for any government.

Speakership Candidates to Be Numerous

The fight for the post of Speaker, made vacant by the death of Henry T. Rainey, probably will be a hot one, with numerous candidates. Above are shown, left—Representative Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, who became dean of the House upon the death of Rainey, and Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, prominently mentioned for the Speakership. Below are Representatives John E. Problems of NRA Revision Alter Plans of Roosevelt significance to the fact that the review comes at a time the New Deal is being questioned in many parts of the country. Mr. Richberg admitted smilingly that "if the Republicans want facts for an answer," the report will supply them. Material for the survey has been gathered from all the recovery agencies.

Reorganization of the NRA is understood to involve the consolidation of the 500 codes already signed into 22 groupings under 11 divisions. These would be administered by five members of a board, each with one "sector" under his jurisdiction. This has been called an "army" type organization, apparently pleasing to Gen Johnson.

Johnson Expected As Chief.

President Roosevelt is expected to designate Gen. Johnson as head of the new board, at least until the organization has been effected. Plans for the reorganization, including a wholesale review of codes to eliminate inconsistencies, have been under way for weeks, and it was emphasized the present scheme may be altered.

As outlined tentatively, however, the first "sector" would embrace producing industries divided into four divisions—food, textiles, basic materials and chemicals. The second would involve equipment industries, with three divisions—equipment, arts and crafts, and construction.

The third grouping would cover public utilities, broken up into public utilities, finance and commerce, and professions and services. Distribution trades would make up "sector four," while the fifth sector would handle field administration. Each "sector" would be under an assistant administrator.

Speaking on behalf of the banking fraternity, Mr. Law said he told the President that in the judgment of the American Bankers Association both industrial loans and modernization loans under the housing act are "sound and useful." He promised every effort to encourage cooperation of the bankers with both programs of the Government.

Mr. Law and others accompanying him were assured by the President, they said, that he would address the convention of the bankers' association, meeting here October 22 to 25. The others calling at the Whtie House were Rudolph Hecht, of New Orleans, first vice president, and Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank of Washington, second vice president.

Approves Cuban Treaty.

Continuing his whirlwind pace, the President also approved the signing of the Cuban trade treaty Friday afternoon, and discussed National and international affairs at luncheon with Sir Henri Deterding, chairman of the Royal Dutch Shell Oil Co., and James A. Moffett, Federal Housing Administrator.

Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles informed him of the status of the Cuban treaty, which will be the first agreement negotiated under the reciprocal tariff act. Sir Henri said he congratulated the President on the Administration's silver program, which he held "must" improve world trade.

The automobile route runs through Viareggion, where the former Empress Zita of Austria is staying.

Rumors that Hapsburg rule might be restored in Austria with the benign consent of the foreign powers have been current lately in Europe, but have been constantly denied here.

Count Ciano, son-in-law of the Premier and head of the Italian press bureau, said the name of the claimant to the throne—Archduke Otto—had not even been mentioned today and that there was no truth to the rumor that Schuschnigg would visit Zita.

During the time Schuschnigg and Mussolini talked in Villa de Marinis, they agreed not only as to the aims they will pursue jointly but the methods to be adopted.

The official communique failed to give details of the "methods," but Count Ciano contributed some enlightment.

Asked what the term implied in the case of emergencies such as that when former Chancellor Dollfuss was slain, he said:

"Well, we found the method then, when we sent troops to the border. The method must be determined by the need."

Stromboli Erupts, Menacing Island

Crater Near Mainland of Italy Perils 1,800.

Tropea, Italy, Aug. 21 (AP).—A red scar of flaming rock seethed tonight high on the eastern side of Stromboli volcano, while anxious mainlanders 35 miles away on the southern Italian coast awaited news of damage from this morning's eruption.

Fishing craft, which left here to offer succor to the 1,800 population of the little island dominated by the volcano, were bringing back the news.

The eruption came with two gigantic thunder-like claps easily heard on the Italian shore. Molten lava then began to pour through a cleft on the eastern rim of the cone.

No further explosions were heard, but mainlanders who have grown up in the shadow of the "Lighthouse of the Mediterranean" said flecks of fire and great blooms of smoke visible tonight betokened exceptional activity within the crater.

G. O. P. Spurns Joint Debate In Campaign

Hastings Sees No Value in Plan; Says Audience Would Be Biased.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Hastings of Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, yesterday declined a proposal of Senator Lewis of Illinois, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Committee, for a joint debate on campaign issues.

"The Democratic party in the past 18 months, has made the issues and we propose to hold their feet to the fire," Hastings said in a letter to Lewis.

"No joint debate which we could inaugurate would be of any particular value unless we could start with an unbiased audience," Hastings added.

"You know and I know that the Democratic organization, as well as the Republican organization, would immediately upon the announcement of such a debate at any particular place, prepare to fill the assembly rooms with the adherents of their particular speaker.

"In these days, with so many Democrats employed by the Government, a mere suggestion of the Democratic political boss would send them headlong to such a meeting and they would occupy a large part of the front part of the hall.

"You suggest that the questions raised are the constitutionality of legislative measures, the destruction of personal liberty in business and in private property, a general destruction of the whole basis of the form of American Government and the overthrow of the established institutions of America.

"I agree that these are important issues, but the campaign is by no means limited to them.

"The repudiation by the President and the Democratic Congress of the party pledges such as sound money, reduction in Federal expenses by 25 per cent, balancing the budget, reduction in tariff, increasing the public debt to an alarming amount, increasing the number of Federal employes by more than 100,000 without regard to merit, and in many instances for purely personal purposes, as well as many other things, will be issues in this campaign."

discourage the never-ending line of unemployed. It reads:

"All Positions Filled.

"Applications accepted only for possible future vacancies."

At the office of T. B. Hewitt, who is at least the third official assigned to personnel direction since the unit was organized, a distinction is made between "jobs" and "positions."

All "key positions" are cleared through Administrator Moffett's office "upstairs," it was explained, while ordinary "jobs" are handled by Mr. Hewitt.

Credentials and letters from Democrats who count are necessary to get even a "job," but officials insist ability and merit determine selection in all cases.

Although retrenchment is now the personnel watchword of the organization, a fresh rush for jobs is likely in a few weeks when the Administration gets started on mortgage insurance. Several hundred more employes may be needed to handle that work.

Manila Lifts Eyebrows At 'Premature' Minister

Manila, Philippine Islands, Aug. 21 (AP).—The words "minister plenipotentiary" on the card of China's new consul general, Tsoong Lung Dunn, caused an official lifting of eyebrows here today, since Philippine independence is at least a decade distant.

It was hinted that Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy might ask an explanation. Official circles understood that if asked Dunn would reply that he holds ministerial rank in China's diplomatic service because of posts he has previously held, although he is not pretending to exercise ministerial functions in Manila.

self might be left open for some time, to avoid possible political or other disputes about the appointment.

Speculation over the governorship nevertheless centered closely around the names of Eccles and O'Connor, with one official giving it as his opinion, though not certain knowledge, that Eccles is to get the job.

The naming of Eccles would mean that the reserve board, often labeled as conservative in money matters, would be headed by one said to have liberal and even experimental ideas about finance.

Eccles had an important hand in advising on the financial side of the housing bill, through which officials hope virtually to revolutionize the real estate security market.

O'Connor's opinions are less well known, but one informed source said he was certainly "more conservative" than Eccles.

Black on Field Liaison.

The appointment takes on added significance in view of the monetary situation. Eugene R. Black, who resigned as Governor a few days ago, is acting for the President as an informal liaison officer out among the bankers of the Nation.

There has been some criticism of bankers for what is described as their failure to make loans, and Black's job was to interpret the Administration's plans to them, and in turn advise the Administration.

The Presidential reappointments today became known after Miller had visited the White House. He has claimed no particular party affiliation, and was a friend of former President Hoover as well as of President Roosevelt. He was a member of Roosevelt's Supper Club when the latter was Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Thomas, some times described as the farmers' member, was powerful politically in Nebraska at the time of his appointment to the board by Roosevelt.

Widow of Slain Policeman Found

Mrs. Sartor Vanished After Fatal Accident.

Oklahoma City, Aug. 21 (AP).—Brother officers of Elmer Sartor, 28, motorcycle policeman, injured fatally while escorting Postmaster General James A. Farley, conducted a successful search today for his grief-stricken widow.

Dazed and weeping, the young woman, whose romance with Sartor dated from their childhood in an orphanage, was found beside a brook in Edgemere Park here after a disappearance of more than five hours.

"I can't stand it," she said as she was taken home, still clad in the pajamas she wore when she wandered away at 5 a. m. She is an expectant mother.

Sartor's motorcycle, preceding the Postmaster General's automobile on a trip from Oklahoma City to the Kansas border, locked a wheel and fell on him yesterday near Ponca City, Okla.

Alexandria Boy Club Backers To Meet Today

Tillman R. Braddy to Preside at Organization of Group.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 533.

Tillman R. Braddy, of Washington, will preside at a meeting in the Richmond Theater from 10 a. m. until noon today, for the purpose of organizing a boys' club. A number of Alexandria business men are sponsoring the movement, the club being for boys ranging in age from 8 to 16 years, as junior charter members, and from 17 to 25 as senior charter members.

Addresses will be delivered by T. C. Williams, superintendent of schools; Capt. John S. Arnold, of the Alexandria police; the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and Dan S. Hollenga, business manager of the Chamber of Commerce.

The club, according to Mr. Braddy, will be nonsectarian. A social program and summer camp are planned, and after the organization is effected quarters will be arranged for the club operated six days a week.

Awards will be made at today's meeting and a number of stunts arranged. Parents of the boys are invited.

Marine Reserves Back.

Company D, First Battalion, Sixth Marine Reserves, of Alexandria, which has spent two weeks in training at Quantico Marine Base, has returned and, acording to Lieut. Martin D. Delaney, commanding, made an enviable record. It was selected as one of the units to participate in a field problem, and captured two prizes in the annual field day exercises.

The company plans to participate in the parade of the National Firemen's Association Labor Day.

A. W. Petersilia, FERA project engineer for Alexandria and Arlington County, has been named to serve in a similar capacity for Fairfax County, the appointment being made through the Fredericksburg office for the Third District, which includes this territory. Mr. Petersilia has already assumed his new duties.

An automobile collision involving three cars occurred yesterday at the intersection of Washington and Prince streets, Alexandria. The machines were driven by Joseph F. Walsh, 710 North Washington street; C. S. Monroe, 107 West Walnut street, and Mrs. Mary Copenhaver, 505 Girault avenue, Virginia Highlands, Arlington County. None of the occupants were injured.

Fractures Leg in Fall.

Perry Quick, 32, of 1426 Duke street, Alexandria, while walking near the pumphouse of the Alexandria Water Co., fell and fractured his leg. He was taken to the Alexandria hospital in the ambulance of the Fire Rescue Squad and his leg set.

Jacob Rose, 64, retired merchant, died yesterday at his home, 101 North Alfred street, after an illness of several years. He is survived by these children: Mrs. B. B. Ezrine, Mrs. Joseph Stearman and Harry W. Rose, Alexandria; Frank E. Rose and Mrs. Florence Goldstein, Washington, and Samuel E. Rose, Detroit, Mich.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow from the Danzansky funeral home, Washington, and interment will be in Alexandria.

Funeral services for Edward L. Simpson, who died Monday, will be conducted at 3 p. m. today at the residence, 529 South Patrick street, by the Rev. Ryland T. Dodge, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church, and interment will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Besides his widow and mother, Mr. Simpson is survived by these children: Mrs. Kenneth Sullivan, Mrs. Lester Milton, Mrs. Elmer Muddiman and Miss Betty Simpson.

Firemen Hold Carnival Today

Parade Among Numerous Features at Event in Sandy Spring.

The ninth annual carnival of the Sandy Spring Volunteer Fire Department will be held today at the Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, Md., beginning at 1 p. m.

A parade, hook-up contest, two-horse races, a baseball game and a dance are included in today's program. The parade will be participated in by patriotic and civic organizations and 11 fire departments of the county and companies from Ellicott City and Laurel. It will begin at 4:30 p. m.

A baseball game will be played at 3 p. m. between the Highland All-Stars of Howard County and the Rockville A. A. A steeplechase race for thoroughbred horses owned by Montgomery and Howard County farmers and a flat race open to horese of all breeds will begin at 4 p. m. A silver cup, donated by T. Ormonde Nichols, of Chevy Chase, will be the prize for the steeplechase.

The hook-up contest and a tug-of-war will follow the parade. Dinner will be served by a woman's committee at 5:30 and at 8 p. m. and dancing will begin at 9 and continue until midnight.

Knights of Columbus Continue Their Carnival

Because of rainy weather last week, Forest Glen Council, Knights of Columbus, is continuing its annual carnival all of this week on the grounds on Georgia avenue opposite the Silver Spring (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department Building.

A prize waltz will be a feature tonight of the open-air dancing. In addition to the usual novelty booths and stands there is also a ferris wheel.

May Reclaim Corn.

Farmers wishing to reclaim their corn for live-stock feeding may do so by paying the credit corporation 47 cents a bushel. Corn is now selling in the neighborhood of 77 cents a bushel. Mr. Davis emphasized "it is not the desire of the Commodity Credit Corporation, because of the short crop, to continue indefinitely the holding of this corn nor freeze the stocks accumulated under the loan."

The President's statement regarding the second cotton loan program follows:

"To enable the cotton farmers to market their cotton more nearly as it is required for consumption, rather than necessarily at picking time, I have requested the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make funds available to the Commodity Credit Corporation that will enable it to increase its lending from 10 to 12 cents a pound, classing low middling or better, which is and has been continuously in the possession of the producer.

"While the Commodity Credit Corporation is still carrying for the producers about 1,000,000 bales of last year's cotton, and the cotton producers' pool has approximately 2,000,000 bales additional, it is worth noting that the still large surplus of cotton will, in all probability, show this year a reduction of about 4,500,000 bales from last year."

Earlier in the day the commodity corporation revealed the corn loans were being repaid at the rate of $1,000,000 a day—the loans on 84,550,000 bushels having been repaid and that of the $141,121,039 loaned on cotton all but $51,893,990 had been repaid.

Policy Not Clear.

When the 10-cent cotton loan policy was announced last September the RFC created the Commodity Credit Corporation and allocated $300,000,000 to it for loans on cotton. This sum, less the amount outstanding, still is available to the corporation for cotton loans and for the time being should suffice to take care of all applying borrowers. Should the sum prove insufficient, however, it will be increased, it was said at the RFC offices.

It is assumed that the 12-cent loan policy will be carried out as was the 10-cent loan policy, but this was not made clear from the President's announcement. Last year when he authorized loans on cotton, he specifically required that all borrowers must agree to cooperate with the AAA program to reduce cotton acreage by 25,000,000 acres. This was made a condition to every loan granted.

The President's statement yesterday made no reference to requiring cooperation with the AAA's 1935 cotton program—which has not been announced—nor did it make clear whether the 12-cent loans would be made on cotton grown in excess of quotas under the Bankhead cotton control act.

At the RFC, which received news of the President's action late in the day, although he conferred earlier with its chairman, Jesse H. Jones, it was said that it would make whatever requirements the AAA desired as conditions to the loans. It also was pointed out that in all probability rules would be forthcoming banning loans on cotton grown in excess of the Bankhead act quotas, because otherwise the loan scheme would afford a loophole for the evasion of this act.

Linked to Crop Program.

It was believed certain last night the new cotton loan plan would be hooked up with adherence to whatever program the AAA decides on for next year's cotton crop, such as not planting in excess of this year's acreage. The disastrous failure of price pegging efforts in behalf of cotton and wheat during the Farm Board days of the Hoover Administration are too fresh in mind for this Administration to do otherwise, it was contended in one quarter.

The Hoover price-pegging schemes were carried out through loans, but without any conditions attached as to future production. The result was that large surpluses accumulated in the Government granaries and warehouses which overhung the market like a Damocles sword, further depressing the dropping prices for those commodities.

The cotton loan policy for last year, while based on a figure at the time the plan was launched about one cent above the market price, undertook to curtail production and for that reason was regarded as a success. Cotton prices, due in part to this acreage reduction and in part to currency depreciation, passed the 10-cent loan value and held well above it after the first few weeks.

Outlook Not Bright.

The outlook for increased cotton prices is not regarded here as bright in the immediate future. As the President pointed out, despite the reduced production this year, the carry-over is large. In the second place Japan, which took large quantities of last year's American cotton crop, is negotiating a reciprocal agreement with India. Thirdly is the impending cotton textile strike which may seriously interfere with consumption if it is called.

Although declining to discuss the threatened strike, in order not to jeopardize the Government's position as an impartial mediator, heads of the New Deal agencies have given serious consideration to the methods of averting it. Their plans, however, await the return to Washington of Robert Bruere, chairman of the Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board. He was in New York yesterday conferring with George A. Sloan, chairman of the Cotton Textile Code Authority and spokesman for the industry.

The textile workers' strike committee will meet today with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. The Bruere Industrial Relations Board also will meet today.

Shriners Plan Norfolk Fete

Charlottesville Group Will Attend Celebration Next Month.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—A delegation of Charlottesville Shriners will leave September 7 for Virginia Beach to attend the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of Khedive Temple, Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Norfolk.

The celebration, expected to draw 3,500 Shriners from North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland, will be held for three days at Norfolk and Virginia Beach, Dr. M. V. Pence, a noble in the shrine here, announced.

The local delegation will include Dr. Pence, C. Pace Bailey, Samuel Arundale, T. D. Bailey, Guy Via, Robert S. J. Sterling, H. F. Thacker, Garland Thomas and others.

Illustrious Potentate Chester B. Koontz, of Norfolk, has announced that his dignitaries will participate in the celebration, which opens September 7 at the Norfolk City Auditorium.

Among those who have announced that they will attend are Leonard P. Steuart, of Washington, deputy imperial potentate; Walter S. Sugden, of Sistersville, W. Va., imperial high priest and prophet, and James H. Price, of Richmond, Lieutenant-Governor, and imperial recorder of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of North America.

John N. Sebrell, of Norfolk, past imperial potentate, will have a prominent part in the program, while his successor, Dana S. Williams, of Lewiston, Me., also is expected to attend. Several other international officers, including Morley E. McKensie, of Toronto, Canada, imperial outer guard, have been extended invitations.

Mrs. Blake Buried At Woodridge, Va.

Funeral Services Held at Residence.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Funeral rites for Mrs. Mary Susan Blake, 87, who died yesterday at her home near Woodridge, this county, were held at 11 a. m. today from the home.

Three sons and three daughters survive—George W. and H. H. Blake, of Woodridge; E. L. Blake, of Richmond; Mrs. H. J. Hughes, of Baltimore; Mrs. E. W. Harlow, of Mineral, and Mrs. W. A. Gentry, of Ellerslie, Albemarle County.

Fredericksburg Fair Planned.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Six divisions for exhibition of products at the Fredericksburg County Fair, September 11 to 14, were announced yesterday by the fair's executime committee. Products will be shown in classifications of live stock, farm products, farm machinery, domestic products, commercial exhibits and a women's department.

29 Candidates Enter Races in Prince Georges

Time Limit for Entries in County Contests Expires Tonight.

Party leaders drew their battle lines closer yesterday in Prince Georges County as the zero hour for filing applications of candidacy for the fall elections approached.

Twenty-nine candidates filed for office with the board of election supervisors. Nineteen Republican and 10 Democratic aspirants came into the field. The total list now is 70.

The deadline for filing certificates of candidacy has been set for tonight at midnight. Virtually all candidates on the Democratic slate have filed, while a considerable number of G. O. P. aspirants have not entered formally. Democrats have only two non-contested positions to fill—surveyor and delegate to the State convention. They will be named today. One place on the legislative ticket, three judges for the Orphans' Court, and treasurer and clerk of the circuit court posts remain to be filled by the Republicans.

Committee Fight.

Democrats face a fight for membership on their important State central committee as the result of the filing of Cornelius Ryan, of Mount Rainier. Ryan is indorsed by the Sangerbund of Prince Georges County, of which he is secretary. He is an overseas veteran, and in 1932 served as publicity director of the Roosevelt-Garner Veterans' Club of the county.

The Democratic legislative ticket was completed yesterday when four candidates indorsed by the organization filed. They were Kent B. Mullikin, of Laurel, and Charles C. Marbury, of Mellwood, incumbents, and John S. White, of Colmar Manor, and Egbert F. Tingley, of Hyattsville. Lansdale G. (Dee) Clagett, of Upper Marlboro, and L. Harold Sothoron, of Brentwood, who already have filed, complete the House of Delegates slate. State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer is a candidate for reelection.

Other Candidates File.

Four candidates for the House of Delegates on the Republican ticket filed yesterday. They were Oliver Metzerott, of Chillum, minority floor leader in the last session of the Legislature; Richard C. Zantzinger, of Hyattsville, incumbent; Thomas E. Luckett, of Capitol Heights, and Robert G. MacCartee, of Hyattsville. Herbert J. Moffat, of Hyattsville, has filed for the House, while one vacancy on the ballot is to be filled. Frank Small, jr., of Surrattsville, is the G. O. P. candidate for the State Senate.

Other candidates who filed yesterday were:

Democratic—State Central Committee, M. Hampton Magruder, George N. Palmer and Charles S. Early; delegate to the State convention, Mrs. Daisy F. La Coppidan; sheriff, E. S. Aldridge; judge of the orphan's court, Millard Thorne.

Republican—State Central Committee, George N. Bowen, A. Eugene Burgess, Howard Proctor, W. Eugene Pyles, William J. Griffith and Charles Arthur Greenleaf; delegate to the State convention, Walter R. Davis, Robert H. Palmer, Mrs. Martha May Severe, J. Wilson Ryan, James P. Curley and Howard W. Spicknall; county commissioner, Herbert E. Rawlings; sheriff, Joseph V. Wyvill, jr., and Thomas M. Belt.

4 Contracts Let For New Hospital

Hagerstown Institution to Cost $500,000.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 21.—The contract for building the new Washington County Hospital was today awarded to J. Henry Miller, Inc., Baltimore, by the hospital trustees. The amount of the bid, which was the lowest, was not announced, although it was indicated by board members that when completed the cost will be slightly more than half a million dollars.

Three other contracts in connection with the new fireproof building, which will be seven stories with a 150-bed capacity, also were awarded today. They were plumbing and heating, Herr Bros., Harrisburg, Pa.; electrical, A. G. Crunkleton & Co., Greencastle, Pa., and elevator, Otis Elevator Co. The amounts of these bids were not announced.

It is planned to start work immediately, and it was stated that erection of the building would require almost a year. Money to erect the hospital came from endowments received some years ago.

Richmond Seeking Home Loan Offices

Peery, Glass and Byrd Ask City Be Regional Base.

Gov. Peery and Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia, asked the Board of the Home Owners Loan Corporation yesterday to make Richmond a regional headquarters, the Associated Press reported. The board took the request under advisement.

The corporation is forming regions throughout the country, each with a headquarters where a large part of the work now done in Washington will be carried on.

At present the lines of the District in the middle Atlantic have not yet been decided upon, though tentative plans, it was revealed, call for including Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the District of Colmbia in it.

Anne Arundel Orders More Western Cattle

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Two more carloads of cattle from the arid West have been ordered for Anne Arundel County, Stanley E. Day county agent, said today.

Today marked expiration of the time limit in which farmers could request to graze the cattle purchased by the Federal Government. The first local shipment of 84 head was received Friday.

Alaska Fears Suicide Flight By Its Missing Hero of Air

Harassed by Lawsuits, Dorbandt Has Been Gone Two Days.

Anchorage, Alaska, Aug. 21 (AP).—Alaska wondered today if Frank Dorbandt, a premier pilot of the Territory, plagued by lawsuits, had made good his words—"You'll not see me again!"—uttered to bystanders before he lifted his big trimotored plane into the air here Sunday night.

When he took off here Sunday he had about 2½ hours' fuel supply.

In Seattle, George Olson, his attorney, laughed at the idea that Dorbandt would do away with himself. "That fellow would never kill himself in a thousand years," he declared. "He likes life too well."

Troubles perhaps had borne too heavily upon him, friends surmised.

On September 12 he was due to appear in court in Seattle to answer to a charge filed by Miss Marjorie Seller, 19, that he is the father of her baby girl.

Last June he was arrested in Juneau on a warrant charging violation of game laws by transporting contraband beaver out of the territory by plane and gasboat. He was released on bond.

That same month a cabin plane he formerly owned was sold at auction. It had been forfeited to the Government on the ground that Dorbandt did not have a proper permit under Department of Commerce regulations.

Christianity Fought.

Berlin, Aug. 21 (AP).—An outbreak of anti-Christian propaganda from Nazi sources today stirred deeper the troubled church situation in Germany, causing apprehension on the part of Catholics and some Protestant groups.

Despite Chancellor Hitler's acknowledgement of "positive Christianity" in Hamburg recently, there were indications of a greater tension.

The anti-Christian movement was stressed in a pronouncement of August Hoppe, of the Hitler youth press department, published in the periodical Nordland.

"The time has come," he wrote, "to take up the fight against Christianity. Germans must and shall realize that their conversion to Christianity was a crome against the race and the people which put them completely at the mercy of powers outside the state."

Vienna, Aug. 21 (U.P.).—Police arrested several German Nazis in Vienna today, dressed as beggars, and charged them with distributing propaganda against the Schusehnigg government. The men were said to have confessed they crossed the border secretly.

Meanwhile the largest court-martial since the Nazi putsch of July 25 opened this morning, when 25 Nazis faced trial on charges they took part in the plot.

Virginia Road Jobs To Employ 7,000

Work Expected to Begin Within Eight Weeks.

Richmond, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Henry G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, said today that seven or eight weeks may elapse before road construction begins in Virginia under the $3,700,000 grant from the Federal Government for this fiscal year.

The construction eventually means work for 7,000 persons, many of whom are being laid off as road projects are completed. This delay is not considered serious, as it means that work will be in progress throughout the fall and winter and from a relief standpoint winter work is most desirable.

The highway commissioner said Capt. J. D. Fauntleroy, in charge of Federal aid in Virginia, already had taken to Washington for approval about one-third of the projects planned. Judging by the past it will take the United States Bureau of Public Roads about three weeks to pass on the work.

Credentials Snag Shenandoah G.O.P.

Committee at Woodstock Is Deadlocked.

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—The Shenandoah County Republican convention convened tonight at Narrow Passage Tavern near here and soon were deadlocked over the inability of the credentials committee to agree on credentials.

It appeared probable that the selection of delegates to the Harrisonburg convention would be delayed.

The Harrisonburg convention on August 30 will select a nominee to oppose A. Willis Robertson, Democratic incumbent from the Seventh Congressional District. William H. Logan, of Woodstock, president of the Young Republican Club of Shenandoah County, opened the convention.

asked. Its approval was believed a foregone conclusion.

Geneva, Aug. 21 (AP).—World Jewry tonight had the advice of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, to reject any compromise or "terms of peace" Nazi Germany may offer.

The New Yorker told the third World Jewish Conference meeting here that the Jews' boycott against Germany will not be abandoned until Adolf Hitler's regime cancels every law or practice "violating human freedom, political equality and the ideals of civilization."

Urging Jews throughout the world to stand together in the present crisis, Rabbi Wise asserted the boycott, which he insisted could not be halted "by super-cautious bodies in London or New York," was the spontaneous answer to the leaderless Jewish masses to Hitlerism.

Assailing the timidity of those Jews who have failed to cooperate in the boycott, Wise said "the deepest lack of faith" is the reason for their refusal.

"I can not believe," Wise said, "in the seriousness of the warning or threat" that the Jews of Palestine will not support the projected Jewish world conference if the present conference fails to approve their negotiations with the Nazi government.

Earlier in the day Jacob Lestchinsky, exiled economist and newspaperman, described in somber terms the economic position of the Jewish people.

Asserting 60,000 Jews left Germany in 1933 and another 10,000 in the first six months of this year, he said the position of those remaining "is becoming desperate since there is no hope of finding shelter abroad."

Jews in Poland, Rumania, Lithuania and Latvia are refused state employment, he said, adding that "Jewish youth have no prospects in any of the central European countries."

Lestchinsky said emigration for Jews is impossible except to Palestine, while migration offers no chance for salvation.

While the conference steering committee began discussing privately the boycott on Germany, leaders of the conference indicated their belief that a struggle would result from efforts to convoke a world Jewish conference.

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—Samuel Untermyer, president of the American Non-Sectarian Boycott League, asked the Jewish World Conference at Geneva in a message today to work for continued non-Jewish support of the league's boycott against German-made goods.

"I earnestly urge the conference against creating the damaging and misleading world impression that the boycott is distinctly Jewish," Untermyer stated in a cablegram to Rabbi Stephen Wise, chairman of the conference.

Second Fire Damages Silver Spring Building

Fire yesterday damaged the east wall of the Silver Spring Bowling Alley Building, which had been badly damaged by another blaze recently. The fire began in debris of the previous fire which workmen were clearing away preparatory to rebuilding operations.

Fire Chief Charles E. Deffinbaugh, of the Silver Spring Department, said he believed the blaze was started by a cigarette dropped by a workman.

Maryland Dairymen Have Picnic Saturday

Baltimore, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Dairymen from all parts of Maryland are expected to attend the annual picnic of the Maryland State Dairymen's Association Saturday at Carlin's Park here.

The program opens at 10 a. m. with a speech by A. H. Lauterbach, chief of the dairy section of the AAA. The convention will be called to order by R. Smith Snader, president of the State dairymen. I. W. Heaps, secretary and treasurer of the organization, will discuss the progress of the association.

Judge Coleman Named to Act In Kelley Case

Outside Jurist Will Hear Report of Grand Jury on Impeachment.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Cla. 800. Clarendon, Va.

Judge Frederick W. Coleman, of Fredericksburg, Va., was designated yesterday by Gov. Peery to consider the report of the recent grand jury in the Circuit Court of Arlington County that impeachment proceedings be brought against Lyman M. Kelley, chairman of the county board.

The special grand jury was called by Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of the Arlington County Circuit Court, and after several days the jury recommended impeachment of Kelley. Judge McCarthy then disqualified himself from further consideration of the case and asked Gov. Peery to appoint a judge from another judicial circuit to take his place.

It is expected Judge Coleman will visit Arlington County late next week to consider the grand jury report. He is well known in Arlington County as he has presided over the local circuit court on numerous occasions as substitute.

The Republican executive committee of Arlington County will meet tonight at 8 p. m. in the Virginia Title Insurance Co. Building at the courthouse. The committee will select a treasurer and consider the filling of committee vacancies from Carne, East Falls Church and Virginia Highland precincts.

FRANCES WEES

Newspaper Headlines Screamed
"BOSTON HEIRESS ELOPES"

And on that theme, Frances Wees has built a story that will tug at the heart-strings of the sentimental and delight the literary critic with its scintillating style.

The eloping heiress is far from happy, and her father determines that the child of that marriage shall make no similar mistake. He ties up her inheritance in a will that he believes is fool-proof. But a bright young man proves that love can outwit legal phraseology.

Miss Wees will be remembered as the author of "Romance Island" and "The Mystery of the Creeping Man." Her latest novel, "Honeymoon Mountain," is ideal reading for Washington in August. It is light and compelling; it has pathos and humor and will take your mind off the heat.

Fairfax School Board Accepts Furniture Bids

Contracts Will Be Let as Soon as Needs Are Determined.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The school board of Fairfax County, Va., yesterday considered specifications and bids on furniture and other equipment for the new school buildings. As the projects have not been completed the companies submitted bids on a unit basis, and as soon as the needs of the schools are determined the contracts will be awarded.

Successful bidders were the Southern Seating Co., of Hickory, N. C., for teachers' chairs, primary chairs and primary tables; the Irvin Supply Co., of Richmond, for window shades, and the American Seating Co., of Richmond, for movable student seat and desk combination, teachers' desks and Tontine window shades.

A petition from the citizens of the Rock Hill neighborhood was received asking bus transportation to the Centerville School. The Rock Hill School was closed some time ago because it failed in the pupil attendance requirements of the State law. The board promised transportation if possible, but said the majority of the pupils were within the 2-mile walking distance.

Bus Routes Awarded.

The board also awarded four school bus transportation routes to V. C. Donaldson, of Seminary. Three of these are in the southern section of the county and the fourth at McLean.

A bingo party will be held tonight at the home of Miss Margaret Kimball, East Falls Church, for the benefit of the recently organized Women's Benefit Association.

The annual camp for Home Demonstration Club women of Fairfax County, to be held September 4 to 7, at Capt Kahlert, Md., has been abandoned. The advisory council ruled that at least 35 women must pay a registration fee in advance to insure the camp against loss. The requisite number did not respond.

The second annual carnival sponsored by the Vienna (Va.) Order of Fraternal Americans, and Betsy Ross Council, Daughters of America., is to be continued all this week. Proceeds are for the council's charity fund. Open air round dancing and bingo are nightly features. Friday night there will be old-fashioned square dancing.

Chicken Dinner Planned.

Sharon Chapter, Eastern Star, of McLean, last night decided to give a fried chicken dinner, September 15, from 5 to 8 p. m., in Firemen's Hall. Mrs. Grace Magarity was appointed general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Harry Read in charge of the dining room, and Elmer Guilford in charge of tickets.

The congregation of St. Anthony's Chapel, at Baileys Cross Roads, will give a lawn and bingo party tomorrow evening on the church grounds. Mrs. Joseph Kirchner is general chairman.

A benefit card party will be sponsored by Herndon Chapter, No. 55, Order of Eastern Star, tomorrow at 8:30 p. m., at the Herndon Hotel, it has been announced by the chairman of the ways and means committee, Mrs. J. L. Nachman. Arrangements are in charge of Mrs. Mildred Kidwell, Mrs. Esther Thompson, Mrs. Katherine Kirk, Mr. J. D. Thompson, Dr. William Myer; refreshments, Mrs. George R. Bready, Mrs. R. S. Crippen, Mrs. Lois Hutchison.

Services to Continue.

Rev. R. A. Bergdoll, pastor of the Sterling M. E. Church, South, announces revival services which started at the Pleasant Valley Church, August 19, will continue through this week. These services are conducted by the Rev. W. A. Gray, pastor of the East Fairfax circuit.

Rev. George Gee, pastor of Herndon Congregational Church, announces there will be no services at this church until Sunday, September 16.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Floris M. E. Church, South, will have the first meeting since June tomorrow at 2 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Middleton.

800 Middies Back From Long Cruise

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Having completed target practice off the Virginia Capes, the battleships Wyoming and Arkansas, bearing 800 midshipmen of the first and third classes, will steam into Annapolis Roads tomorrow morning, ending the annual summer practice cruise that began June 1 and included visits to England, France, Italy and Gibraltar.

Soon after arrival the middies will disembark and start on vacation until September 28. Second classmen, numbering 270, who remained at the Naval Academy during the summer for special instruction in aviation tactics, will complete their course Friday and go on leave Saturday. More than 80 members of the varsity football squad went on leave two weeks ago. They will return September 5.

Funeral Services Held For Willard McWhirt

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Willard Adams McWhirt, 82, life-long Spotsylvania County resident, who died Sunday at the home of his son, Harry W. McWhirt.

Surviving are five children, John W. McWhirt, Harry W. McWhirt, Allen M. McWhirt, Mrs. Charles A. Burgess, of Stafford County, and Mrs. George W. McConnell, of Washington; a brother, Walter McWhirt; a sister, Mrs. Eva Alsop, and six grandchildren.

Baltimore to Ask Eden Descendant To Govern Fete

Baltimore, Aug. 21 (AP).—A direct descendant of the last proprietary Governor of Maryland, who was exiled, will be invited to govern the Maryland Tercentenary pageant here October 5 and 6.

Matthew Page Andrews, director of the Baltimore Tercentenary Commission, said today he would ask Sir Timothy Eden, descendant of Sir Robert Eden, the exiled Governor, to come here from England for the pageant.

If Sir Timothy accepts, he will be given the mythical title of Lord Baltimore, which will be restored for the two days of the affair.

Pipe Testing Contract Let At Arlington

Pittsburgh Bid of $3,000 Wins Despite Protest of Two Officials.

Despite vigorous protests of two of its members, the Arlington County board let the contract for the testing of pipe to be used in the county-wide sewerage system by a vote of 3 to 2. The low bid of about $3,000 was submitted by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory. The next lowest bid, submitted by a Richmond firm, was approximately $12,000.

Board Member Christopher B. Garnett, in view of the great difference in bids, asked that action on the matter be postponed until the next meeting, August 30, pending an investigation into the question. Such action also was favored by Board Member B. M. Smith.

During discussion of the bids it was brought out that almost a mile of sewer pipe had already been laid and that no test had been made of the pipe except for strength. Garnett and Smith stated that they had no objection to the bids or the testing, but they wanted assurance that the tests would be properly conducted and that previous to yesterday's meeting they were under the impression that the pipe was being inspected as it was completed at the plant in Jefferson district.

Yesterday's special meeting was called to award the contracts for installation of the Four-Mile Run sewer interceptor and the pipe-testing award was unexpected. The interceptor bid was awarded to Nickels Bros., of Canton, Ohio, for $194,812.50.

More Library Gifts Pledged

Donations Made by Silver Spring Civic Bodies for New Home.

Supplementing a list of gifts pledged by various organizations of the Silver Spring (Md.) area to the Silver Spring Public Library to commemorate its removal to its new quarters in Jesup-Blair Park, the Woman's Club of Woodside announced yesterday a donation of $50 toward the furnishing of the children's reading room.

Other gifts made by local organizations to mark the opening of the library in the park next month include $200 given by the Home Interest Club of Forest Glen to purchase a set of reference books for the use of high school students. The Lions Club is completely furnishing the adult reading room at a cost of $160; the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution has presented several volumes of American history and a flag, which has flown over the United States Capitol, and the local American Legion Post is planning a historical room.

Formal presentation of these gifts will be made at the dedication ceremonies of Jseup-Blair Park September 15.

Roosevelt Related To Zachary Taylor, OrangeCountyTold

Orange, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—The Orange County bicentennial celebration and pageant historical committee has received a letter from Louisville, Ky., stating that a descendant of the Taylor family, named Miller, intends to participate in the celebration here September 25 to 28, and a postcript to the letter asks: "Did you know that President Roosevelt was a fourth cousin of President Zachary Taylor?"

The committee has set out to confirm the latter statement, as President Roosevelt is to be the special guest of the celebration, and will be invited by Senator Byrd.

Invitations also will be extended to the Governors of Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, and Wisconsin, States formed from the original Orange County grant which extended to the Mississippi River. Orange County was establishe as a separate county in 1734.

Col. Charles D. Winn, U. S. A., retired, of Winchester, Ky., is executive secretary for the celebration. A pageant by 1,000 persons depicting important episodes in the county's history will be held September 26 and 27. Miss Wycliff Scott, queen of the pageant as Miss Orange County, will be attended by a court of princesses from the States and counties partitioned from the original Orange County.

Lighthouse Tender Launched.

Manitowoc, Wis., Aug. 21 (AP).—The $250,000 lighthouse tender Tamarack was launched today at the yards of the Manitowoc Shipbuilding Corporation. Miss Lane Egan, daughter of an executive of the corporation, christened the vessel.

Virginia Light Company Cuts Its Own Rates

$186,800 Yearly Reduction in Income Planned as an Experiment.

Richmond, Aug. 21 (AP).—A reduction in light and power rates to residential users in Virginia, amounting to about $186,800 a year, or about 15 per cent of the total now paid, has been granted by the Appalachian Electric & Power Co., it was announced today.

The first decrease in charges will become effective October 1, amounting to about $80,000, and affecting about 10,000 consumers.

The announcement was made today by the State corporation commission, following its release of the Allen J. Saville report, which showed that earnings of the company in 1933, on the valuation of its properties for rate-making purposes, was approximately 5 per cent.

The reduction plan, effective on November 1, to 24,000 consumers, and on December 1 to all 38,000, was described by the commission as a novel one.

On December all 38,000 light and power users begin to participate in a service charge reduction of 1 per cent per month.

Officials expressed the belief that other companies in the State would watch with interest the operation of the reduction plan and might be influenced by it.

Red Cross Aid Work Pushed

Branches in Montgomery County Are Making Gift Bags.

In preparation for the annual project of making and assembling hospital gift bags for soldiers, sailors and marines confined to Government institutions, the Red Cross branches in Montgomery County are making plans to join other chapters in carrying on this work.

Members of branches in Cabin John, Chevy Chase and Silver Spring already are at work on their quota. As soon as bags are completed they are sent to the National headquarters for distribution.

Attention is called to the nursing service provided in the county by the Red Cross. Nurses are available at all times and may be secured by calling the visiting nurse service headquarters in Rockville.

Miss Estelle Moore, of Sandy Spring, is chairman of the nursing committee. Other members are Mrs. J. S. Dawson, Rockville; Mrs. William Wight, Silver Spring; Mrs. Ivan Weld, Sandy Spring; Mrs. Mortimer O. Stabler, Spencerville; Mrs. Berlin Brann, Cabin John; Mrs. Frank Marshall, Rockville; Mrs. Roger J. Whiteford, Chevy Chase; Mrs. F. Elliott Middleton, Bethesda; Mrs. Merle T. Jacobs, Gaithersburg; Mrs. Remus Riggs, Laytonsville, and Mrs. Max White, Dickerson.

Rum Fund Denied For Teacher Pay

The Prince Georges County board of commissioners yesterday rejected the proposal of the county federation of Parent-Teacher Associations to use funds from liquor license fees for the restoration of teachers' salrries, which were cut 10 per cent last year.

In turning down the plan the board suggested that the federation apply to the new board of commissioners to be elected in November for inclusion of the liquor revenue in the 1933 county levy.

The board yesterday denied the plea of Thomas H. Garrison, deputy county sheriff, for payment of $240, which Garrison claimed was due him for back salary for the fiscal year 1933.

Rum Car Loses In Long Chase

Montgomery Officers Run Quarry Into Arms of District Police.

After a 5-mile chase two Montgomery County policemen had to stand aside yesterday and relinquish their quarry to Washington police.

Observing a car apparently heavily loaded pass the Silver Spring police station, County Policemen Laurence Dixon and Ralph Howard gave chase. The pursued car sped at 60 to 70 miles an hour until it reached the District line, where it slowed down considerably.

The policemen followed to Third and Emerson streets northwest, where they hailed two Washington policemen in a scout car. The Washington policemen overhauled the car at Third street and New Hampshire avenue and arrested the two colored occupants. Twenty 5-gallon cans of alleged whisky was confiscated.

The men gave their names as Turner Landon, 1100 block of Shepherd court northwest, and John Thomas, 1500 block of Vermont avenue northwest. Landon was charged with operating without a permit and both were charged with possession of untaxed liquor.

Hagerstown Flooded By Counterfeit Coins

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.). Counterfeit lead quarters and half dollars have flooded the Valley during the last week.

Constable C. D. Jack, Berkeley County, and W. H. Schill, Martinsburg officer, conferred with local authorities. A house where counterfeiters were reported to have been working was searched without results.

Our Pal was a big, friendly shepherd-collie, handsome and powerful, particularly loyal to "the men" (my son and myself). Last year he began to have dizzy spells, in which he would sink to the ground, momentarily helpless. Heart disease was the diagnosis. Pal sensed that the spells followed exertion, so he came to spend practically all the time lying just within the basement door, where he could see the big back yard. But for weeks he never barked, never ran, rarely ventured outdoors, would barely rise to eat.

One day this spring as Pal lay within the basement door, I was straightening some bent wires in the fence that divides our backyard from that adjoining. Neighbors that day had moved in next door. As I worked on the fence, a dog dashed from the new neighbors' kitchen and jumped, snarling, at my hands. Even as I drew back, I felt a great body rush up beside me, heard fierce bass barks and growls.

There was Pal, towering formidably against the fence, ears back, hair bristling, fangs bared. So fierce was his rush that the other dog fled instantly. Then Pal dropped from the fence, weak and staggering. I helped him back to his resting place. He never barked nor ran again. A few days later he died in a hospital. In that moment of supreme loyalty he had sapped his whole reserve of strength.

Pal's picture adorns my desk, a prized reminder of a real friend who truly was "faithful unto death."

It was a lovely fern that Jim, my pet fox terrier, knocked over. The fern stood near the old sofa which we had put in the alcove near the smoking room. I scolded him for it and he looked so penitent.

About two weeks afterward my sister's baby was lost. He was 4 years old and had a bad little habit of running off when no one was looking. On this particular day, when the nurse sought to dress him for supper, he could be found nowhere. The house, the grounds and the roadway were searched and we were all about frantic. Sister lost her head completely and became hysterical.

My little dog appeared very excited and tugged at my dress, but in my terrible thoughts of kidnaping I paid no attention to him. I thought I would go through the smoking room once more when I heard a nerve-racking noise in the alcove and I saw Jim had not only thrown my fern to the floor with a crash, but was also dragging it with his teeth under the sofa. I was so wrought up by this time it seemed as if I could not bear it. The holder was not only broken in a thousand bits, but the floor was strewn with dirt and Jim was deliberately destroying the fern.

I made a grab for him under the sofa and there, 'way back against the wall, was our precious baby fast asleep.

Some years ago, in Aspen, Colo., I had a fine dog named Rover, who was a faithful guardian of my children and house dog.

When the carrier delivered the morning paper Rover usually was on the front porch to look after it. One morning a strange dog, seeing the paper delivered, ran for it and in the scuffle between the two dogs for the paper it was torn to bits.

When I went out for the paper I found parts of it scattered over the yard. Rover stood by with a guilty appearance. I reproved him sharply for not preserving the paper.

The next morning the paper again was missing. After a search, I found Rover on the back porch. I said, "Rover, where is the paper?" The dog arose and there, beneath him was the paper, neatly folded and unharmed. He had received it from the carrier and had hurried to a place of safety with it, so that the mishap of the day before might not be repeated.

Hounds' Bench Show Feature Of Hunt Meet

The bench show for foxhounds is expected to prove as attractive as the showing of hunters, in the Maryland Fox Hunters Association horse and hound show, which is to be held at Laurel, September 3, on the Seven Knolls Farm there.

Owners of hounds, the winners of former bench shows, have already expressed interest in the forthcoming ten classes now being arranged by John B. Kimes, of Silver Spring, in charge of the bench show, as follows:

Puppy dogs, from 6 to 12 months old; derby dogs, 12 to 18 months; all-age; puppy bitches, 6 to 12 months; derby bitches, 12 to 18 months; all-age bitches; best male dog; best female dog; best pair, male or female; and best two couple (4).

There will be trophies and ribbons awarded, and an entry fee of 50 cents demanded in each foxhound class.

In the hunter events, there are to be races for the three pony prizes, all ridden by children under the age of 14. In addition, two steeplechase and two flat races, for both thoroughbred and nonthoroughbreds running separately, are scheduled.

Mounts are to be run over a course remarkable for its natural contour, which is such horses will be visible from all angles.

Misconduct at Fair Costs Man $25 Fine

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Misconduct at the Elks Fair Saturday night cost Joseph Baker, 42, a $25 fine, a ten-day suspended jail sentence and a $50 bond to keep the peace for six months in police court yesterday.

Baker was alleged to have forced his way into one of the stands, used profane language, and attempted to assault Harry Stager, concession operator.

Cheverly Road Improvements Are Approved

Commission Sanctions Program to Be Paid for Out of Gas Tax.

The Maryland State Roads Commission has approved proposed road improvements in Cheverly to be paid for from the town's allotment of the 1933 State gas tax revenue, it has been announced by Mayor Fred W. Gast. Work is scheduled to start soon.

Members of the Town Council have been asked to submit recommendations for other improvements with the view to laying a new works program before the commission. The latter group of improvements would be financed by the 1935 gas tax allotment. Mayor Gast will call a special council meeting to consider the recommendations.

Projects approved by the commission include surface treatment of Purcell avenue, a new base and surface on Ohmer avenue and curb, gutter and surface on Harmon avenue.

Present plans call for installation before next winter of street lights at intersections where houses are located, Mayor Gast said. The new lighting system will be financed by citizens' contributions. A number of street signs were erected recently.

Town Clerk and Treasurer Carl Yagle has announced that taxes for the past year are being paid at a satisfactory rate.

Misunas Calls Legenza Truck Driver's Killer

Gangster Describes Death of Richmond Federal Reserve Employe.

Richmond, Aug. 21 (AP).—From the mouth of a gangster today came the words which the State hopes will send Walter Legenza to the electric chair for the murder of E. M. Huband, Federal Reserve Bank truck driver.

The gangster was Arthur ("Dutch") Misunas, admitted bad man, and the crowded courtroom knew what the answer would be when Misunas, participant in the hold-up which led to Huband's death, was asked to name the killer. Nevertheless, the courtroom was hushed, awaiting Misunas' evenly spoken answer:

"George Davis."

Legenza also is known as "Davis," and this name is written on the warrant charging him with Huband's murder.

Three Identify Him.

Three persons "positively" identified Legenza as one of the five men who on March 8 swooped down on the Federal Reserve truck here, killed Huband and fled after learning that the captured mail bags contained nothing more valuable than canceled checks. Late in the afternoon the prosecution rested.

Misunas, who said he was offered no special consideration in return for his State's testimony, was the only witness, however, who testified it was Legenza who fired the fatal shot.

C. P. Harris, an agent of the Railway Express Co. in Richmond, testified he picked Legenza out of a five-man line-up in Baltimore, and H. H. Briggs, another employe of the express agency, said he was "positive" Legenza was one of the five in the holdup.

All the while Legenza, impassive except for an occasional nervous twitch of his right eye, looked stonily at the witness.

Mrs. Fontaine Testifies.

Neither Misunas nor Mrs. Leonora Fontaine, a key witness for the prosecution, would look at the defendant as they filed up to the witness seat to testify for the prosecution.

Mrs. Fontaine, friend of the slain gang leader, "Big George" Phillips, said Legenza entered his Washington apartment the night of the murder in a highly nervous condition. She said that as he entered the room a radio broadcaster was announcing the holdup and slaying.

"His face was white," she said, "and he snapped off the radio and asked me to make him some coffee."

Taking up its case at 4:15 p. m., the defense immediately produced evidence designed to establish an alibi that Legenza was in New York at the time of the March 8 killing.

The principal alibi witness was Thomas Brescia, operator of a New York restaurant. He said Legenza, whom he had known for 15 years as "Walter," had a room at his place March 2 to 9, and that on March 7 gave him a gold bracelet to give to "my wife."

Three Witnesses Agree.

"I know he ate supper in my place about 6 o'clock on the night of March 8 because he had given me the bracelet the day before and we had corned beef and cabbage the next night and 'Walter' ordered that because he especially liked it."

William Doran, a New York Daily News pressman, testified he saw Legenza in the Brescia restaurant on the night of March 8.

Brescia was followed on the stand by William Garber, a waiter in the restaurant, who also testified Legenza was in the restaurant between 5 and 6:30 o'clock, March 8. On cross-examination he said Legenza had eaten there regularly since his employment in the restaurant began in January.

The defense tried to prove the woman was enamored of "Dutch" Misunas. She admitted under cross-examination that Phillips had slapped her at Club Forest, a resort near Richmond, for dancing with Misunas.

Implicated in Robbery.

In addition to her testimony as to Legenza's activities the fatal night, she implicated him in the $60,000 robbery of a Richmond bank messenger. Misunas said Legenza also was involved in the holdup of a tobacco-laden truck near Richmond.

Protesting, the defense said the testimony was improper and demanded a new trial. This the court refused, but did order the testimony stricken from the records.

It was the second defense attempt to have the court declare a new trial. At the outset this morning, Legenza's attorneys asked a mistrial on the ground that the veniremen chosen yesterday should have been locked overnight. When the court refused, an exception was noted.

The prosecution, as it had promised, built its case largely on Misunas' testimony.

"Pitched in $100 Apiece."

Speaking in a matter-of-fact manner, the burly gangster said each of the five members of the gang "pitched in $100 apiece to buy the truck" to use in their getaway.

The State contends three of the gangsters were Leganza, Robert Mais and Misunas—all held under first degree murder indictments. The other two alleged members of the quintet were Phillips and George Kauffman, both of whom have since been slain.

After the holdup, Misunas said, the quintet, chagrined at the discovery that the contents of the mail bags were worthless, hurried back to Washington with Phillips at the machine gun beside him, driving. Other members of the band were hidden behind egg crates, he said.

En route to the Capital, the gangster continued, the truck was stopped by a Virginia motorcyle policeman. Misunas said he whispered, "Now is the time to shoot," but "Davis turned yellow when he saw a man with a gun and told us not to shoot." The officer stopped the car merely to caution Phillips against speeding.

When he returned to Washington, Misunas said, he asked why the truck driver had been shot and was told "they thought the man went down to get a gun when he grabbed the emergency brake."

As the prosecution neared the end of its case, Sergt. Floyd A. Truscott, of the Washington police, said Misunas, coming back from San Francisco under police escort, volunteered his confession.

New $48,000 PWA Bridge Completed at Waynesboro

Workmen are shown putting the finishing touches on the new bridge over the South Fork River at Waynesboro, Va. The bridge replaces an old structure and was constructed with PWA funds at a cost of $48,000.

Blasts, Threats Force Maid to Quit Luray Job

Menaced Girl Leaves Afoot Without Money, After House Is Wrecked.

Luray, Va., Aug. 21 (AP). — May Smith, maid in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Silas T. Rosser, whose life was threatened in unsigned notes found near the house, following mysterious dynamite blasts, left Luray today voluntarily for an undisclosed destination.

She left on foot, telling officers she had no money and did not know where she would go, but that she did not want to "make any trouble."

Mysterious dynamite blasts in the early morning hours today did more than $1,000 worth of damage to the Rosser home, it was estimated by carpenters employed on repair work.

In addition, the blasts broke windows and doors in nearby homes, while the jar of the explosions was felt several miles away.

The explosion this morning was the third blast within a week.

Last Tuesday about 1 a. m. two blasts were set off from a post in front of the house, but little damage was done.

Several warning notes, unsigned, were found on the ground addressed to the maid. One of them read:

"May Smith—your life is in danger. The town of Luray is in danger. Leave the town or No. 2 will red hot Luray."

The note was not shown to officers until later and no watch was kept.

Sheriff Lucas checked on the whereabouts of a Harrisonburg man, said to be a suitor of the girl, but found him at home at 6 a. m.

The girl, who had been unemployed, was recently hired by the Rossers as maid. Silas Rosser, 82, and his blind wife, 81, urged the girl not to leave.

The aged couple was reported near collapse as a result of the affair.

New Bridge Urged Over Spa Creek

Board Asked to Construct Span at Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—A group of 20 taxpayers of Eastport today asked the Anne Arundel County commissioners to construct a new bridge across Spa Creek, connecting that village with Annapolis.

Clarence Tyler headed the delegation, and he and George Erickson were chief spokesmen.

Alarming vibration of the draw works, the fact that the condition of the present span prohibits its use by heavy trucks and is none too safe for passenger cars, especially with the constantly increasing traffic of Washingtonians and others traveling to the bay and river resorts during week-ends, were cited as some of the reasons why a modern concrete structure should be built.

County Engineer John A. Bromley estimated a new bridge would cost $300,000 and President Elmer E. Parkinson said it would mean an additional county-wide tax. It also was pointed out that legislative authorization of a bond issue would be required.

Norton's Town Hall Gets Tonsil Patients

Norton, Va., Aug. 21 (AP).—The big town hall here last night looked like an emergency war hospital with 90 cots, arranged in rows, ready to receive that many child patients this morning for operations for removal of tonsils.

The clinic is sponsored jointly by the county relief administration and the Norton Kiwanis Club. Thirty children slept in the temporary hospital last night to be ready for the opening of the clinic today.

Maryland Counties Asked To Make Tax Years Uniform

Baltimore, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Counties, cities and towns of Maryland which have fiscal years which do not correspond to the calendar year have been urged by Jesse D. Price, chairman of the State Tax Commission, to adopt January 1 as the start of the tax year.

By so doing, Mr. Price pointed out, the governmental units will aid State officials in making the general reassessment of property in the State, scheduled for next year. The decennial reassessment was to have been held in 1932, but because of the financial stress of the times, the 1931 Legislature postponed the assessment until 1935. According to present plans, the State Tax Commission expects to start the lengthy task in January of next year.

"At present," Mr. Price said, "only Baltimore and four counties—Baltimore, Frederick, Anne Arundel and Harford—have fiscal years which correspond to the calendar year.

"The others vary by as much as six months. That makes it almost impossible to tell just where we stand at any given time. It makes statistics on delinquency, for example, unreliable, in that a taxpayer's delinquency in a county with a fiscal year beginning in January, occurs six months before it does in a county whose year begins in July.

"In addition, it confuses the work of the State finance department. Instead of knowing on September 10, when collectors have to report to the comptroller, just how each county stands with reference to its collection of State taxes, we have to take into consideration their different levy dates. That imposes an unnecessary burden on persons or corporations paying taxes in more than one county."

Counties or cities can change their fiscal year by resolution without legislative approval, Mr. Price said.

Second of 4 Facing Slaying Trial Sept. 7

Cooper Accused in Brown's Death; Barnhouse Given 15 Years.

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—The date for the trial of the second of four men accused of killing Basil Brown is set for September 7 in Loudoun County Circuit Court, when Richard Cooper will face a jury on a first degree murder indictment. The court has appointed Fenton Connor and Kenneth Cromor to defend Cooper, at whose home, the State charges, occurred the altercation which led to Brown's murder.

Cooper was not put on the stand at the trial of Clarence Barnhouse yesterday. Barnhouse was sentenced to 15 years in the State penitentiary last night after a jury, deliberating five hours, found him guilty of murder in the second degree.

A rugged mountaineer, Barnhouse, who apparently was indifferent to the proceedings of the trial, received his sentence with the same calm. He sat in the prisoner's box alone with his hands folded during the long hours of the jury's deliberations and his face remained expressionless. The courthouse was crowded until midnight.

Cleveland Harper and Mrs. Nellie D. Cooper, wife of Richard Cooper, will be tried later on a first-degree murder charge. Both testified yesterday, but their statements conflicted. The law forbids a wife to testify against her husband, and Mrs. Cooper's testimony, which was the State's chief argument in the trial of Barnhouse, will not be used at Cooper's trial, according to John Galleher, prosecuting attorney. Brown's beaten body was found on the morning of July 2 in a ravine near the Cooper home, which is three miles from Lucketts.

Brucetown Rites For Montgomery

Operated Train Bearing Body of McKinley.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.). Services were held at Brucetown, near here, yesterday afternoon for Harry B. Montgomery, 76, retired passenger train conductor of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who had charge of the train carrying the body of President McKinley from Buffalo, N. Y., to Washington, after the Chief Executive had died of an assassin's bullet while attending the Pan-American Exposition.

Mr. Montgomery died Saturday at his farm in the Brucetown community where he had lived 27 years since retiring to take over the farm bequeathed him by an uncle, the late Thomas Stadden. Mr. Montgomery also operated the Brucetown Flouring Mills.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Mary Alice Montgomery, and two daughters, Miss Helen K. Montgomery and Mrs. Florence Pyna, both of the Brucetown neighborhood.

Girl May Die; Attacked in Churchyard

Waynesboro Police Grill 3 Who Were Near Scene at the Time.

Waynesboro, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.). Three men were being questioned here tonight behind closed doors at city hall by Commonwealth's Attorney John D. White and Chief S. B. Shumate in connection with the mysterious midnight attack on Miss Pauline Parry, pretty 18-year-old girl, on the Basic Methodist Church grounds early Sunday.

The men are Loomis Zimmerman, who was seen loitering in that neighborhood just before the attack occurred, according to the police, and Ernest Carter and P. P. Moyers, two men who said they heard the cries of the girl and rushed to her assistance. Reporters were excluded from the questioning, but Chief Shumate stated that there were no new developments in the case, which has aroused this community more than any local criminal offense in years.

A reward of $200 has been offered by the city council for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Miss Parry's assailant.

Miss Parry, who was struck on the head with a sharp instrument as she was returning home alone from a show, is reported by hospital authorities to be in critical condition with her skull crushed and the left side of her body paralyzed. She is the second young girl victim of a similar attack in the same neighborhood of the city.

Police believe the intent was criminal assault. All known men friends of the girl have been questioned by the authorities working on an indefinite clue that her assailant might have been a jealous suitor.

Virginia Gives Ruling on Audits

Officials Need Show Cash Only at Settlement.

Richmond, Va., Aug 21 (AP).—Attorney General A. P. Staples, in an opinion to State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs, last night explained his ruling that the auditor had no authority to inquire into the ability of a public official to meet his indebtedness to the State at a time other than that of settlement or on which an audit was being made.

The attorney general pointed out that the law does not require that which is unprovable to be proven and that "from the self-evident truth that an auditor can not determine nor can the officer prove the amount of cash in his hands on a day prior to the examination, it follows that the auditor of public accounts can not require such officer to produce evidence of the cash in his hands on any such prior date."

The attorney general says he was prompted to issue the opinion by a statement in the press several days ago, in which Downs was quoted as saying the previous ruling "very seriously hampers" the work of auditing public offices.

Adult Training Plans Mapped By FERA Unit

Bentley Points Out Opinion Is Divided as to Value of Program.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—In the closing sessions today of the FERA Educational Training Institute at the University of Virginia here, plans were mapped to install community adult education.

State emergency educational supervisors and teachers, representing Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia, discussed with community educational authorities the organization of teaching technique and use of local facilities in launching the program of adult instruction sponsored by FERA.

Jerome H. Bentley, of the United States Office of Education, outlined the community's part in the emergency program. Two opposite points of view have developed in connection with adult education, he said.

Good Chance to Experiment.

There are those who contend that it presents a needy opportunity to experiment with new forms of education. This group feels, he added, that with a refreshing development of community leadership, parents and others are provided with a better position to evaluate the work of public school officials.

Others, Mr. Bentley said, have labeled adult educational activities as a foolish expenditure of funds. Among these he listed school officials who take the stand that the money would serve a better purpose if devoted to the use of the regular school system.

The possible work of the adult school and teacher in the community was pointed out by Maude E. Aiton, principal of the Webster Americanization School, Washington. She urged those who are to conduct classes to uncover actual needs and "give the people what they want."

Library's Value Stressed.

Advantages of "community forums" over other forms of instruction were described by Lyman Bryson, visiting professor of education at Columbia University and director of the California Association for Adult Education.

"If we are going to use the adult education movement for the purpose of encouraging a freer and better-informed public opinion, Mr. Bryson said, we must provide activities which develop it congenially—that help to make democracy work."

In pointing out library services as an aid to the program, Charles W. Dickinson, jr., president of the Virginia Library Association, and supervisor of textbooks and libraries in the Virginia Department of Education, urged more extensive reading of books, magazines and newspapers.

How first-aid and water-safety courses could be included in the program was outlined by Dr. Eugene Willison, of the first-aid and life-saving division of the American Red Cross.

The final act of the conference was the adoption of a resolution of gratitude to Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, prepared by Dr. H. C. Humphreys, supervisor of emergency education in West Virginia.

Youth Captured As Photographer In Spooners' Lane

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.). Spooners were breathing easier today following the capture of a youthful photographer last night by local police after he had photographed the male occupant of a parked car along a nearby lovers' lane.

The youth, fully equipped with photographers' equipment, told police that he was trying to obtain the photograph of a local couple whom he had been told could be found there, and not finding them, snapped another one.

The youth was released with a warning.

Md. Epidemic Held Dreaded Spanish "Flu"

1,000 Washington County Residents Stricken by Disease.

Baltimore, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—From the meager evidence available, it appears that the epidemic of grippe which has stricken nearly 1,000 persons in Washington County during the past two weeks in reality is a recurrence of the dreaded Spanish influenza which ravaged the Nation in 1918, Dr. Roscoe R. Hyde, of the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health, declared today.

The disease is manifesting itself in a mild form, but Dr. Hyde said he feared that if the epidemic persists until cold weather, it may increase considerably in virulence.

Appearance of the disease in the summer is somewhat unusual, Dr. Hyde said. There is little evidence to support the view that the epidemic is a new disease or even a new form of an old one, he asserted, adding that it is a wave of Spanish influenza which periodically appears in various parts of the country.

Is Respiratory Expert.

For four years Dr. Hyde has been studying the cause and cure of the common cold and he is regarded as a world authority on respiratory ailments.

Discussing the Washington County epidemic, he said:

"I certainly have no wish to appear an alarmist, but I think the people should be told that this epidemic might become a serious thing. It appears that as influenza is passed from person to person, it becomes more and more deadly.

"Up to now, I understand, there have been no deaths from the disease. But since it appears that it increases in virulence as it travels, it should be brought home to every sufferer of the disease that for the community good, as well as for their own good, they would take every precaution to prevent its spread.

Medical Advice Urged.

"By that I mean that every sufferer should call in a capable physician to treat him. After a few days, the victim usually feels much better, compared with the way he felt while ill, and wants to go back to work and mingle with people.

"That is the danger period. He is still capable of transmitting the disease, and he is in danger of a serious relapse. He should remain in bed, or just lounge around the house, until his physician assures him he is fully cured."

Dr. Hyde pointed out there is danger of pneumonia as an aftermath. He said the disease sometimes is accompanied by nausea, abdominal pains and possibly nervous disorders.

He has wired to Indiana for a dozen ferrets, which he will use in making tests and studying reaction to the disease.

Commission Gives Appalachian Data

Richmond, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—The State corporation commission today made public the Allen J. Saville report on the investigation of the properties and earnings of the Appalachian Electric Power Co.

The Saville report, the last of a series of three covering earnings of the three largest power companies in the State, said:

"The net revenue earned by this utility during the year 1933, represented a return of 4.68 per cent on the valuation for rate-making purposes expressed in terms of 1926 prices; a return of 4.24 per cent on the valuation for rate-making purposes when expressed in terms of average prices obtained during the seven-year period, 1926 through 1932; and a return of 5.21 per cent on the valuation for rate-making purposes when expressed in terms of prices obtaining during July, 1933."

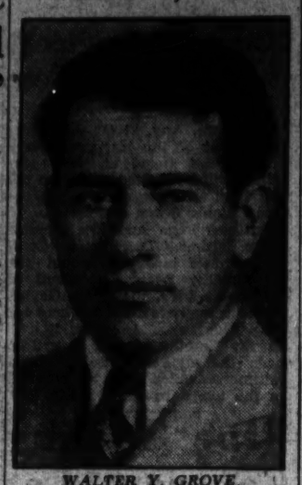
The valuations were made upon physical properties of the company.

Izaak Walton Groups Plan Joint Picnic

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.). Members of the Izaak Walton chapters in Washington County will hold an all-day picnic Thursday along the Potomac River, near Sharpsburg, which will be attended by several hundred sportsmen from all parts of Maryland and nearby States.

There will be fish catching, clay bird shooting and other contests.

Director of Bank



WALTER Y. GROVE, prominent Waynesboro, Pa., civic leader and funeral director, has been elected a director of the Citizens National Bank & Trust Co., Waynesboro, succeeding the late Abraham O. Frick, chairman of the board of Frick Co.

Senator Byrd Bad Democrat, Graveley Says

Virginia Senate Candidate Calls Roosevelt "Meddler."

Danville, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—James L. Graveley, of Danville, opened his campaign for a seat in the Senate before a home forum in Green Street Park tonight, saying that he sought the job as an Independent Democrat and that his election might be a political wonder, but not necessarily a political blunder.

He enunciated a platform calling for better banking laws; less Federal intervention in the life of the farmer; bridging the gap between labor and capital to eliminate strikes and opposition to the liquor business "because it opens up such an avenue for lying." He accused President Roosevelt and James A. Farley with "official meddling" in working for the defeat of the eighteenth amendment.

Referring to Senator Byrd he said: "I think he has been too good to the Federal Government to be worth much to Virginia. Mr. Byrd is a bad Democrat because he votes for any old thing that is put on the ticket and for measures contrary to sound Democracy. I am a good Democrat because I scratch political trash and try to give the people a decent ticket to vote. I claim my Democracy superior to his."

Graveley referred to his failure in business, but said he is paying his back debts. He promised that his campaign would cost no money at all. Referring to his early life he said that he weighed only a pound and three quarters at birth.

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.). S. W. Brooks, prominent Loudoun County politician, was elected committeeman from Purcellville precinct to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late N. R. Heaton at the meeting of the Loudoun County Democratic committee held here this afternoon.

Mr. Brooks defeated B. F. Longacre, 11 to 4.

The committee extended an invitation this afternon to Representative Howard W. Smith to come to Loudoun County during the Congressional campaign this fall to address the voters of the county. James Reese Duncan, young Democrat leader, of Alexandria, will be asked to be present the same time. A resolution on the death of Mr. Heaton was adopted.

Luray, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.). Republicans of Page County went into action yesterday for the Congressional campaign in this district. Meeting in Luray, the party elected J. Everett Will, an attorney of this place, as county chairman to succeed Lewis Willis, who has held the position for the last eight years.

Parkersburg Expects National Legion Heads

Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—A number of National leaders of the American Legion will take part in the program of its State convention September 2 to 5 in this city, officers announce.

Marylanders Flock to File In Final Rush

Both Parties Seek to Fill Slates Before Sept. 12 Primaries.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.). The Democratic "organization" forces in Anne Arundel County today practically completed their slate for the primary election of September 12, with five additional regular candidates entered in the field. This group included Steven J. Evard, Third District, for sheriff; Lewis J. Kelly, at present serving as commissioner from the Fourth District, for register of wills; W. W. Townshend, incumbent, for commissioner from First District; R. Chester Cromwell, Fifth District, and George E. Mason, Seventh District, for House of Delegates.

Another candidate who filed was Edgar J. Kemp for commissioner from the Third District. Mr. Kemp is running independently. His entrance makes a three-cornered fight in that district, the other candidates being Weems R. Duvall, supported by the organization, and Charles F. Lee, independent.

There are also three candidates for sheriff. In addition to Evard are Joseph S. Bean, Annapolis, running independently and backed by the better-government league and George E. Frank, of Annapolis. For register of wills, Kelly's opponent is W. Meade Holladay, real estate operator and retired banker, of Annapolis.

There was little activity among the Republicans, although that party's ticket is complete with the exception of three candidates for the House of Delegates and a like number for county commissioners and two for judges of the Orphans Court. The G. O. P.'s lone battle apparently will be for the sheriff nomination, for which there are four candidates, namely, Joseph W. Alton, Second District; John Bowie, Fourth District; Ernest J. Ford, Annapolis (Sixth District) and Carl H. Shipley, Fifth District.

The deadline for filings expires tomorrow midnight.

Senator Goldsborough Elated.

Baltimore, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Back from a tour of Frederick County, Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, today asserted that he was "elated" over the results of his trip. He met numerous Republican leaders in the county, the Senator said, and was accorded enthusiastic receptions at every place he stopped.

"It was a case of realization exceeding expectations," he said, "but at that, I had never been able to bring myself to doubt my old friends in Frederick County."

Leaders of the G. O. P. in the Middletown, Thurmont, Woodsboro, and Emmittsburg districts assured the Senator that he would carry those sections by large majorities and he was told that he would poll a large vote in Frederick City.

At a reception in honor of the Senator at the Francis Scott Key Hotel, leaders from virtually all of the 26 districts in the county were in attendance. They were led by W. Harry Haller and E. Austin James, chairman of the Republican county committee.

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.). Three more have filed for places on the Republican State central committee. They are William Thrall of Bushwood, Horace Bowling of Mechanicsville and Herbert Lloyd, colored.

Refusing to relinquish these offices without a test at the polls, the present three members of the committee have also filed. They are J. Donald Hurry of Clements, Lawrence Hayden of Bushwood and Sam Bankin, colored. U. Lee McGuire has filed as delegate to the State convention. J. Bernard Love of Loveville filed for office of sheriff on the Republican ticket yesterday.

Mish Files For State Senate.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Joseph D. Mish, chairman of the Washington County delegation to the House of Delegates, today filed for the Democratic nomination for State Senate.

Mr. Mish is a member of the law firm, of which Attorney General William Preston Lane is senior partner. Mr. Mish's father, Frank W. Mish represented Washington County in the State Senate for four years, being elected in 1920.

A last-minute rush of candidates seeking nomination in the September primary was expected here tomorrow, the last day they may file.

No candidates for the Democratic State central committee have yet filed and only a few for nomination on the House of Delegates ticket. A fight between the Ritchie and anti-Ritchie factions for places on the central committee was a foregone conclusion, with both sides announcing they would file a ticket.

William H. Cunningham, president of the Board of County Commissioners, filed for the Democratic nomination to the same office, while Edward M. Schindel, county surveyor, filed for the Democratic nomination for the same office.

Reception to Dr. C. H. Conley.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.). A large reception was tendered to Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, at the Fort Cumberland Hotel here last night. Among those who greeted him were a group of men who backed the candidacy of Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore previous to his withdrawal.

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Henry W. Roberts, of this city, yesterday announced his candidacy for State senator from Wicomico County, subject to the Democratic primary. In 1922 he was a member of the House of Delegates from Wicomico County, which is the only office he has ever held.

Innocent Hunter Flees Posse

Danville Man, Mistaken for Alleged Slayer, Finally Outwits Pursuit, But Finds New Bird Dog No Help.

Danville, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Just because he wears a white shirt and blue trousers is no reason, Emory Long believes, why he should be mistaken for Ralph Davis, alleged slayer of Sheriff G. C. Kimball, of Statesville, N. C.

Long, who enjoys hunting, took out a new bird dog to see what it would do, knowing it is not the season for hunting, but expecting no difficulty in explaining his purpose to the game warden.

Unsuspectingly he got within the zone canvassed by 30 local and North Carolina officers near the city looking for Davis.

Seeing two officers with machine guns he was astonished, ran into the woods and crawled on his stomach to a point where he thought he would be immune.

He had hardly got settled when he saw 10 more armed men moving in formation through tall grass. Taking off in another direction, the huntsman, armed with a shotgun, saw he was moving toward another smaller group. So he lay in long grass and waited.

The new bird dog, in the meantime, became impatient and began barking. This attracted the attention of the possemen and Long, still wondering why his presence should result in such a heavy concentraton of men, decided to run for it. Again the dog barked.

"Yonder he goes," Long heard the posse cry, as he fled. Two of the possemen fired, but Long did not stop. He reached safety and later reported the incident to the police. They told him there had been a "hot tip that Davis was surrounded" and that reinforcements had been sent.

Concord, N. C., Aug. 21 (AP).—Ralph Davis, 25, wanted for the slaying of Sheriff G. C. Kimball, of Statesville, was captured here today.

The outlaw, object of an intense hunt in North Carolina and Virginia since Kimball was slain last Friday, was found in a rooming house here and surrendered to Sheriff R. C. Hoover, Chief of Police Widenhouse and two deputies without resistance.

Lorton Quiet; Riot Leaders To Be Shifted

Prison Officials Planning to Weed Out Most Dangerous Men.

Peace and order returned to Lorton Reformatory last night as prison officials, led by Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of District penal institutions, and Col. William Peake, chief of the penitentiary, prepared to weed out the most dangerous of the insurgents who planned Monday's frustrated convict strike.

Machinery hummed in shops as inmates not connected with the rebellion resumed work and normal routine. Outwardly the prison appeared as it does on any other day, with men in overalls going about their tasks and trusties at work in offices.

Inside the two adjoining cell blocks, however, the 250 prisoners who were scheduled to participate in the "self government" strike of Monday and dictate their own steward's identity and the menus he was to serve, had their first meal since Sunday night yesterday noon.

Get Stew and Bread.

Stew and bread were taken to sullen men, who sat two and three to a cell, glancing neither to the right nor left when guards passed them on their tours of duty.

"It is all over now, but we probably nipped a general break for freedom in the bud," said Col. Peake yesterday afternoon.

The guard force was not decreased last night, and vigilance was rigid outside the quarters of the trouble-makers. Just when the normal guard shifts will be resumed was something Col. Peake could not say.

"We're going to work carefully and find the guiltiest ones," asserted Peake.

Will Transfer Leaders.

"Then we're going to get the ringleaders and other desperate men who participated in this plot transferred to the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

"There may be a few of these boys who will have learned their lesson, and can be trusted. We'll have to work gradually."

Col. Peake said that the prisoners, had their strike succeeded, would either have made a dash for liberty, armed with the billies, blackjacks, knives, razors and lead pipe found in their cells, or simply would have refused to obey orders.

"The chances are they'd have tried to keep things peaceful," Col. Peake declared.

"They were going to kick up one of the most troublesome situations in the history of the reformatory, you can bet your life on that."

No Orders Received.

Denying published reports that 60 of Lorton's most recalitrant prisoners were to be transferred to Alcatraz Prison on the West Coast, Capt. Barnard last night said ne has received no such orders from Federal prison officials. Capt. Barnard added:

"I should like to see between 50 and 100 of our worst prisoners transferred elsewhere, but I do not yet know what Federal prison officials will say. We plan to ask for relief of some sort as soon as we have finished checking the rolls of the inmates."

Meals fed the trusted convicts were according to the menus planned some time in advance yesterday. The men had coffee cake, corn flakes, milk, coffee and butter for breakfast, and beef with vegetables, desert and coffee for supper.

Get Next Real Meal Today.

The 250 segregated prisoners probably will not get another square meal until dinner today. Last night they got their rations of bread and water.

Convicts stepped gingerly on their way to the mess hall last night. They swung briskly past their dormitories, battalions in overalls, their guards shouting orders to "close up the lines." None looked at the cell blocks holding their fellow prisoners.

Col. Peake and Capt. Barnard continued their effort to find out the source of the weapons found in the men's quarters.

They bent over a table in the reformatory office containing the murderous-looking implements — some dull, some shiny. One particularly grim instrument of torture was a wooden club, from which protruded a spike 3 inches long.

The need for completing the 20-foot wall, now one-third finished, into which desperate prisoners could be herded, was stressed both by Capt. Barnard and Col. Peake yesterday.

"The wall would be a barrier of safety for the prison, for the community and for the District," Capt. Barnard asserted.

A Deadly Arsenal

Fete Committee Named.

A committee consisting of Mrs. George Darby, chairman; Mrs. Gary Bell, Mrs. Carroll Walker and Mrs. Dorsey Plummer has been appointed to arrange a lawn fete for the Philathea Class, Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, Gaithersburg. The fete will be held next month.

Tonight Last For Filing in Montgomery

All County Politicians Are Alert for Insurgent Candidates.

With midnight tonight the deadline for filing of individuals in the Montgomery County primary elections, all county politicians are waiting with keen interest the events of the day.

While rumored last-minute filing by Republican insurgents in defiance of the Fusion movement apparently had been squelched, the day still holds portentous events. So far there has been no contest created for any primary job either in the Democratic or Fusion tickets, but it is not impossible that such could take place today.

Filing of extra candidates will involve an expensive and possibly heated primary campaign, which apparently is not desirable to either party. Should independent Republicans file, it undoubtedly would split the Fusion vote in the general election.

Two Deny They Will File.

Thomas L. Dawson and John D. Sadler, attorneys, whose candidacy on the Republican ticket had been rumored, both denied yesterday they intended to file.

Certificates of candidacy were filed by 20 candidates, as follows:

For Republican State central committee—Preston L. Snyder, Travilah; Clara C. Holmes, Rockville; C. Willard Harvey, Brookeville; Simon O. Smith, colored, Rockville; Charles C. Galloway, Takoma Park; Wilton T. Allen, Chevy Chase.

For delegates to the Republican State convention—A. Guy Watkins, Rockville; Walter B. Crossan, Silver Spring; John A. England, Rockville; Windsor W. Hodges, Comus; A. E. Gude, Rockville; John Q. A. Hood, Sandy Spring.

For delegates to the Democratic State central committee—Sadie T. Hoyle, Dickerson.

The office of F. Byrne Austin, clerk to the supervisors of election for Montgomery County, will remain open until midnight, when filing of individual candidacies will cease. The Fusion party, which will file by petition of 500 or more citizens, is not forced to file until August 28.

The first registration day before the primaries will be held from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. September 11. The primary elections will be held September 12. Intermediate registration days will be held October 2 and 9, with revision day, on which challenges can be filed, on October 15. The general election will be held November 6.

Kemptown Vacation School Closes Sunday

Closing exercises of the Kemptown Vacation Church School will be held Sunday at the Montgomery M. P. Church in Damascus. The Rev. Gilbert E. Turner was principal of the school, conducted during the first two weeks of August.

Teachers in the kindergarten class were Miss Allie Mae Moxley and Mrs. Beulah Price; primary, Miss Margaret Watkins and Miss Verna Mae Davis; junior, Mrs. Gilbert E. Turner, and intermediate, the Rev. Turner. Musical instruction was given by Miss Idell Duvall and Miss Adelyne Moxley. Miss Lorainne Watkins supervised the recreational work.

Young Democrats to Meet.

The Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park, Md., will meet tomorrow night in the Takoma Park Firehouse. The meeting was called by J. Bond Smith, president, to discuss election campaign matters.

Church Week Planned by Soroptomists

Montgomery County Club Names Committees for Activities.

With levity in procedure and using the personal form of address, members of "the Soroptimist Club of Montgomery County, Maryland," met Monday evening at Hungerford Tavern for their second monthly dinner since installation as a club of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs.

Presided over by Blanche Corwin, they decided to promote, as one of their first efforts, a local go-to-church week sometime prior to October 6, closing date for National Go-to-Church Week, fostered by all denominations.

Mary Mohler, reporting for the aims and objects committee, said that County Superintendent of Schools Broome approved a plan to have members of the Soroptimist Club give vocational guidance talks before the high schools.

New Members Installed.

A report was made on the recent Washington meeting, after which Nora Huffman, Washington officer and organizer of the local club, installed two members, Grace Barnes and Gertrude Hunter. Guests at the dinner besides Miss Huffman were Edith Lamar, Daisy Magruder, Anne Smith, Lucille Miller and Miss Page, of Washington.

The president appointed a committee to consider whether the National Soroptimist pledge should be used as a form at meetings, or whether a local pledge should be devised and adopted. The new committee will report at the next meeting, September 17, at the home of the president.

The recreational program included three vocal solos by Lucille Miller, two violin selection by Anne Smith, and the inimitable Daisy Magruder in a laughter-provoking reading, "Mrs. John Brown Buys a Hat."

Committees Appointed.

A list of all Soroptimist club committees follows: Membership and classification—Irene Pumphrey, chairman; Alice Berry and Elizabeth Getzendanner; finance—Gertrude Darby, chairman; Marian Clark and Vivian Simpson.

Aims and objects—Mary Mohler, chairman; Anna C. Reinhardt, Irene Pumphrey, Clara Ray Wilson, Laura Gilliland and Loretta Murphy. Program — Anna Rose, chairman; Helen Schaeffer, Antoinette McKeever and Katherine Champman. Music — Sue Blandy, chairman; Lucille and Bess Scott. By-laws—Elizabeth Getzendanner, chairman; Dorothy Schott and Mary Mohler. Publicity — Dorothy Schott, chairman; Marian Clark, Lucy Offutt and Elizabeth Wanner.

Hostess—Mary Downes, chairman; Winona Reed, Rae Watkins and Clara May Downey. Attendance—Orvetta Conklin, chairman; Edna Hauke and Gertrude Hunter. Transportation — Fay Barnesley, chairman; Grace V. Barnes and Mary Downes. Resolutions—Laura Gilliland, chairman; Anna C. Reinhardt and Elizabeth Wanner. Pledge—Irene Pumphrey, chairman; Rae Watkins and Gertrude Darby.

Cocke Manassas Firemen's Chief

Manassas, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.). Dr. George B. Cocke was elected president of the Manassas Volunteer Fire Department at the annual election in town hall last night.

Other officers elected were Thomas Howard, chief; R. Bruce Hyson, assistant chief; Raymond Davis, captain; A. Vetter, first lieutenant; S. MacMillan, second lieutenant, and Warren Coleman, secretary-treasurer.

A committee was appointed to make arrangements for fire department contests to be held at the Piedmont Diary festival on September 27.

Montgomery Band to Play.

The Montgomery County Band, conducted by Albert Browning, will give a concert Sunday night at the Silver Spring Baptist Church, featuring sacred music.

Something to Say
—not just saying something

A friend of CHESTERFIELD writes us of a salesman who had "something to say":

"I dropped into a little tobacco shop, and when I asked for a pack of Chesterfields the man smiled and told me I was the seventh customer without a break to ask for Chesterfields. 'Smoker after smoker,' he said, 'tells me that Chesterfields click with them... that they're milder and taste better. I sell five times as many Chesterfields as I did a while back.'"

Yes, there's something to say about Chesterfields and it takes just six words to say it—"They're mild and yet they satisfy."

A Twelve-Cent Peg.

Last year's cotton loan at 10 cents a pound presumably cost the Government only operating expenses and undoubtedly saved planters millions of dollars. It does not follow that the same outcome will result from the 12-cent loan which is now authorized. And it is highly questionable that it was desirable to peg the market at that level to offset the effects of a textile strike which is by no means certain to materialize.

Successful valorization loans have been offered by the Intermediate Credit System in the past, creating producer confidence at no cost to the Treasury. On the other side of the ledger is the record of the Farm Board's operations in 1930. Its cotton purchases, at the 16 and 17 cent level, held prices above the world level, artificially stimulated production, curtailed exports, and had much to do with piling up a world surplus with disastrous consequences.

Political influences are always in favor of a high loan value. Sound financing and sound economic policy require that commodity loans should be kept at levels which will not leave the Government holding the bag. The most important factor, from the producer's viewpoint, is not a high rate but an assurance that loans at fair values can be obtained. And the banks are eager to make good loans on staple, nonperishable commodities such as cotton.

The new loan figure is more than a cent under present market price. It is more conservative than first reports indicated would be the case. But, even so, the necessity of the move is far from demonstrated.

The Neglected Southeast.

It is both appropriate and pleasing that one of Engineer Commissioner Gotwals' final acts of service to the District should be an outline of improvements to be undertaken in the Southeast. This section has unquestionably been neglected, in spite of propinquity to the Capitol. To offset this oversight the Commissioners have apparently decided to give special attention to accumulated needs.

In the original plan of Washington that area south and east of the Capitol occupied a place of signal importance. This plan covered only the territory between the Anacostia River and Georgetown. The Southeast, lying adjacent to the Potomac and the Anacostia, was expected to become one of the finest parts of the new city. In recent years, however, development has been far more rapid in the Northwest. Southeastern Washington has been denied its share of improvements because of the extensive demands of this larger area.

On the northwest side Greater Washington now extends well into Maryland. This part of the District has been largely built up. It is reasonable to expect intensive development in other directions, and one of the sections most favorably situated for such improvement is the Southeast. Across the Anacostia lie several desirable residential areas. Perhaps in recommending numerous improvements for the Southeast, Commissioner Gotwals foresees a swing of the pendulum back in that direction.

It is certain, at any rate, that an attractive new bridge over the Anacostia at Pennsylvania avenue, and a new high school in this vicinity, will both be conducive to renewed growth in the Southeast. And it is still more certain that no well-balanced plan for the development of Washington can permit continued neglect of this section.

Flight To Alaska.

The successful mass flight of Army bombing planes to Alaska and return appears to have accomplished its missions. Although the enterprise had been arranged before criticism of the Army flying corps became vehement, harsh words emitted in that debate undoubtedly intensified the importance of the project. The bombers flew from the National Capital and returned here, with both departure and homecoming the object of a great turnout on the part of the press and newsreel photographers.

Behind the understandable desire for favorable publicity, however, were more serious motives. In the first place it was a military maneuver designed to test the speed with which the Army could mobilize its air force in a distant and lonely corner of our empire. In this respect the flight seems to have served its purpose well, for the mobilization was swift, sure, and efficient.

In the last few years, moreover, the linkage of Alaska's future with that of the airplane has become increasingly apparent. The development of this huge territory will to a large extent depend upon the commercial possibilities of flight. Already sagas have been written about doughty aviators who have soared high above its snows and ice. More will be written as civilization continues to encroach upon these fastnesses.

The Army flight has directed attention to the nearness of Alaska to the rest of the country when reckoned, in the old phrase, as the crow flies. This is of greater fundamental value than the military implications of the ten bombers which zoomed to Nome and back.

Lorton's Dilemma.

A very serious outbreak by the prisoners in Lorton Reformatory seems to have been averted by prompt action on the part of Supt. Barnard and his associates. For weeks these officials have been prepared for trouble. Their awareness of seething unrest in the institution, as well as their effective precautionary measures, deserves commendation. But, of course, these actions do not in any way change the basic conditions which make Lorton a menace to the community it is intended to serve.

Unfortunately, Washington has come to expect disturbances at Lorton. Last July a serious riot brought conditions there forcibly to public attention. It developed that hardened criminals are incarcerated at an institution with no proper facilities for handling such cases; that the dormitories are seriously overcrowded, and that proper segregation of the prisoners is impossible. Virtually nothing has been done to correct these deficiencies. Recurring strikes and uprisings are a logical outcome of such gross neglect.

Lorton is an open reformatory. It has never been equipped to care for desperate criminals. In former years all convicts of this sort from the District were sent to Federal penitentiaries. Those institutions are now overcrowded. An increasing number of dangerous criminals, therefore, have been sent to the District's reformatory. Officials there have been confronted by the dilemma of choosing between severe discipline undesirable for the great majority of prisoners and more lax reformatory procedure, which gives the agitators a chance to foment trouble.

There should be no need for the District to rely upon Federal penitentiaries to relieve this situation. Washington ought to have facilities to care for the vicious class of felon. For several years the Commissioners have been working toward that end. But the wall which is designed to inclose a new prison unit of the maximum security type remains one-third completed, with no funds available to continue the work. Congress was fully apprised of this urgent need in its recent session, but it refused to appropriate funds for the Lorton improvement. Likewise the PWA has authority to advance money for completion of the project. Every fresh uprising at Lorton must be attributed, at least indirectly, to the negligence of these Federal agencies which control the District's purse strings.

Even if funds were available, however, it would require about a year to complete the wall and inclosed structures. In the meantime Lorton ought to be relieved of its unnatural burden. The "bad actors" should be removed to penitentiaries where they will have no opportunity of promoting disorder. Capt. Barnard is sifting out characters of this type with the view of asking Federal authorities to send them elsewhere until the wall at Lorton can be completed. This is a much more constructive and realistic approach to the problem than intimations of communist machinations.

Lorton's difficulties are fundamentally a result of the haphazard budgetary machinery of the District. The local authorities responsible for operation of the reformatory are powerless to improve conditions because the Budget Bureau, the PWA and Congress have control over funds needed for that purpose. It should not require more uprisings to bring about cooperative action even within this cumbersome budgetary system.

The New Deal In Canada.

Canada's struggle against depression has been given less attention in this country than would be the case were we less preoccupied with our own problems. It is interesting to note, however, that our neighbor on the north has reacted to many difficult situations in much the same way as has the United States. Revolutionary legislation at Ottawa has become almost as common as it is in Washington. Doubtless it would be an exaggeration to say that the Dominion has copied the New Deal, but the similarity of the two countries' recovery measures is striking at many points.

An able summary of Canada's most important recovery legislation, written for The Post by Dr. T. W. L. MacDermot, of McGill University, appears on the opposite page. A new Bank of Canada has been created to regulate credit and currency, to control the external value of the Canadian dollar and to bring about stability in production, prices, employment, etc. In the United States similar ambitions are concentrated in the Treasury, aided by diverse alphabetical agencies. The Dominion Marketing Board, set up to control the output of natural products, except minerals, has points of similarity with both the NRA and the AAA. And the public works program, to be financed through an inflationary issue, carries more than a suggestion of the PWA on this side of the border.

Moreover, Canadian authorities have done their share of probing and investigating. Numerous abuses have been exposed. The government is still considering corrective measures that will not overreach its constitutional authority. In this respect Premier Bennett seems to be much more deliberative and cautious than was President Roosevelt. But the problems confronting each are much the same. How far can the central government go in the enactment of social and economic legislation without encroaching upon the rights of the States or provinces?

This international parallel is not without its paradox, however. In Canada these sweeping reforms have been sponsored by the Conservative party against the opposition of the Liberals. In the United States those in power call themselves liberals and denounce the opposition as conservatives. The need for discrimination in current political nomenclature has seldom been more cogently illustrated.

Why Deposits Grow.

During the year ended June 30 the member banks of the Federal Reserve system reported an increase of $4,400,000,000 in their deposits, and a rise of $7,500,000,000 over the deposits held at the time of the banking holiday in March, 1933. Although a restoration of public confidence in the country's banking system is indicated by the marked expansion of deposits which followed reopening of the banks and the introduction of the temporary system of deposit guaranty, the increases during the past year are due primarily to the effect of the Government's program of deficit financing.

That is shown by the steady rise in bank holdings of Government securities, which has been accompanied by an actual decline in the volume of commercial loans. Member bank investments in Government issues increased about $2,200,000,000 during the year, for example, while loans fell $375,000,000 as a result of a shrinkage in direct advances to customers. The report just released by the Comptroller of the Currency, covering national banks only, confirms the evidence afforded by the more comprehensive survey of the Federal Reserve Board.

This expansion in deposits and banking assets is an indication of weakness rather than strength. It shows the great and growing dependence of the Government upon the banks of the country, which are called upon to finance budgetary deficits by acquiring increasing amounts of Government securities. The steady rise in member-bank deposits results, chiefly, from Treasury disbursements of funds which are redeposited by those who receive them. Both by sales of securities to the banks and by deposits of cash representing devaluation profits, the Treasury has been adding to the volume of deposits and building up excess reserves which are unable to find employment in commercial loans.

According to authoritative estimates, about 60 per cent of the Federal debt is now lodged in banking portfolios, including loans against Government issues. The absolute size of this debt is not excessive, compared with that of other countries. It is, however, a source of inflationary danger, because it is concentrated in banking hands, instead of being distributed more widely among the investing public.

While an individual bank may regard its Government holdings as liquid assets, it is clear that the banking system as a whole could not divest itself of any large proportion of such holdings without bringing about a collapse of values. For that reason critics of present policies maintain that the banks are acquiring an increasing volume of public issues which for all practical purposes are frozen, whereas their holdings of self-liquidating commercial loans are declining.

The basic source of the difficulty is obviously an unbalanced Federal budget and lack of assurance that it will be balanced at any time in the near future. The problem is how to relieve the banks of an excessive load of Government securities, and leave them free to finance private trade and industry, instead of becoming mere instrumentalities for financing Government deficits. The task is not easy, but its nature is plain. A return to sound fiscal policies and placement of Government issues in the hands of nonbanking investors is called for. Under present conditions, the continuous rise in banking deposits is a cause for anxiety, not an occasion for congratulation.

Mr. Connery Conquers.

There is something particularly pleasing about William Patrick Connery, jr.'s, quest for the shingle. Already an attendant at two colleges—Montreal and Holy Cross—he has evidently learned the value of burning the midnight oil. In his spare time as a Congressman and chairman of the important House Labor Committee, the Representative from the industrial city of Lynn, Mass., has studied law. Twice he failed to pass the District bar exams. But you can't stop a Connery from Lynn. Undismayed by the flunks, he has stuck to his Blackstone and today he can say with the best of them, "Your honor, I object," and not be cited for contempt.

Perhaps Mr. Connery was inspired by the Brain Trust. An ardent New Dealer, he was not one to let the erudite atmosphere of Washington enervate him. He has preferred to make our enervating climate the path to erudition. Like a football player facing the dean, he tied a figurative towel about his head and crammed and crammed until his right in a court of law is no more to be questioned than that of Felix Frankfurter. His aptitude for knowledge might well serve as inspiration for other members of the House, who too often have showed a decided unwillingness to admit that they have anything to learn.

Yes, Mr. Connery's persistence is to be commended. But what else could you expect from a citizen of the Shoe City. Surely there, if anywhere, one should know the old motto about a shoemaker sticking to the last.

We have many foolish laws in this country, but we wouldn't have them long if we were to enforce them.

A philosopher says that those who know nothing are the happiest. Those who know everything run them a close second.

It isn't so much that the good die young as it is that most people just naturally become meaner as they grow older.

There might be a little satisfaction in your getting mad with the world if it knew or cared.

News Reel or Real News.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to protest against the perversion of the moving pictures into a propaganda agency pure and simple.

No news reel is complete these days unless it shows war pictures, big-navy ships, war plane flights, target practice or something glorifying war. "We are not looking for trouble," says one news commentator, "but we are sending our ships to the Pacific just in case." Is this not assisting the war party in Japan in its efforts to grind down the workers under a burden of "preparedness" frenzy?

Another propaganda angle is that reporting the now universal strike situation. Every labor struggle is referred to as a slam at the strikers. "Radicals Can Not Rule America," it is announced in connection with the Frisco strike, and this is followed with a barrage of reactionary and labor-hating comment. Other news-reel commentators are just as unfair to organized labor in its struggles to maintain a decent American standard of living.

If movie news commentators can not be really impartial, they had better get off the job, because union men and women and their millions of sympathizers are getting sick of this "poison pen" stuff. Movie companies will find themselves suffering an absentee boycott and reduced box office if this union-smashing attitude is maintained. It is the masses of workers and middle-class people of moderate means who chiefly patronize the movies, and there is a strong current of resentment and disgust already with filmland.

So, in the suggested "clean-up" campaign of the screen I propose that these smart-aleck reactionary capitalistic apologists get off the air and give union labor a chance for a fair deal. FAIR PLAY.
Washington, Aug. 16.

Time for Cooperation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In addition to the grave economic problems which President Roosevelt faced the moment he took office, multitudinous others have since arisen. He has met them, each and all, with a singular courage—and prompt, purposeful action.

Back, after a brief respite from the tremendous labors of his office, he finds a situation approximating a National disaster—a drought which has blighted the crops and the hopes of a large section of the country.

If there is a man in the United States who fully understands the seriousness of this calamity, who knows what suffering faces the many thousands of families in the drought area, and who will immediately and effectively move to aid the stricken people, that man is Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Would not this be an appropriate time to cease much of the carping criticism of the President, which has been so freely and carelessly offered, and in its place extend a modicum of encouragement and cooperation? HARRY R. LEE.
Washington.

The Other Side of It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of August 16 I have read "Our Traffic Problems." May I, a pedestrian-motorist, express my views on this subject? Why should any person on foot be permitted to cross any street under control of safety lights against a red light? Whenever any driver of a car crosses an intersection on a red light, and a police officer sees such action, he does not hesitate to put the violator under arrest and he is fined. Why should a person on foot be privileged to do what a person in a car is fined for doing?

But These Are Admirable!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: These questions were given a class in third year high school—summer session. Do you approve of jamming the New Deal down the throats of infants—girls and boys 14 to 16 years of age? The lesson was for Friday of last week under "general information:"

1. What were the election issues of 1932? Compare platforms of three parties.
2. Why was Roosevelt elected? By whom?
3. List the acts of the Roosevelt Administration. What was their object?
4. Compare the aims of the Republican party — 1897-1932 — with aims of the Democratic—Cleveland, Wilson, Roosevelt.
5. What are the Republican arguments at present against Roosevelt?
6. What are the declarations of the Socialists?
7. What are the arguments of the Democrats in defense of their Administration?
8. What do you approve in the New Deal?
9. What do you criticize in the New Deal policies and actions? Why?
10. Do you think Roosevelt should be upheld by this fall's election? Why?
11. What elections are now in prospect? Where are there Senatorial elections? Are any of these important to Federal legislation? Can you predict the outcome of any of them?
12. Are there any crucial spots in elections for House?
13. How would you vote?
14. Prepare a campaign speech as Senator. Choose State and one of the four parties.

Should you find space in your splendid daily paper I wish you would publish this and ask who is propounding these questions. Source? LOLA WHITE.

Auto-Paternalism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent correspondent, commenting on a letter by "B. W.," states that there are more automobiles in Washington than there should be. I am merely curious to know how we are going to decide how many such cars there should be in a town, and who should have them. It seems that such an attitude, if followed out to its logical end, might lead to a very interesting condition, known to political scientists as paternalism—sometimes called despotism or tyranny.

Until I came to Washington, the sight of whole blocks lined with cars parked for the night was unknown to me. But for the amount of rent paid for a small hovel here, one could rent a home where I lived. More, that home would include a garage. Here, where the poor-salaried Government worker is delivered to the tender mercies of rental agents, half the salary may go for the rent of two rooms. A car, as in my case, may be and often is, necessary for a job, and yet the salary may not permit of the luxury of a garage, because it, too, is in the hands of the rental agent.

The proper way to solve this problem is to compel the builders and owners of apartments to supply their tenants with the necessary accommodations, and at a rental that is more in keeping with the income of the average head of a family.

Boycotting Kidnapers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The course of the Canadian authorities in the Dominion's recent kidnaping case should serve as an object lesson. In this country everything is hush-hush from the time the snatch is made until the ransom is paid, because of fear of harm to the victim.

Now, if our Government and States would clamp down immediately on both the family and friends of the victim, as well as on all sources of assets, and promptly forbid the payment of a ransom, the gangsters would see immediately that their efforts had been in vain. Killing the victim would do no good, since this would only enmesh them deeper and they would have nothing to show for it.
JAMES DENSON.

Actions and Reactions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can not pick up your paper and read that excellent contribution to unadulterated, 100-proof U. S. patriotism from Miss Marie Graves Bonham, aptly headed "Strike Up the Band!" without breathing fervid hosannas for the Virginia lady and black maledictions for The Post. And no doubt that other great Virginia patriot, whose spirit seems to have found complete repose in Miss Bonham, would feel the same way about it were he alive today. I refer to Thomas Jefferson.

If you have any doubt as to how old Tom might have felt about it, you have only to read that great declaration which he drafted and in which Miss Bonham appears to have found her inspiration. Miss Bonham's fellow statesman made himself perfectly clear, I think, on the question of America's closing its doors to anyone not bearing the stamp of 100 per cent pure Americanism—and here I think he had in mind protection for the "best thinking people" of his time against pollution of mind by alien radicals such as Voltaire, Lafayette, and the like—and of the right of free speech, which I am sure he should have wanted reserved only for those free of the foreign taint.

But the attitude of The Post, which after all is a paper one can not help liking, arouses in me more of a feeling of sympathy than a desire to condemn, and I am fearful of the consequences it may suffer as a result of its openly daring the wrath of the American Legion, Miss Bonham and all the other best thinkers of the land.
ROBERT LEWIS.
Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me suggest that Marie Graves Bonham, of Gordonsville, Va., read Ralph Bellamy's book, "Equality." Even if she doesn't agree with his idea of government, she will be able to see clearer the happenings of these times, some of their causes, and a keener conception of the aims of our present Administration. In fact, I think it would be a good book for most people to read at the present time. I doubt, after reading it, whether Marie will be able to recognize a radical, or know whom to call radical. The father of this country, George Washington, and also the signers of the Constitution were radicals to the English of their day. If you're licked you're a rebel and radical; if you win you are a hero.

The Post Impressionist

The Great Holmes Heresy.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

A WHILE ago British savants put forth the theory that the Watson MSS. on Sherlock Holmes had been tampered with by a mysterious "Americanizing apocryphist" who concocted the Utah scenes of "A Study in Scarlet"—perhaps forged the whole "Valley of Fear" Then, in glad July, Christopher Morley undertook an erudite study of the "authentic" texts to show that one of Holmes' parents was American, his grandmother, "sister of Vernet, the French artist" (vide "The Greek Interpreter") having emigrated to Massachusetts.

Now there appears in England, from the Constable press, a volume of "Baker Street Studies," by various acknowledged authorities, and it, though quite inadvertently, raises the question of what are the authentic texts—what, as the theologians would phrase it, is the canon? Indeed, this book directs the student's attention toward what can be adequately described only as the Great Holmes Heresy.

Father Ronald Knox, originator of "Sherlockholmitos," was the first to voice historic doubts about the volume known as "The Return of Sherlock Holmes." Since then there has arisen a sect which regards "The Case Book" as apocryphal. Nevertheless, the orthodox Holmesites, except when questioning a few obvious slips as to names and dates, accept the Murray Revised Version as their Holmes Bible. The majority of the contributors to these "Baker Street Studies" are in that galley; their fundamentalist attitude toward the Murray text is quite uncritical, and we submit that, considering the very special nature of the cult, such an attitude limits scientific inquiry.

Take the Moriarty Myth and its conflicting manifestations in "The Valley of Fear" and "The Final Problem." Leading Hicksite-Holmesists denounce as spurious either the former or the latter MS. But now comes Mr. A. G. Macdonnell, unwilling to doubt the texts, yet unable to reconcile them: he must lessen the glory of his hero by making him a liar, and a poor liar—is driven to conclude that Moriarty never existed and was simply invented by Holmes to excuse his professional failures.

There, of course, is where the serpent of the Great Holmes Heresy raises its tempting head. It bites these Gordian knots by shockingly assuming that Holmes was a Jekyll-Hyde, a single individual with two personalities. And thus it accounts for an out-and-out "criminal tendency" which followers dare to see in the adventures.

It was perhaps as a forestalling of this serpent that Mr. Vernon Randall, in his contribution about "The Limitations of Sherlock Holmes," declared that the Beglerbeg of Baker Street was never against the law. The declaration was, however, too violent. Immediately the London Times recalled the regrettable racing incident in "Silver Blaze," the blackmailing of the Duke of Holdernesse in "The Priory School," the robbery of Irene Adler. Mycroft Holmes, Sherlock's brother, was, says this critic, "undoubtedly a crook—and Mycroft was Sherlock's partner!"

After that the descent to Hell is indeed easy: "*Noscitur a socii*s—is it really possible that Sherlock Holmes led a double life as detective and criminal? A good angle of approach is offered by Miss Helen Simpson's attempt to make a plain tale of Dr. John Watson's medical career. It is, to be frank, not a possible medical career; and if we read . . . Mr. Bell's note on 'Dr. Watson's Wound,' we shall find it harder than ever to believe that the gunman, 'Jim Watson,' with the limping leg, who accompanied Holmes on so many nocturnal expeditions, can have been the Dr. John Watson who was wounded in the shoulder at Maiwand and whose fragmentary Reminiscences (the Ur-Watson), lying at the basis of 'A Study in Scarlet,' are really our only authentic contemporary source for the life of Sherlock Holmes, the detective."

Perhaps such a humble person as Holmes' much-tired landlady—of whom the first biography is here supplied by veteran Vincent Starrett—could have thrown some light on the subject. But she is not now to be found. And we dissent from the opinion of Miss Dorothy Sayers.

Miss Sayers "has been digging in the records of Cambridge University." She finds that "in the year 1874 a Sidney Sussex man named Thomas Scott Holmes obtained a First Class in the Natural Sciences Tripos." Tar from the Baconian theory's brush daubs the critic when he wonders whether "it is a mere coincidence that the first problem with which the detective Holmes ever dealt has come down to us under the title of 'The Gloria Scott.'" But, anyhow, it seems to him "quite possible that this Mr. Scott Holmes is identical with the clean-living, athletic, scientifically minded detective, refusing all knowledge unconnected with his job, whom we meet in 'A Study in Scarlet,' and who really can not be the same as the languid dope fiend and gourmet whom we encounter in 'The Sign of the Four' and subsequent studies."

No! For our part, whereas we see fatal discrepancies in the Murray Version, we can't accept these hypotheses. A great deal of valuable higher criticism has been expended on Holmes history, but mostly in wrong directions. All those scholars ought to get together and attack the subject of the origins of the manuscripts. They ought to give us a Definitive Text.

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

We Find Jollity.

HAMBURG, Germany—Dear Aleck: I can easily understand now the famous Munich beer garden putsch which catapulted Herr Hitler on the way to being a national planner. If wine is calculated to make one feel affluent, Aleck, beer makes one feel expansive.

BARGERON

We visited a beer garden on a Sunday night when it seemed to me that all of Germany had turned out for the same purpose. In the place I have in mind I estimate there were at least 2,000 beer drinkers, which at 300 pounds per person (conservative) would be 600,000 pounds of tonnage, which in turn, when lifted in one single voice, constituted quite a volume of music. I have always judged my operas, Aleck, not being able to understand them, by their volume. So you can imagine what an opera this was to me, although we Germans would call it nothing more than a saengfest, or something like that.

Not only, Aleck, would the customers all sing from the bottom of their chubby stomachs but so would the waitresses carrying, believe it or not, 20 steins of beer in their hands. Not on a tray, Aleck, but in their hands. I know what I am talking about because from the grand, general roar I distinguished a melodious bellow behind me, growing louder and louder as it approached. I turned just as it became a Niagara of voice to see a fraulein with 20 steins poised over my head. My little daughter, who is right chubby, immediately selected her career.

What I couldn't understand, Aleck, was how, if there is so much poverty in Germany, so many Germans could be paying 30 cents a stein for beer. This compares with our night club prices. My German friend explained that the Germans didn't buy so many of these beers at such a place, that they sang all the evening on a stein or two, and that furthermore this was about their sole pleasure. Well, it's not a pleasure to be sneezed at, as you Americans say.

• • • •

But another thing, Aleck, nobody will be able to make me believe there is a shortage of food. Come to think of it, nobody has tried to. But, anyway, every meal to which I have so far sat down has so overwhelmed me that it is with difficulty that I have eaten. You know what I mean, it has seemed like too great an undertaking. In the beer garden we had a platter of ham and eggs which was something to contemplate. One had to start in at this edge of the platter, then move to the other side and finally as one worked toward the center, get up in the platter itself. It had six eggs and a piece of ham at least a foot square. It was more diameter of ham than I have ever seen on a platter, Aleck. I'll bet they wouldn't let their planners "turn under" their pigs over here.

• • • •

Well, Aleck, they had a little propaganda playlet as a part of the entertainment. It had to do with Germany getting back her African colonies which the Versailles treaty took away. Gosh, she even wants them back, too.

Anyway, Herr Germany was doing an adagio dance, with the enemy represented by a Russian girl dancer. I don't suppose the nationality of the girl meant anything. They just have to get a lithe foreigner for an adagio dance. It would take a very hearty man to swing one of those German girls around.

Well, while he was dancing with her who should appear but his wife, (the African colonies). What she was doing, Aleck, was coming back to her husband. There was much ado. The chorus paraded by and congratulated the husband. The scene ended with him going into a frenzy against the enemy girl. He twirled her around his head and finally threw her into the river amid much rejoicing by everybody concerned.

The propaganda was wholly lost on me, though, Aleck, because I thought it was simply a case of a wife appearing and catching her husband with another girl. Yours for international misunderstanding, Aleck.

Camp Malone Gets Army Inspection

Clifton Forge, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Camp Malone, in Douthat State Park, near this city, one of the four CCC camps named to represent Virginia in the competition for the championship of the Third Corps Area, has been given a general inspection by a board of United States Army officers from Corps Area headquarters in Baltimore.

The officers, who are visiting the leading camps in Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania—to decide which is the best camp in the area—are Lieut. Col. C. S. Hamilton, of the quartermaster's corps; Lieut. Col. J. B. Richardson, of the adjutant general's department, and Capt. Francis W. Pruitt, of the medical corps.

At the conclusion of their tour of inspection the officers congratulated the company on its showing.

Drunken Driving Charged.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—William D. English, Mt. Rainier, Md., driver of a car which went into a ditch on the Leitersburg, Md., pike early yesterday, injuring one person, will be given a hearing here tomorrow on a charge of operating the machine while intoxicated.

Unemployment Frets Canada's 'New Deal'

More Than Million Still Idle Despite Definite Upturn of Business Under Prime Minister Bennett's Administration.

Canada's New Deal, put through by the Conservatives over Liberal opposition, is examined by Prof. T. W. L. MacDermot, of McGill University.

OTTAWA, Aug. 21.—Canada is still suffering from the depression, though commercial and industrial figures on all hands indicate a definite improvement. But the most lively interest just now is in the immediate political future.

The present administration, under the Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, came into power in 1930, and under our system is therefore due to go to the country next year. Whether or not the prime minister, who keeps his own council, will do the regular thing and anticipate the statutory end of his turn of office by holding an election this year has been the focus of much guessing for some months. There are those, particularly in the Liberal Opposition, who still allow their hopes to influence their judgment on the matter, because nothing would please them better than to have the election this fall.

Most people, amongst them some stout Conservatives, speak confidently, or resignedly, of a Liberal victory, partly because of the results of two provincial elections—in Ontario and Saskatchewan, where the Liberals were overwhelmingly victorious—and partly because of that strange political phenomenon, "the swing of the pendulum." In Ontario the Liberals were restored to power after 29 years; in Saskatchewan no Conservatives were returned to the Provincial House. And there is a general feeling that the present government has served its turn, and that it is time for a change.

On the other hand, there are no obvious signs that an election is coming, and newspaper comment says that Mr. Bennett desires to represent his country at the Jubilee Celebration of George V next year and will stay in office accordingly.

Speculation Gives Zest To Political Situation.

SUCH speculation gives zest to the study of political development in the Dominion. For example, in Ontario the new premier, Mr. "Mitch" Hepburn, the youngest premier in this country, is a conundrum to everyone. His youth, his highly colored language in election speeches and since, and the barefaced manner in which he says what he thinks about people and institutions, like the banks and his opponents, gave rise to many doubts as to how he would conduct the difficult business of governing.

So far he seems to have taken the unusual course of carrying out his election promises and with considerable tagacity. He has restored beer by the glass, sacked a large number of government employes, shaken up the administration of the Ontario Hydro-Electric. It remains to be seen, however, how far Mr. Hepburn will prevent politically partisan considerations from determining his appointments, for after 29 years he has many hungry followers.

Mr. Gardiner in Saskatchewan has a much more difficult task because of the dreadful results of crop failure, particularly in the southern parts of his province, and political bias in many people about Saskatchewan is for the time being eclipsed by sympathy with the hardships of the Saskatchewan farmers.

Tangible material for debate is to be found in the achievements of Parliament at Ottawa during the last session, which ended early in July. In its respectable way Canada has attempted its own revolution, or New Deal, or whatever one likes to call it. Mr. Bennett's government has put through, or prepared the ground for, a gigantic body of new legislation. The major items, in terms of four years ago are very advanced, and some of them have unpredictable possibilities.

New Bank Set Up To Control Currency.

THE Central Bank Act sets up the Bank of Canada "to regulate credit and currency . . . to control and protect the external value of the national monetary unit and to mitigate fluctuations in the general level of production, trade, prices, and employment, so far as may be possible."

The bank will control all gold now held by the government and the ten chartered banks of the country; the gold to be taken over at $20.67 an ounce. The privilege of note issue will be gradually withdrawn and the sole right eventually turned over to the Bank of Canada. Its capital structure is set at $5,000,000 and the shares at $50 each, will be sold publicly.

Its management will be vested in a governor, deputy governor, and seven directors. The governor will wield very wide powers, as no action of the board of directors will be valid unless agreed to by him. No one who is a director, officer, or employe of a chartered bank is eligible to be a director or shareholder of the Central Bank.

The act contains many other provisions, but the most prolonged and keenest debate arises over the issue of ownership. The opposition, Liberals and others, stood out solidly for a publicly-owned bank. The prime minister in reply warmly rejected this on the ground that such a provision would throw the bank open to the dangers of political influence and pressure, and for such an institution that would be fatal. But beyond question the act opens a new chapter in Canadian economic life and the greatest curiosity now exists as to who will be appointed first governor.

Marketing Board Act In New Legislation.

OTHER new legislation includes the Dominion marketing board act, which introduces for the first time the principle and mechanism of government-controlled production and markets into Canada; the shipping act, a vast and technical overhauling of Canada's shipping laws; the new franchise act, which simplifies and speeds up the conduct of elections and made suspicious people think an election was imminent, and the public works program, peculiarly notable because it is to be financed at $40,000,000 on straight inflation.

The marketing act gives extraordinary powers to the Dominion government to set up a far-reaching and comprehensive control of all natural products, except minerals, under a board having its headquarters at Ottawa. The board will regulate the marketing, and export and import, of all products likely to compete with goods produced in the country. It will fix the quality, grade, and quantity, and compensate for losses caused by the regulation, and it may issue licenses to producers under its authority. Local boards may be set up on the request of petitioners deemed to be representative by the government of the industry they speak for.

Here, too, it is impossible to go into full details. But the general significance is clear. Through the marketing act the government has definitely entered the field of a controlled economy, in order to curb the extravagances and injustices of competition, in this particular case in the interests of the agricultural classes. The bill was strongly supported by the socialistic members of the House, as well as the government. With one notable exception—a former minister of agriculture—it was as bitterly opposed by the Liberals. Their leader succinctly said, "It sets liberty at naught."

Two Vital Questions Still Await Answer.

IN this legislation, in the steps taken by the new Liberal Government of British Columbia, under Mr. Pattullo, in the new Nova Scotian regulation of the gasoline industry and in other directions, one sees the bowing out of "laissez faire" economics, and there are clear signs that the end is not yet.

For two very far-reaching questions now await answer; one the outcome of the inquiry of what was known as the Stevens committee on price spreads (now turned into a royal commission under the same chairman, Hon. H. H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce), and the other, amendments to the constitution of Canada.

For some months now, Mr. Stevens' committee has heard evidence on the financial structure, wages, and marketing practices of a number of retail businesses, and in the process has brought to light a mass of information of the most startling character. Mr. Stevens himself, in a pamphlet which itself has created a first class political issue, declares that there has been brought to his attention conditions in the industrial realm that "I did not believe existed."

The question now arises: What is the Government going to do? A serious disquiet has been caused by the enormity of the situation disclosed, and the ordinary citizen is already convinced that something will have to be done to deal with the wide ramifications of stock watering, infraction of minimum wage laws, and sweated labor that exists. But how far the Government will go is the question, and on its answer a good deal may hang.

Conference Called To Take Up Issue.

HOW far it can go, is the other problem which leads to the constitutional tangle. For under the British North America act, the provinces have definite and exclusive powers in matters of trade and commerce, and of labor legislation. Until the Dominion government takes power under an amended act, or arranges through cumbersome legislation by the provinces for a thorough overhauling of the social legislation, it will be difficult for it to build on whatever report the Stevens Commission may turn in. It is now reported that the Prime Minister has called for a provincial conference in October to take up the constitutional matter.

One last thing on which no satisfactory conclusions have yet been reached is unemployment. In spite of the upturn, Canada still has well over a million unemployed. And no systematic scheme for dealing with them on a national and coordinated scale has yet been worked out. Here again the conflict of powers between provincial and Federal power constitutes a bar to rational legislation.

It is not surprising, then, that Canadian opinion is intensely political in its color just now, or that the future seems to hold a jugful of excitement on a score of different points. The appointments to the many new and highly important offices created; the legislation to be offered by the government in its coming session; the outcome of the highly disputatious constitutional issue—each by itself is enough in normal times to occupy a front place in the news.

And all the more so with Mr. Bennett's government in power. For the Prime Minister, when all the judgments of party have been passed, has given the country, in the view of friend and critic alike, a government marked by a singular combination of courage and honesty; and these are exhilarating qualities.

Grand Jury to Probe Death of Hitch-Hiker

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—W. D. (Buck) Flick, 27, of Melrose, was ordered held for the grand jury on a hit-and-run charge today by Trial Justice Hamilton Haas.

The charge grew out of the death of Joe Ziobro, 22, a hitch hiker from Welch, W. Va., on the Valley pike last Wednesday night. Flick, out on bond, denied any knowledge of the accident.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Pint-Size.

TINY in size, but far from picayune in interest, are six little books and pamphlets today. Not one is in our three great, inexpensive series—Everyman's Library, the World's Classics, and the Modern Library. A couple of them form part of two other series, and part of the rest are originals. This last is certainly a tendency we should approve of—there is no more reason that every book, speaking broadly, but not so broadly as you might think, should measure and weigh the same as every other than there is that green peas should be bred as large as oranges. The best size for anything is the one which fits it. Mr. Hoover's commendable achievements in standardizing dimensions in manufacturing never intended such stodgy uniformity as we usually find in the book trade. Which is why today's little "sports" are hereby welcomed.

Lawrence Pearsall Jacks, editor of the Hibbert Journal (English philosophical review), gave the Hibbert lectures last year in four English cities. If his countrymen were pretty sick with a disease we might call malignant industriallsm, they could take heart. For the 74-year-old educator and philosopher came down out of airy realms and spoke directly to their mental confusion.

You complain of a machine-made world? Of confused thought everywhere? he said, in effect. But "you can not make the universe uninteresting without making the life we live in it uninteresting as well . . . if we make the order and agreement so complete and so rigid that nothing could disturb them, forthwith we are oppressed with a sense of futility." And he went on to speak of "the blessedness of nonconformity."

As to our mechanical era, "it is only a station on the road to . . . the most splendid creative age the world has ever seen." With faith and ardor Mr. Jacks pleaded for a spritual renaissance to control the machine.

Mark Twain once wrote an essay, originally printed in Harper's for September, 1899, which discussed the Jewish problem as sanely as anything now printed. If you don't own the volume, "In Defense of Harriet Shelley," into which it was collected, you might well read a little paper-bound reprint—"Concerning the Jews" (Harper, $0.25).

With all the zeal of a life-long resident of Kansas discussing the finer points of climbing Mount Everest, I like to argue on the topic of child-rearing. So, with my amateur standing clear, let me say that very few books on the subject seem to approach the sense and sensibility of Dr. James W. Howard's pamphlet, "Getting Acquainted With Your Children" (Leisure League, $0.25).

Dr. Howard, consulting psychologist of the Montclair, N. J., public schools, warns us that the depression should not be allowed to make children solitary and uncooperative. "When both parents at home are thinking and talking about their respective work in the world, we must expect the children to be over-impressed by the difficulty of earning a living."

His 64 brief pages cover a multitude of admirable points, including this especially neat one: "Surprise the children when they are bad by praising them for something they have done well some time before, if necessary until they swell with pride and begin to feel worth-while. Then very gently suggest that such a worth-while person really doesn't have to be a nuisance."

At least I know one or two youngsters to try that on.

All the speeches made at the mock trial of Nazidom last March in Madison Square Garden have been gathered in a little book—"The Case of Civilization Against Hitlerism" (Ballou, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents). Everything from sports to physicians was discussed, Samuel Seabury summed up the case, and John Haynes Holmes delivered the judgment—"The German government stands convicted by its own acts of a crime against civilization."

"Plastic Redirections in Twentieth Century Painting" is distinctly not a title to conjure with. But under it James Johnson Sweeney has written a very stimulating appraisal of modern movements in art (series of the Renaissance Society of the University of Chicago, $1.50). It is full of excellent, though small, reproductions, and has valuable biographical notes.

But I'm afraid it doesn't stimulate me to an equal admiration for modernism. As usual, the modernist pooh-poohs the representational in art. Yet why hasn't someone pointed out before that they're hoist with their own petard? For of course Picasso and Braque "represent!" And I'm sure most days in the week I'd rather look at a recognizable landscape or human face than an assortment of triangles, cubes, and polyhedrons, however, ingenious.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

By H. I. Phillips.
When Ruth Is Through.

("Babe Ruth announces this will be his last season playing baseball.—News item.)

The parks will still be baseball parks,
With fans who look the same;
Nine innings still will constitute
A regulation game
Nine baseball men will make a team
And hits will still be hits,
But baseball won't be quite the same
The day when Babe Ruth quits.

The bases will be full again,
The fans will shout and yell;
The count will go to three and two
As frenzied voices swell;
The sound of crashing hickory
Will make the thousands cheer—
But something will be missing when
The Babe's no longer here.

The winning run will be on third
With two men out, and lo!
Some mighty man will do his stuff
And smite the telling blow;
The fans will toss their hats in air
And roar in mad delight—
But it won't be the yell we knew
When Ruth was in the fight.

The bleachers they will rock with cries
For players swift and great;
They'll tear those straw hats up again
When heroes cross the plate;
The crowds will flock to see the games
As they have done for years—
But there'll be something lacking when Bambino disappears.

More "croocial" series will be fought
With harrowing suspense;
The fans will trek out to the parks
With passions most intense;
The flags will fly and bands will play
And shouts will split the air—
But it won't be the game it was
When Old Babe Ruth was there.

The kids will still climb trees and posts
To see their heroes fight;
In schools and homes the boys will talk
Of baseball men of might;
Through peek-holes still the young will squint
At ball games on the hill,
But when the Babe writes "Finis" it
Won't be the same old thrill.

The papers will proclaim the scores
And cite each stirring deed
That stirs the hearts of baseball fans
As all their cares recede;
We'll read of most prodigious feats
But still we'll know the truth—
There never lived a player who Was like George Herman Ruth!

Miriam R. Wiener Funeral Rites Held

Resident of Waynesboro Took Life by Gas.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held here today for Miss Miriam R. Wiener, 42, who took her own life Sunday in her gas-filled apartment here. Burial was in Hebrew Friendship Cemetery, Baltimore, this afternoon.

Coroner A. W. Thrush reported that Miss Wiener, despondent because of ill-health, left notes listing friends to be notified, declaring she was in her "right mind," but wanted to join her deceased mother and father.

Miss Wiener was the daughter of Simon Wiener, former real estate dealer. She was found by her maid, who became alarmed because she could not gain entrance.

Municipalities League Program Scheduled

Richmond, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Plans for the forthcoming convention of the League of Virginia Municipalities, scheduled to be held in Staunton Wednesday and Thursday, September 19 and 20, are progressing favorably.

Morton L. Wallerstein, executive secretary of the league, stated today that all speakers scheduled have accepted and indications point to a better attendance and greater interest than ever before. Several municipalities have already made reservations for their entire council and all department heads.

It Isn't a Smart Baby That Won't Howl When Hurt

By Robert Quillen

The martyr who "suffers in silence" always considers himself an innocent victim of wrong, but in almost every instance the fault is in some measure his own.

Consider the victims of the early morning lawn mower. He arises at 6 o'clock and the clatter of his industry ends the sleep of his neighbors. They hate him and mutter threats against him, but they make no protest.

They endure in silence, also, if the man keeps a dog that runs loose at night. The dog barks and keeps them awake and they are filled with rage, but they never say anything to the owner of the dog.

Another sufferer is the employe who has a grievance against the boss. In some particular known only to himself he isn't given a square deal. So he broods over his wrongs and pouts and magnifies the injustice he suffers until his mind is affected by the poison of his corked-up malice, but never once does he tell the boss what ails him. In the end he quits his job without explanation.

The family martyr is much like the employe. He is put upon or cheated. Or some mannerism of his mate—a way of drinking coffee, or slamming doors, or affecting a laugh—gets on his nerves. Whatever his grievance, he endures it with ever-increasing rage in his heart and keeps it to himself.

All of these martyrs and all of their kind feel innocent, but they are guilty of contributory negligence.

The average American is a decent sort who never intentionally makes himself a nuisance or treats anybody unfairly.

If he is stepping on your toes, he doesn't know it. He may be thoughtless, but he means well. Call his attention to the offense and at once you will have relief garnished with an apology.

G. A. Reinhard Funeral Today

Former Allegany Official Dies in Cumberland at Age of 76.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—George A. Reinhard, 76, former Allegany County treasurer and former president of the Cumberland city council, died yesterday.

Mr. Reinhard learned the sheet metal trade here. He later engaged in the grocery business. His last activity was as manufacturer of carbonated beverages. Four sons and two daughters survive.

Mr. Reinhard was one of the founders of Riverside Park. He also helped promote the Western Maryland Hospital, the first in the county. As president of the council he signed ordinances which started the movement for the new water supply from Evitts Creek and for the change from the ward system to the commission form of government.

He was a member of the SS. Peter and Paul Catholic Church, from which the funeral will be held tomorrow.

Frederick Williams Siefers, 65, retired merchant and distiller, died here yesterday. With a brother, the late Herman M. Siefers, he established the Will's Brook Distilling Co. at Ellerslie, which continued until 1920. He was a member of SS. Peter and Paul Catholic Church. Surviving is his widow, Mrs. Mary Grabenstein Siefers.

Dr. Hammond, 72, Dies in Frederick

Rites to Be Held Thursday for Retired Physician.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Dr. Robert Lee Hammond, 72, retired physician and member of a well-known family, died at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Bernard O. Davis, last night after a short illness.

He was a son of the late Dr. Richard T. Hammond and was born in Frederick in 1862. Early in life he moved to Woodsboro and after attending public schools entered the University of Maryland School of Medicine, in 1880, and was graduated in 1882. He returned to Woodsboro to practice and later succeeded his father. He was an ardent prohibitionist and was twice the candidate of his party for State Senator. In 1913 he came to this city and about ten years later retired on account of failing health.

Besides his wife, formerly Miss Fannie O. Gilbert, daughter of William H. Gilbert, he is survived by three sons, Harold D. Hammond, Libertytown; Reginald G. Hammond, Independence, Kans., and Paul B. Hammond, Frederick, and one other daughter, Mrs. C. C. Willis, this city. Funeral services will be held Thursday at 10:30 a. m. at the home, with interment in Mount Olivet cemetery.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

More Murder Stories.

An absolute hair-raiser is "Out Went the Taper," by R. C. Ashby. This is somewhat slow in getting under way, but after the first two or three chapters—you can safely take my word for it—it will hold your attention so that you will neglect everything else to find out what is going to happen next. And many things happen. The scenery is a gloomy, horror-haunted stone mansion in Wales, where the rain and thunder and wind and lightning serve as an appropriate accompaniment to deeds of violence. Only the utter stupidity of otherwise intelligent persons somewhat irritates me. There is a fine young American athlete in this group of British people; he is almost relieved to find that America has no monopoly of gangsters; in fact, this gang of murderers who do business in London and Wales could give lessons to many of our Chicago artists in crime. Knowing this, the young American is fool enough to hunt for the most desperate criminal unarmed, and then engage in a long and threatening conversation with him; he is saved from the otherwise certain effects of such folly by an accident. Then, this criminal's boss-criminal is invited by the police into a room for another conversation, and they do not even take the precaution of "frisking" him, so that he has no difficulty in murdering one of them. I am sure the fine record of British justice could not be maintained by such methods.

Another story of murder is "The Strangled Witness." The scenes are laid in Washington politics. A Senator of the United States is a man of the highest culture; we must remember this is a romance. Here there is a very clever detective, a double-crossing private secretary, and some lobbyists and other curiosities. The story is exceedingly interesting and the radio plays an important part in the detection of crime. I think, however, that most readers will agree with me that there is one serious defect in this book; the most attractive person in the entire story is horribly murdered. This breaks the rule for murder stories; the author should kill only those persons who ought to die.

"The Sinister Shadow," by Henry Holt, is one continual succession of thrills. I like plenty of action, and that is why I like this book. Things happen; and then more things happen. All is as it should be.

Cary P. Tatem, 86, Dies at Salisbury

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Cary P. Tatem, 86, retired commission merchant, of Baltimore, fell dead here yesterday as he was entering an automobile for a motor trip to Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. Tatem for the past three years had spent his summers in Salisbury and at the time of his death was accompanied by his son, Wright Tatem, of Lakeland, Fla.

He was the oldest active commission man in Baltimore up to the time of his retirement in 1928. He was a Civil War veteran and witnessed the battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac, his account of the encounter being used as an eyewitness story by many newspapers at that time.

Interment will be in Portsmouth, Va.

Mrs. M. O. Campbell Buried.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—The funeral of Mrs. Mary Onderdonk Campbell, wife of John O. Campbell, of St. James School here, who died at the home of her son, Louis deRronge Campbell, West Hartford, Conn., was held yesterday in Hartford.

Dick Powell, Singing Screen Star, Will Appear Here, in Person, Week of Sept. 21

To Be in East Five Weeks on Semi-Vacation

Earle One of Three Dates; Coming Fall Attractions; Theater Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Dick Powell, one of the most popular young stars in pictures, will appear in person at the Earle Theater in this city as headliner of the vaudeville bill booked for the week beginning Friday, September 21, according to announcement made yesterday afternoon by John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner interests in the Washington territory.

DICK POWELL.

Powell this week finishes work on his newest picture, "Flirtation Walk," in which he appears opposite Ruby Keeler, and will leave immediately with Joe E. Brown for a five-week vacation in the East. Three of the five weeks will be devoted to personal appearances and Washington is one of the three cities to be favored.

Keeps His Word.

This is partially in fulfillment of a promise made Mr. Payette in May, 1933, when Powell completed his first week of personal appearances at the Earle—following which, by the way, he was stricken with the flu in Baltimore and reached home on the West Coast seriously ill with pneumonia. At that time, he promised to return to Washington this year if his shooting schedule would permit. It permits, as it turns out.

Stage appearances are no novelty to Dick Powell, since he was an experienced master of ceremonies and stage performer before he ever entered pictures.

Announcement was not made of the Powell engagement on Thirteenth street until it had been confirmed by wire from the star yesterday.

Reverting momentarily to the recent visit of Dave Gould to this, his native, city, it should have been included in the observations appearing in this space yesterday to celebrate his presence that his next picture to be shown on a local screen will be "Down to Their Last Yacht," produced by the same sponsors that supplied the screen with "Flying Down to Rio." Mr. Gould staged all of the musical numbers in this opus and had the novel experience of being compelled to engage brunettes almost exclusively for his chorus because in certain sequences they had to appear as tropical natives and he wanted realism, instead of wigs and walnut stain.

He couldn't find 24 light blonde chorus boys, on one occasion, so he had to hire dark ones and dye their hair. Then he had to bear the expense of restoring the lads to their natural complexions.

"Down to Their Last Yacht" is the Labor Day week attraction at the RKO-Keith Theater, opening—but only presumably, Manager Hardie Meakin's impetuosity being what it is—on Friday, August 31.

A Payette Promise.

Commenting on the impending engagement in person of Dick Powell, Johnny Payette observes that "the booking of Dick at the Earle is only one of the many surprises that we have in store for Earle patrons during the coming season. Within the nert few days, we will announce the line-up of attractions that will play the Earle during September and October. I firmly believe that this line-up represents the finest entertainment the Earle Theater will have presented in all the years of its existence."

This seems a reasonable prognostication in view of the information already released as to the "split" of the Paramount screen product, which will be available to patrons of the Warner Brothers theaters in the Capital during the forthcoming year.

Paramounts on Way.

Among these releases are such widely prepublicized features as Bing Crosby's "She Loves Me Not," Marlene Dietrich in "The Scarlet Empress," another story of Catherine the Great of Russia; Mae West in "Belle of the Nineties," Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard in "Now and Forever," "Crime Without Passion," the new Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur production; "The Big Broadcast of 1934," with Lanny Ross, Jack Oakie, Jessie Dragonette and scores more of equal fame; Cecile B. De Mille's "Cleopatra," with Claudette Colbert, Henry Wilcoxon and Warren William; Damon Runyon's "The Lemon Drop Kid," with Lee Tracy; George Raft and Sylvia Sidney in "Limehouse Nights," "The Pursuit of Happiness," co-starring Francis Lederer and Joan Bennett, and other works of comparable promise.

Added to all these, of course, will be the joint product of the Warner Brothers and First National studios.

Since we are speaking of the Earle with a peculiar tenacity, it is interesting that the California Collegians, otherwise "The Seven Blunders of the World," headlining the current week's stage bill, started out for a five-week vaudevill tour immediately after closing in "Roberta" Washington was the first date on the route and their first vaudeville booking in more than a year. When they came off the stage after the first show last Friday, they were handed a telegram instructing them to return to New York not later than August 31, to go into rehearsal for the road tour of "Roberta." Thus Washington becomes not only their first but their last stand in the "varieties." Show business!

The headline stage attraction at the Earle the week of September 7, if you are still there, will be supplied by Isham Jones and his famous orchestra. This band has been penciled in at the Earle for the past year, but this is the first date it has been possible to secure. The picture will be "Desirable," with Jean Muir and George Brent. So now you know.

About "Jane Eyre"

Since "Jayne Eyre" may not be on the reading list of a majority of the present generation — although the statistical records seem to belie that suggestion—these salient facts concerning it may be pertinent:

Three generations have read the Charlotte Bronte novel, with the estimated total of readers exceeding 10,000,000 persons.

Three editions, or more, have been printed by each of 37 British publishers. Each edition ran to 25,000 copies, or more.

It has enjoyed an increasing, rather than diminishing, popularity ever since it was published three-quarters of a century ago.

One of Greatest Romances.

It has equaled, or surpassed, the best sellers of every generation since its publication in 1847.

It is rated one of the greatest dramatic love stories of the century.

It is a true and startling revelation of the life and romances of a girl born to love and live, whom tragedy stalked in her search for happiness.

Considering the manifold ramifications of the original plot, the many incidents and episodes that go to make up the written work and the necessity of condensing the narrative penned by the gifted Bronte into its most vital elements, the picture, now ringing up exceptional August attendance records at RKO-Keith's, represents a reasonably authentic adaptation of a piece of fiction that could not be wholly encompassed in the comparatively brief running time of the average film.

Came the mail. Surprise! Surprise!

A brown photomailer that bore no mark of differentiation from all the other brown photomailers that arrive at a dramatic desk when pried open with the solid gold office paper cutter revealed a particularly charming photographic study of little Shirley Temple, inscribed in her own baby chirography—if a few words of slightly sketchy printing could be called that. The inscription is, "To Mr. Bell. Love, Shirley Temple."

The sentiment is very cordially reciprocated and, to be perfectly honest about it, our handwriting isn't so much better than Shirley's!

Fair Warning Note.

Addresses Press Club Tomorrow

One of the ace directors of the motion picture industry, whose spectacular productions have grossed more at the boxoffice than any others, Cecil B. De Mille will address members of the National Press Club and their guests at luncheon tomorrow in the auditorium of the club. Mr. De Mille's topic will be "What Hollywood Thinks of Censorship." His latest release is "Cleopatra," starring Claudette Colbert in the title role, and his next will be "The Crusades."

Maxie Baer Not to Enter Prize Ring in New Picture; Warner Baxter Is the Busiest Actor in Films; Newsy Notes From the Heart of Filmdom.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Aug. 21.—Not once will Max Baer be in the prize ring in his next picture. Decision has been arrived at regarding this feature. It is the Damon Runyon story, "Kids on the Cuff," and Maxie Baer will be here within two or three weeks to appear in the production. Adela Rogers St. John is doing the adaptation.

FRANK MORGAN.

Gertrude Michael is to appear in the feminine lead, and David Holt, 7 years of age, will have a special part written in for him. This boy actor has attracted attention on both stage and screen. Throughout the picture Baer will be anxious to get into the prize ring, but will never actually be shown there.

* * * *

Neil Hamilton Again Explorer.

Neil Hamilton has been selected to appear in "By Your Leave," which is accumulating quite a cast, what with Frank Morgan and Genevieve Tobin in other leading roles, and Margaret Hamilton and Betty Grable, who is now singing at the Deauville Club, scheduled to appear. Hamilton, by virtue of his experience in "Tarzan," is again to fill the role of an explorer. It seems to be his line nowadays. Lloyd Corrigan is to direct the feature.

* * * *

Wynne Gibson Flying East.

Another actress who will be en route is Wynne Gibson. She leaves by plane today for New York, there to pay opposite George M. Cohan in "Gambling." Miss Gibson has just finished the lead in "The Captain Hates the Sea."

* * * *

New Singer for "Sweet Adeline."

There's a new find for "Sweet Adeline." It's Olive Jones, popular singer at the Central Park Casino. She is to arrive here in a few days. Also Irene Dunne definitely signed yesterday for the role played by Helen Morgan on the stage. Others assigned are Wini Shaw and Hugh Herbert, who will appear in the comedy part played by Charles Butterworth on Broadway. Mervyn Leroy is to direct.

* * * *

Binnie Barnes Leaving Today.

Binnie Barnes will leave for England today. She came out here for a single picture, but her contract was carried on for a second, and she is to return in February. The Catherine Howard of "Henry VIII" is considered an acquisition at Universal. However, it is necessary for her to spend the remainder of the year in England because Alexander Korda required her talents. Miss Barnes played in "There's Always Tomorrow," and "What Women Dream."

* * * *

From Horse Racing To Aviation.

Warner Baxter isn't having a moment off between films. He has just finished work on "Broadway Bill" and the intention is to begin the filming of "Hell in the Heavens" Monday. Both features levy extraordinarily severe requirements, for the actor played the great majority of the scenes in the Frank Capra race track story and will be required to do fully as much duty in his new aviation enterprise.

* * * *

Pageant of the Film World.

An original story is being written for Baby Jane Quigley by Doris Anderson. The youngster is the little girl discovery of Universal . . . Robert Barrat is to appear as the Padre in "Bordertown," while others assigned are Oscar Apfel, Robert McWade, Arthur Stone and Wallis Clark . . . "Sure Fire" is being prepared for Gene Raymond. Ralph Murphy is to direct, while Very Caspary is doing the adaptation . . . This will be Raymond's first Columbia picture under his contract with that studio.

Mrs. Gormley Elected Head Of Fusion Unit

Mrs. Harold Smith Named Permanent Secretary of Rockville Club.

Mrs. Harry Gormley, of Rockville, president of the Montgomery County Garden Clubs, was elected permanent chairman of the Rockville Women's Unit of the Fusion Club of Montgomery County at a meeting in the Rockville Courthouse, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. John A. Holmes, temporary chairman.

Mrs. Harold C. Smith, of Rockville, was elected permanent secretary. Mrs. Holmes called the meeting to order and then tendered the gavel to Mrs. Gormley after the elections.

Harold C. Smith, Rockville attorney, who withdrew from the race for Republican nomination for Representative from the Sixth Congressional Maryland District when Fred Zihlman, former incumbent, filed, was speaker at the meeting. He outlined the aims and plans of the Fusion movement.

Mrs. Harvey L. Wiley, of Washington, spoke on "Civic Responsibilities of Women." She emphasized the necessity for participation by women in politics for the betterment of all government. Mrs. Frank L. Chaney, of Takoma Park, explained the methods used by the Republican women of Takoma Park in the recent campaign there which reelected Mayor Frederick L. Lewton and his ticket.

Idaho Town Is Saved From Forest Blaze

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 21 (AP).—The 200 residents of Avery, Idaho, resumed their normal life today as more than 600 fighters assured them the forest fire which threatened to destroy the town definitely was checked.

Although the fighters lost some ground during the night, the flames moved past the town and forest officials announced that unless the wind changed the town was out of danger. Reassuring reports came from many fire fronts in western Montana, northern Idaho and California, but major blazes still raged.

Worst Danger Spots for D. C. Traffic Listed

14th and Rhode Island Northwest Leads in Fatalities.

A list of the worst danger spots in Washington traffic and a call for elimination of three dangerous grade crossings were isued yesterday by the American Automobile Association's District of Columbia Motor Club, and the Keystone Automobile Club, respectively.

The intersection of Fourteenth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest is listed as the most dangerous in the city, with four fatalities there between January 1 and July 31. The intersection at Fourteenth street and Maryland avenue northeast ranked second, with three deaths.

The intersection at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest saw 15 persons injured, while 12 were hurt at North Capitol street and Massachusetts avenue and an equal number at the viaduct on Rhode Island avenue. Heaviest property damage was suffered at Massachusetts avenue and North Capitol street, where there were 55 collisions. Ninth and U streets northwest and Fourteenth and F streets northwest ranked second and third in this category.

The three grade crossings which the Keystone Automobile Club wants eliminated are the Michigan avenue crossing in Brookland, the Eastern avenue crossing in Benning and the Bates road crossings about half a mile beyond the Michigan avenue crossing.

The club statements assert that "immediate steps should be taken to develop passes which will make unnecessary the passage of motor traffic over railroad tracks at grade crossings at these points.

"Their elimination not only would increase safety, but also would prove to be a constructive influence in the local employment situation."

Widow Asks $50,000 For Mate's Auto Death

George P. Marshall, owner of the Palace Laundry, was sued for $50,000 damages in the District Supreme Court yesterday on charges that his chauffeur invited John H. Jerman, jr., for a ride and then drove the machine in such a reckless manner that the passenger was thrown out and killed.

Fairbanks-Pickford Reunion Likely—At Studio Meeting

Hollywood's 'Royal Couple' May See Each Other at Conference.

Hollywood, Aug. 21 (AP).—A possibility that the estranged heads of Hollywood's "Royal House"—Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks—at least will meet over a conference table, was reported unofficially today after Fairbanks returned from a long stay abroad, still refusing to discuss a possible reconciliation.

It was said that Joseph M. Schenck, president of the United Artists studio, may call a special meeting of the owners, consisting of himself, Fairbanks, Miss Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Samuel Goldwyn. Fairbanks and Miss Pickford, who sued him for divorce more than a year ago, jointly own physical assets of the studio.

About his ambitious picture-production program—one of his reasons for coming here—Fairbanks was as voluble and enthusiastic as he was reticent about his private life.

He told of planning an "epic" picture which, he said, would be the "'Cavalcade' of China," portraying the wars of Genghis Khan, Tamerlane and other conquerors. He said the picture would deal also with teachings of the ancient Chinese philosophers, such as Confucius and Lao Tse.

"I will play only a small part in this picture," said Fairbanks. "You might say I will play 'Polo in China. My role will be that of Marco Polo, the Italian traveler whose writings have revealed to modern people most of what we know about ancient China."

He told also of other historical pictures which his English company is to produce, but in which he will have no part.

At least outwardly, Fairbanks seemed to Hollywood the same dashing "Doug" of old. He appeared to retain the fitness he had when he sported the plumed hat, doublet and jackboots of his D'Artagnan. He said, however, he was having to watch his diet.

Services Held For Magruder

Citizen of North Woodside in District Engineering Office Many Years.

Funeral services for Oliver Barron Magruder, 77, of North Woodside, Md., associated for more than 30 years with the District of Columbia Engineering Department, were held yesterday afternoon from Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, rector, officiating. Burial was in St. John's Episcopal Cemetery, Beltsville, Md.

Mr. Magruder, who was a native of Washington, had lived in Beltsville nearly all his life, moving to North Woodside about three years ago. He was employed as a civil engineer by the District of Columbia, and retired five years ago. He died Sunday at his home, 9407 Columbia boulevard, after a long illness.

Man Arrested In Fatal Crash

Washington Woman Dies, Six Are Hurt, at Elkridge.

Elkridge, Md., Aug. 21 (AP).—Gordon Harrison, 29, of Greensboro, N. C., was held today for action of Coroner Nelson Lilly in the accident on the Baltimore-Washington boulevard in which a colored woman was killed.

Harrison and five other passengers of the two automobiles, which collided on a curve early today, were injured.

Mrs. F. E. Rodriguez, a native of Puerto Rico and now residing in Baltimore, was in a serious condition in St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore. She had several fractured ribs and possible internal injuries.

Her sister, Miss Maria Padilla, suffered cuts, bruises and possible rib fractures. Harrison, driver of the car in which the two women were riding, was treated for cuts. The fourth occupant, Luther Sieck, of Baltimore, escaped uninjured.

Virginia Ross, 20, Washington, was dead when taken to a Baltimore hospital. The three other colored persons in the car with her were Alphonso Ridley, driver, and Charles Berry, 19, of Washington, and Elly Thomas, 18, of Cumberland.

Thomas had a fractured skull, Berry a fractured jaw and Ridley was treated for cuts.

Redford Freed In "Racketeer" Slaying Probe

A coroner's jury verdict of "justifiable homicide" yesterday exonerated William Redford, colored, in connection with last Saturday's "racketeer" shooting at New Hampshire avenue and Quincy street northwest.

Redford, reputed bodyguard for a "numbers" collector, admitted he shot and killed Harry E. Sladko, alias Irving, during an attempt to rob Walter John Harper, alleged "numbers" operator. The jury held he shot in self-defense.

Sladko, it was testified, approached Harper's parked automobile as the latter prepared to deliver $200 to his "boss" in the 3800 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest. He drew a gun and demanded that Harper give him the money.

Redford, who with Clarence Gomillion, colored, was assigned to guard the "numbers" receipts, wheeling as he stepped from the car, also drew a gun. Both men fired at the same time. Sladko dropped with a bullet in his stomach. Redford was struck in the cheek.

Harper told the jury he was "so scared he jumped behind a tree." He said he did not see the exchange of shots. Mrs. Gertrude Flournoy, of 114 Adams street northwest, visiting in a nearby apartment house, said she saw Redford drop and fire from a prone position.

Meanwhile, police are seeking three men, believed to have been with Sladko when he was shot. They dragged him into a waiting automobile and sped away. Some time later Sladko's body was thrown from the machine in front of the Homeopathic Hospital.

Soon after yesterday's inquest, Gomillion was arrested by members of the police vice squad and charged with permiting gaming. Police indicated the charge was for an old offense.

Senator's Daughter Is Bride

Miss Laura Barkley Wed to Mr. Douglas MacArthur.

Residence on Cleveland Avenue Scene of Ceremony.

The attention of Washington society yesterday centered about a simple wedding which took place in the late afternoon in the Cleveland avenue home of the Senator from Kentucky and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, whose daughter, Miss Laura Barkley, became the bride of Mr. Douglas MacArthur, son of Mrs. Arthur MacArthur and of the late Capt. MacArthur, United States Navy.

The drawing rooms were decorated with clusters of white hydrangeas arranged against a background of dark green palms and ferns. The date was the wedding anniversary of the bridegroom's parents. The Rev. Francis Yarnell performed the ceremony at 5 o'clock.

Senator Barkley gave his daughter in marriage. She was attired in a gown of deep ivory satin, made on severely simple lines. The V neckline was moderately high, the sleeves were long and fitted and the coat effect fell into a V at the back, forming a brief train. She carried an ivory-bound prayer book from which fell a shower of lilies-of-the-valley. Although the bride was unattended, her sister, Mrs. Max O. Truitt, stood beside her during the ceremony. Mrs. Truitt was wearing a becoming gown of rust lace made with a brief jacket and a train. She had a shoulder corsage of gardenias.

Wedding Reception.

Mr. MacArthur was attended by his brother, Mr. Bowman MacArthur, as best man. Mr. B. Frank Gebest, who was the bride's music instructor, played the wedding march.

After the ceremony there was a reception for the guests. The young couple were assisted in receiving by their mothers. Mrs. Barkley wore a gown of bronze crepe with lace cape and touches of tourquoise at the neck. Her corsage was of gardenias. Mrs. MacArthur had on a gown of pearl gray chiffon printed in light blue and wore a cluster of gardenias.

Among those who assisted in serving were Miss Mary Elizabeth MacArthur and Mrs. Bowman MacArthur. Miss MacArthur had on a frock of old rose crepe with which she wore a white hat and accessories. Mrs. MacArthur wore a frock of gray and blue crepe and a matching hat.

Leave on Wedding Trip.

Later Mr. MacArthur and his bride left on a wedding trip, the latter wearing a smart ensemble of brown necktie silk and brown hat and accessories. Upon their return they will be at home at the Valley Vista Apartments.

Young Mrs. MacArthur is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Barkley, of Paducah, Ky., and of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brower, also of Kentucky. The bride was graduated from Holton Arms School and later attended the Sophie Newcomb School in New Orleans.

Mr. MacArthur was graduated from Milton Academy in 1928 and received his bachelor of arts degree from Yale University in 1932. He subsequently attended the Foreign Service School, finishing with high honors. While awaiting an appointment he is on active duty with the War Department as adjutant of the subdivision for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Bride of Yesterday Afternoon

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. DOUGLAS MacARTHUR, who, before her marriage yesterday afternoon to Mr. MacArthur, was Miss Laura Barkley, daughter of Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, and Mrs. Barkley. Mr. MacArthur is the son of Mrs. Arthur MacArthur and is a nephew of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, U. S. A.

Mrs. Maud Smith Makes Play Debut

New Numbers Introduced in "The Drunkard."

Special interest was attached to the performance of "The Drunkard" last night, since it was the first appearance of Mrs. Maud Howell Smith in the role of the "mother" in the play, and new members were introduced in the popular "olio" by Miss Rebecca Tarwater and Miss Ethel Hayden.

Among those who entertained parties at the play were Mr. Andre Cattaui, attache of the Legation of Egypt; Mr. H. L. Rust, jr., Maj. and Mrs. Guy Withers, Mr. and Mrs. Hilmer R. Bauhage, Mr. Percy Byrd, Mr. James Councilor, Mr. R. C. Alexander, Mr. James L. Hall.

A preponderance of summer-time "bachelors" entertaining other summer-time "bachelors" is noted in the three-times-a-week audiences.

Mrs. Dean E. Brown, jr., of Washington, is at the Berkshire Hotel in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville D. Church, accompanied by Miss Mallory D. Church, will sail today aboard the President Roosevelt for Europe. They will return to the Capital for the winter.

Culbertson on Bridge

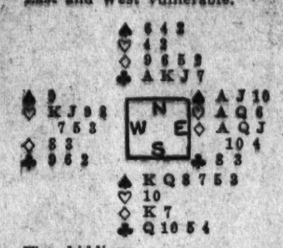
The Right Time for Charity.

Among the many plays designed to prevent one's opponents from making full use of their entries a great majority are the conventional entry-killing plays which remove high cards from an opponent's hand before the right to lead is important to him. The timing of the play at Contract Bridge is such that very often an entry is not valuable to one opponent early in the hand, whereas after several rounds he could use an entry to great advantage.

In the following beautiful hand the Declarer is forced to anticipate by several moves a brilliant line of defense which is planned against him; he must foresee the fact that the success of this defense depends on the existence of an entry card in the hand of one adversary; and finally, by a counter move, he must cut off all chance of his opponents' transferring the lead to the only hand which could make the play to defeat him. The rarity of Declarers who are able to arise to such a situation is indicated by the fact that when a hand like this was submitted recently to half a dozen of the best known experts not one of them was able to find the correct technique. In the Culbertson System of Play the general principle underlying this hand has given birth to an entire group of similar entry-killing plays, of which the original, which is given below, is still one of the most interesting.

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	Pass	1◇
1♠	3♡	3♠	4♡
4♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

In the bidding North and South wisely choose to sacrifice, being confident that they can not be heavily set, and seeing no hope of defeating a vulnerable game.

The final contract is four spades doubled, against which West opens the diamond eight. This is won by East's Ace and the Queen returned, which tells South's King. A club is now played to the King and a small spade led, on which East properly plays the Ten. South winning with the Queen.

South is now too wise to think that the two remaining spades will break. East's Double was more than likely based upon the A J 10 of trumps and it seems necessary to return to Dummy and lead through the Ace again. But as the hand was originally played, South was aware that East, a very brilliant player who ranks among the country's finest, would win with his spade Ace and put his partner in with a heart to return a club. East could ruff the club and thus defeat the contract.

A wise South must foresee this possibility. He must realize that East, having bid diamonds, supported hearts and doubled spades, can hold at most two clubs. It is suicidal therefore to allow West to get the lead after East's last club is gone. But a simple solution to this difficulty is to allow West to lead before East is in a position to ruff clubs. South's next play is therefore his singleton heart! West can win this trick, but the lead does him no whit of good. He can return a club in the hope that East had a singleton, but this is won in Dummy and East must follow, whereupon a spade is led, East puts up the Ace, and now when he leads a small heart South ruffs and captures the Jack of spades with his King before there is any danger of its winning a trick. By means of this play South succeeds in losing only one spade, one heart and one diamond, and the contract of four spades, which was intended as a sacrifice, instead proves to be good for a doubled game.

Court Clerks Hold Annual Meet Here

Margaret Long Is Third to Crash This Field of Endeavor.

SHE comes from the land of Manana, si, senor, it is true, But there is no suggestion of procrastination in the brisk walk and spirited manner of Mrs. Lula G. Donahue of Puerto Rico, delegate to the thirteenth annual conference of Federal Court Clerks, combined with the fourth annual conference of secretaries and law clerks to Federal judges, which opened at Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

There was nothing slow, either, about her movements back in 1926, when she won the enviable distinction of being the first woman ever appointed to a Federal clerkship. This, say her admiring fellow delegates, was attained, not because she could fill the position as well as a man, but because she could fill it better. Thus, they explain, do women break precedents.

There are now 5 women Federal court clerks out of a list of approximately 76 throughout the United States and insular possessions. Miss Margaret Long, who was the third woman to crash this heretofore strictly masculine field, is also enjoying her first clerk's convention.

A Huge Job.

Having served as deputy clerk for a number of years in the large District of Northern Indiana, Miss Long was appointed in 1928. She now has a staff of five deputies under her. Her territory taking in 33 counties, she and her staff keep the court records on approximately 700 Federal Court cases a year, including bankruptcy proceedings.

Her other duties include collecting fines and costs and guiding the footsteps of the younger lawyers through their early attempts at Federal Court procedure.

Evidence of the popularity of women Federal clerks among members of their own profession was the election of one of them, Miss May Sickmon, of Buffalo, N. Y., to the vice presidency of the association at the last annual conference. Speculation as to the next woman to follow her into officialdom was prevalent among the delegates yesterday.

Requirements for Secretaries.

Pretty Verna M. Allen, president of the Association of Secretaries and Law Clerks, who hails from South Bend, Ind., has her own ideas of what constitutes a good secretary to a Federal judge.

"It isn't so much an expert knowledge of typing and shorthand, although that helps," she declared, "as it is an attitude of sympathy and consideration. The secretary must be efficient, on her toes constantly to meet every situation, and capable of making quick and judicious decisions.

"She has to meet and talk with the families of prisoners. She must be sympathetic, and yet not let down the bars of her own reserve. She must be able to sort them out tactfully, to know which should be allowed in to see the judge, and which should not.

"She must keep in mind the physical endurance, time and schedule of her employer, and not let anything happen that would disrupt his plans or embarrass him."

Elected to the presidency of the Association of Secretaries and Law Clerks at the last conference, Mrs. Allen has enjoyed contact with members of the association from every State in the Union. The purpose of the annual conference, she said, is to exchange ideas and secretarial methods. She believes secretaries and law clerks have an opportunity to contribute materially to the improvement of legal procedure.

From Far Away.

The chance to see Washington while "history is in the making" was the incentive which drew many of the delegates from long distances to the present conference. This was the case of attractive Mary Conger, deputy clerk of the northern district of Texas. Her district, which reaches from the Panhandle to picturesque San Angelo, is the only one of the four in Texas represented at the present conference.

One of the main events of interest to the women delegates yesterday was a tea at the Mayflower, given in their honor by the Women's Bar Association of the District. Mrs. Rebecca S. Greathouse was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Vice President May Sickmon, of Buffalo, N. Y., will address the 12:30 luncheon held at the Mayflower today. Scenic trips beginning at 1:30 will take in Mount Vernon, Alexandria and interesting spots along the Potomac.

Voters' Secretary to Go West for Month's Visit

Miss Beatrice H. Marsh, executive secretary of the National League of Women Voters, will leave Thursday for a month's stay in New Mexico.

For the first part of her vacation, Miss Marsh will be the guest of Miss Mary Bulkley, of Hartford, Conn., at her ranch, Vermejo, in Wagon Mound, N. Mex. Miss Bulkley is a former director of the National league.

Later, Miss Marsh will be a guest at another ranch in Springer, N. Mex., and before her return to Washington, on September 24, she will visit the World's Fair.

Relax to Gain A Long Life, Doctor Says

He Attributes Many Early Deaths to Failure to Learn How.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21 (AP).—Relax, urges Dr. Edmund Jacobson, University of Chicago physiologist. In the same breath he asks, "Can you relax?"

Complete relaxation, as he sees it, is something more than stretching out in a chair or on a bed with some muscles eased but other delicate muscles still tense, to be tormented by the problems of a busy day.

A person who is thoroughly relaxed is free from all muscular contractions save affected by the self-actuating contractions of the heart, says Dr. Jacobson. Even in thinking and in most sensations man experiences minute tensions in delicate muscles which are brought into play, the physiologist finds.

"It is physically impossible to be nervous in any part of your body if in that part you are completely relaxed," he says.

In the case of the business men, Dr. Jacobson attributes many early age deaths, particularly those since 1929, partly to a failure to relax.

"Unfortunately," he says, "when the executive leaves his place of business for the day his cares generally go with him. Tensions which have been present during the preceding hours are likely to continue in the background of his evening occupations."

Dr. Jacobson declares a business man who has mastered the art of relaxation would not take his own life. "Modern invention and labor saving machinery have relieved physical drudgery," he says, "but have apparently only increased the nervous strains.

One method to effect relief, at least in part, might be a return to a simpler way of life. But this solution seems practically impossible; the complexities of modern living evidently are here to stay."

Accepting this as the inevitable conclusion, he says the question resolves itself into one of "cultivated" relaxation. Laboratory studies have led him to conclude relaxation is necessary in all walks of life, even to the society matron with overwrought nerves.

"The hostess at a dinner party or reception engages in many hours of trying arrangement of detail not apparent to the casual observer and is frequently not at her ease until the entire evening lies in the past," he says. "Small talk, conventional at such affairs, when protracted, may make a demand upon nervous energies comparable with that required for concentrated work."

In learning to relax, Dr. Jacobson recommends a course requiring careful thought and practice until one acquires it as a habit. The arms, legs, eyes, lips and other parts of the body must be free of tension if relaxation is to be complete, he holds.

Magazines Dealt in High Romance Back When Women Were Womanly

"'My darling, you must be my wife!' said Harold Ingram." These words explain the touching illustration for "Weak or Wicked? Or, Florence Muriel's Heart," a popular serial in a leading woman's magazine of the 70's.

Dress Patterns and Food Recipes Weren't Hot News Then.

What was the reading fare of women in 1876?

The answer to this may be found in a complete file of two feminine periodicals widely popular 58 years ago. Discovered by Mr. V. Valta Parma, director of the Rare Book Room of the Library of Congress, this file—one of the few in existence—was recently added to the Rare Book Collection.

What did these magazines contain? Patterns for samplers? Short stories centered around the Unhand-Me-Villain motif? Household hints? Fashion notes?

This is the first of two articles on Girls of Today, which later became the New York Mirror—a woman's magazine that reached the heights of feminine popularity.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

EVEN those who long for the good old days when a womanly woman did not intrude on man's prerogatives may wonder what constituted feminine interest in the era when women were excluded from politics; when they were a minus quantity in the business world and, when they were, at most, a charming background in the social realm.

Certainly women of that day were not concerned with whether President Grant would be succeeded by a Democrat or a Republican, nor bothered because the spoils system had triumphed over civil service reform. What then were their interests?

The publisher of Girls of Today asked himself this question and answered it satisfactorily in an eight-page magazine published weekly, purporting to "delineate society and human nature—by the pens of the most charming men and women writers, in serials of singular power, beauty and interest—in stories of enchanting merit—in sketches at once delightful and captivating—in poems and pungent essays — in departments of news, gossip, information and use."

Frank Starr, ostensibly the publisher, was in reality the head of the packing house of the Beadle Co., which made a fortune on a publishing venture that featured dime novels. Beadle had looked on the wall of the future and seen the handwriting that spelled the eventual doom of the paper-backed thrillers in favor of magazines with departmental features.

As a result he began publishing Girls of Today, with Frank Starr's name on the masthead and the back door of his publishing house as the address.

Its favorable reception was proof Beadle had again felt the popular pulse and prescribed the most effective weekly reading dose.

"Girls of Today," aptly subtitled "A Mirror of Romance," included a wide variety of subjects slanted for feminine appeal. A series of tabulations dealing with the Language of Names met with instant response. A popular departmental feature called "Mirror of Today" dealt with such diverse subjects as Beautiful Feet" and "American Flirts."

Concerned With Love.

A feature continued through a number of issues was the "Language and Etiquette of Love, Courtship and Marriage," which the editor designated as "A series of papers treating of the ruling passion in all its phases—the incipient friendship, confiding regard, the dawn of love, love in its unfolding, courtship and marriage."

Surprisingly, there is not a pattern nor a recipe in any issue of this popular woman's periodical. Could it be our grandmothers were less concerned than they were reputed to be with how to make gingerbread, how to piece a fancy quilt, and how to crochet lace doilies?

Judging from the table of contents of "Girls of Today" it would seem their major interests centered around romance and marriage. This probably accounts for the popularity of such essays as "Kissing" by an amateur, "Leaves From the Life of a Flirt," and "The Successful Suitor."

"How to Conduct a Courtship" was another of the widely-read features. It contains such explicit directions as "Don't be too sudden about it. Take a dark night for it. Have the blinds closed, the curtains drawn, and the lamp turned 'most out.

"Sit near enough to her so that you can hook your little finger into hers. Wait until conversation begins to lag, and then quietly remark, 'Susie, I want to ask you something.' Pause here for a while, but keep your finger firmly locked."

After further advising the suitor to "Go slowly. You can't be too rash about these things," directions proceed as follows:

"Put your hand on your heart and continue: 'If I only knew—if I was only certain that my heart had not deceived me—!

"Now hold on. Give the wind a chance to sob and moan around the gables. This will make her lonesome and call up all the love in her heart. When she begins to grow restless, you can finish."

Then the serials. Such popular continued stories as "Weak or Wicked; or, Florence Muriel's Heart" and "Born in a Storm; or, Yellow Jude's Secret" sent feminine readers back to news counters week after week for the newest copy of "Girls of Today."

"Weak or Wicked," dealing with Florence Muriel, a girl who "gave the wrong impression though she had a heart of gold and an unsullied soul," brought an instant response from readers, probably because the hero, "Mr. Ingram" was the answer to every feminine fiction reader's prayer in the '70's.

The Book-Binder Girl.

Sentimental verse and short stories rounded out the contents of "Girls of Today." A typical three-column narrative was "Myrtle Raplye, the Book Binder Girl," done by the formula of most short fiction of that day.

Edmund Osgood, "a sallow-faced, dark-haired man, with treacherous, shifting eyes," has designs against the lovely Myrtle, who is poor but nice. But in the nick of time she is protected by Gilbert Renard, "a good-looking, young fellow, with a frank and open face," and the narrative concludes happily—after Osgood is "hoist by his own petard" with this paragraph:

"Myrtle became the wife of Gilbert. And now a brown-eyed cherub sits crowing in her lap—a darling babe, with the witching brown eyes of his mother and the curling locks of his father. A well-spring of joy—that gift of heaven—to the heart of her who was once the book-binder girl."

Nine or Ten Feet of Satin Train Follows The Smart Bride Down the Church Aisle

In truly regal fashion this bride will sweep down the church aisle with her 3-yard satin train. The dress has a molded waist buttoning down the back.

One Designer's Wedding Dress Takes Half an Hour to Don.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (AP).—The trains on the new fall wedding gowns mean a heavy day's work for some bridal atteendants. Nine or ten feet of shimmering satin will slither down the aisle behind the bride.

To dress the bride will be no small task, too, if she has chosen Germain Monteil's favorite wedding robe. Close-set, satin-covered buttons extend down the back of its waist and from elbow to wrist on the long, tight sleeves.

The attendant who is at all nervous will allot herself 30 minutes to get the buttons fastened.

This designer, who is called "the Schiaparelli of American Design," has a penchant for trains, surpassed only by her love for frills and bows.

This fall she gives women a chance to wear stiff white jabots that protrude 4 inches from severe black frocks.

And "fish-tail" trains. She still likes them, although many designers have chopped them off. A pert little train for evening and a deep skirt slash in front.

A long-sleeved formal gown of silver lame had a low-cut pointed back and a high front neckline. Some of her metallic evening coats were fashioned on the lines of a man's cutaway.

Posture Big Part of Chic—If It's Good

Clothes Fit Better When One Stands Erect and Correctly.

Here Is an Exercise to Do Away With That Slouch.

By Frances Mangum.

WOMEN who have been figure-conscious for years are becoming posture-conscious. Every season when the time rolls around for them to assemble new wardrobes they become aghast that size 18 is now too tight. Or they are alarmed over the lack of fit to clothes they want.

They see a model walk across the room in just the suit they want. It's their style, their size. They try it on and find it bags across the shoulders and is tight in the waist. They blame these defects on the suit; no one dares to tell them that if they held their shoulders up and straightened up their back the suit would fit them as it does the model.

A Big Part of Chic.

Posture makes so much difference in the way one wears clothes. Unless a woman holds herself properly she can not expect anything she buys to look well on her. She can not expect to look smart.

Many couturiers have agreed that style is posture in part, a kind of distinctive bearing, an ease of manner that comes from correct standing and walking.

There are many women who realize this who do not have the faintest idea how to rid themselves of posture defects.

It's very simple, but requires persistence and consistence. In the first place pulling the abdomen in and straightening up will help immeasurably. At the same time pull forward from the back. Stand against the wall with your back touching and most of your weight on your toes. Draw your abdomen in and up. Keep head up, chin out, and shoulders relaxed.

Hold It, Hold It.

Now try to make the small of your back touch the wall on an imaginary straight line from shoulders to hips. Walk away from the wall keeping this position and look at yourself in the mirror. You see correct posture, you see what you are to strive for. This posture might seem strained at first, but with practice it becomes quite natural.

Here is an exercise recommended by an authority whose life work is making women as close as possible to the ideal of feminine perfection.

Lie on the back. Draw the knees up slightly, and outwardly rotate the thighs. Let the abdomen sink until the small of the back presses against the floor. Draw the chest up, lifting it as high as possible toward the ears. Relax and repeat 20 times.

"Blended" Course To Make Citizens

College Tries Curriculum Experiment.

Cleveland, Aug. 21 (U.P.).—Basing its plan of study on psychologists' belief that people remembering 80 per cent of what they do and only 20 per cent of what they hear, Fenn College will take a new step in education this September by introducing a "blended" curriculum in the liberal arts course.

Under the plan, freshmen will not study history, English, sociology or economics as special subjects, but will weave them together in solution of a problem that may last three months, explained Marion B. Tolar, associate dean in charge of the new plan.

"There is something wrong when graduates come out of college self-centered, socially unconscious and morons politically," Dean Tolar said. "We have set up four years of work in liberal arts that will make students come face to face with the world about them."

The first problem to be considered, he announced, will be "The City of Cleveland as a Laboratory for American Citizenship."

During the three-month study of Cleveland the panorama of politics, arts, business, foreign groups, play, work—woven through the lives of a million people—will be covered.

Like the Fenn engineering and commerce colleges, the new liberal arts college will be on the co-operative plan, allowing alternate 12 weeks of work at regular jobs. The plan will be elective in the sophomore year, but required in the two upper-class years.

Silence Sentence Given to Talker

Judge Orders Women Quiet for 2½ Hours.

New York, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Because she "talks too much," Magistrate William Dwyer sentenced Mrs. Anna Katz to 2½ hours' silence.

Mrs. Katz continually interrupted the testimony of Patrolman Peter G. Maggio, who accused her of disobeying a department of sanitation inspector's order to keep a cover on her refuse can.

"I think you talk too much," the magistrate told her after quieting the bedlam in the court. "In fact, I think you talk so much that it would be a good idea for you to sit in this courtroom a while in absolute silence while I make up my mind what to do about the case. I'll probably postpone it for a week, and I'm not so sure whether I'll let you go on bail or not. Now, remember, not a word out of you."

After the period of silence was over Mrs. Katz was given a suspended sentence.

PILLAR To POST

Gay Mrs. Crosby Miller Returns From Pleasant Journey North.

MOVING like a small whirlwind, Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller covered a lot of ground in her three weeks away from Washington. She is like a whirlwind, too, in that she is always the nucleus of a gay group circulating around her.

A small brunette, she has a cameo-like profile, her brilliant smile is warm, her sparkling dark eyes responsive to every nuance. She finds much to interest her in all kinds of people.

• • • •

There was that queer playwright up in Maine who lived morosely in the woods with only a dog and cat for company, yet managed to produce a drawing room play that Mrs. Miller claimed has a "marvelous insight into human reactions." She drove nine hours to see the tryout of this play, from Westport, Conn., to Ogonquit, Me., and returning the next day she was another nine hours on the road. But the journey was worth it, for she saw her old friends, Peggy Wood and Bastiano Braggiotta (of the socially well-known family that is half Bostonese and half Italian). They were playing in "The Closed Room." Her sister, Mrs. Arthur Hornblow, and two theatrical producers who are considering producing the play in New York, accompanied her.

• • • •

The plot concerns the meeting in business of the second husband with the first, whom he believes to have been killed in the war. Unaware of their previous relationship, he takes the man home to dinner to meet his wife. The "closed room" represents the Pandora's box of the past that the wife hesitates to open. Upon her decision, whether or not to let sleeping dogs lie, rests the denouement.

Mrs. Miller had a time getting away and deserves all the fun she had. She and her father, Mr. Oscar Crosby, had rented their estate near Warrenton for the summer to the Piermontes (the young pugilist was boxing instructor for the son of Mrs. Madelaine Force Dick before they were married). The newly-wedded pair left the place after residing there only 12 days, and Mrs. Miller had to return to make the place ready for a new tenant.

• • • •

With that accomplished, and her father settled at the Fairfax with her sister, the Countess VI Melito Caracciolo, she dashed off with Gibbs Baker to Mrs. Hornblow's place in Westport.

• • • •

Among other interesting people she met on her travels were a very amusing trio, Harold Horan, a former Washington newspaperman, who was piloting two British fliers around, Col. Fitzmaurice and Capt. Bonar. They are planning to make a hop soon from London to Melbourne, Australia. It struck Mrs. Miller as very funny that at a Friday night dinner, the two Irishmen ate every bit of the curried chicken served them, while the Scotch Presbyterian, Bonar, declined the meat and contented himself with the fish course.

• • • •

The playwright, the theatrical producers, the distinguished flyers shared her interest with Lewis Gallantiere, a banker, whom she met at the home of the charming Russian daughter-in-law, of Lady Colfax, Mrs. Peter Colfax. An entire day was spent at the Atlantic Beach Club, an elaborate establishment always filled with amusing people, and she visited the Piping Rock Club. Among those well-known in Washington who helped to make her three weeks a gay interlude are Mrs. Stanton Griffith, Dr. Eugene Beck, Mrs. Corbina Wright, Godfrey MacDonald, "Winkie" Thomas, Ilka Chase and Deems Taylor.

"Worry" Clinic Formed To Cure Prodigal Sons

A "worry" clinic has been established by Dr. A. H. Martin, acting professor of psychology at Sidney University in Australia.

Cases of parental domination, lack of will power, vocational maladjustment, speech inhibition and self-consciousness are attended to by specialists under his direction.

Biblical Library in Orchard Is Shrine Visited by Many

MANHASSET, Long Island, Aug. 21. — The Biblical library in her apple orchard in which Mrs. Martin W. Littleton preaches the second coming of Christ is becoming a shrine for an ever-increasing number of visitors.

This summer Mrs. Littleton's lectures have been illustrated by a huge mural on her garden wall. This panorama covers 7,000 years of history and also portrays dire events of the future, including terrible tribulations, the coming of the Antichrist and the battle of Armageddon. The scenes are bordered with scriptural texts.

Mrs. Littleton, wife of a former Representative and prominent lawyer, charges no admission to her lectures and permits no contributions. Her garden is open officially at 2 o'clock every day and often long before that hour visitors are waiting on the red and blue settees under the apple trees.

The Biblical library, in which the lecture begins, is a unique Palestine museum. Mrs. Littleton has made two trips to the Holy Land to obtain objects for it. A century plant from Golgotha is her most prized souvenir. A shepherd's sling such as David used against Goliath; a rod and staff, such as are described in the Twenty-third Psalm, and an alabaster flask for precious ointment are among the treasures. Ancient Hebrew texts and modern biblical literature fill the bookshelves.

Within the last year Mrs. Littleton has sent printed copies of her warning concerning the world's future tribulations to members of Congress, presidents of colleges and other prominent persons. She carried a framed copy of her warning to President Roosevelt at his Hyde Park home.

Women Held To Be Very Superstitious

But Two Others Are Safe; They Omit Rooms Numbered 13.

ARE you superstitious? No? Then Dr. Julius B. Maller and Dr. Gerhard E. Lundeen of Columbia University would like to hear about it. After making a Nation-wide survey these two gentlemen are convinced there isn't a single person without a superstition of some kind tucked away in his consciousness. And women, learned the Drs. Maller and Lundeen, usually have at least three or four.

The results of the survey were a surprise to several hotel men in Washington who thought people had got over "such stuff." So confident were they in their belief, they use the number 13 for some of their rooms. Years ago this was an unheard-of procedure. A manager then would no sooner have expected a patron to sleep in a room with 13 on its door than to share the room with a rattlesnake.

"But now we seldom have anybody object to 13," said George J. Sharshing, treasurer of the Shoreham, yesterday. "You can be sure of one thing, though. Whenever anybody does complain, it's a woman."

Why Oxtails?

The Willard fares even better with its rooms numbered 13. The manager declared he couldn't remember a single instance in which they had been spurned for numbers considered more lucky.

"Sometimes I've thought the patrons who took 13's so lightly had rabbits' feet hung around their necks and oxtails in their pockets," confided the manager. "Why oxtails? Oh, I don't know. They ought to be good for something if rabbits' feet are."

The Pullman Co. doesn't exactly dispute Drs. Maller and Lundeen. It only maintains persons who travel must leave their superstitions at home with the cat and canary bird.

"We've always had Pullman cars numbered 13 and I never heard of anyone objecting to sleeping in them," said J. J. Mann, first clerk of the Pullman Co. in Washington.

What Mr. Mann undoubtedly overlooked is the fact few travelers ever notice the numbers of their pullman cars, so fascinated are they by those cars' lad-de-dah names of Mount Casaba, Green Feathers, and the like.

On the Safe Side.

But when travelers emerge from their Pullmans they immediately become number-conscious again, believe the managers of the Mayflower and the Wardman Park.

"We haven't a room 13 or 113 or any other 13," said Frank Mayer, resident manager of the Wardman Park. "We think patrons feel uncomfortable in rooms with so-called unlucky numbers and it's a simple matter to skip from 12 to 14."

The Mayflower has a similar system for numbering its rooms.

Bird Life Census Made At Long Island Haven

A census of the bird life of Long Island is now being taken at the bird sanctuary at Jones Beach State Park through the cooperation of the Long Island State Park Commission and the Nassau County Recreation and Leisure Time Program.

Every variety of bird that visits Long Island will be catalogued. All species of birds seen there during the last 25 years will be included in the survey.

Popeye to the Contrary.

Ledyard, Conn. (U.P.).—Mrs. Frederick Manchester's vegetarian kitten died because it ate too much spinach, lettuce, carrots and potatoes. A vegetarian blamed the cat's distaste for milk for its demise.

I Ate What I Liked . . . Fat Slipped Away

It was so easy—I did not go on a diet. I took no exercise. I did not weaken my body with drastic purgatives. Yet fat slipped away. Each day I felt myself growing lighter, more slender. Now my figure is lovely, graceful. And I never felt better in my life.

Eyes Retreat Under Brims; Lips Important

Lipstick Color Becomes a Matter of Prime Importance.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NOW that the eyes (at least one) are half hidden under the far-reaching fall berets, the make-up of lips becomes a matter of prime importance. The color of lipstick has become an issue which demands thought and careful selection.

Realizing that shoppers are going to be "choosier" than ever, one manufacturer of many cosmetics and perfumes has just added three new lipsticks to his list. Already there was "blonde," a light, bright, definitely orange shade, the favorite of golden blondes; "medium," a clear, gay red for the betwixt and betweens; "auburn," a rose red, especially lovely for women with silver gray or white hair; "brune," a blue red, rich and lovely for the vivacious brunette.

Now there is one called "vivid," a sun-kissed deep orange for suntanned skins; "titian," a bronze red, primarily for the rust brown redhead, but hailed by many others as a novel and interesting lip trend; and "brune fonce," a winey red for those with olive skin.

These lipsticks are remarkable for their rich true colors, and also for their indelibility. They are very reasonably priced.

For Breakfast Comfort.

After one has finished praising the average breakfast room set of furniture and remarking how light and convenient it looks, one could add, "but it doesn't look very comfortable!"

Ask those who know. Ask those who live in apartments that have a dining alcove already furnished with table and chairs of these standard sets. They will agree the chairs are painfully hard!

It is to these people who prefer to eat in comfort that some small chair cushions appeal. There are dozens of these in the notions department of a local store, cut to fit the average breakfast room chair. Small strings fasten them to the backs and legs and keep them firmly in place. They're covered with flowered chintz and liberally stuffed with soft cotton. The price, 50 cents.

A Peculiar Remark.

Sometimes it's fun to stand in a shop and just watch the customers come and go, and listen to their strange inquiries. Yesterday a tall, beautifully dressed woman was interested in some lemon dishes, featured now in an F street store. These are small and round, covered with varitinted floral designs, and accompanied by small wooden lemon picks. She selected four of them, to be wrapped separately and sent to certain addresses. As she started away she turned suddenly to the young girl who took her order, and said, "Don't forget to put in those paper cutters!" The sales girl's mouth dropped open. She looked at one of the lemon picks closely and shook her head in silent eloquence.

Exact Drinkers, Notice.

A two-ounce measuring top is proving a drawing card to many customers, chiefly men. It is a strange contraption that fits any size bottle. While one drink is pouring out of it, another compartment is filling with a drink in exactly the same proportions. It is a big help to the host who wants to make haste and be exact in his measudements. He pours two ounces in one glass and two ounces in another glass without stopping. He can go on and on, for the construction of the measuring top keeps one compartment filled and emptying while the other is empty and filling.

Sweet No. 25.

Number 25 is the title of a new perfume, which comes in small pocket-size bottles, costing only 65 cents. Some over twice that size are $1.10.

It was nice for their creator to put such lovely perfume within budget reach of anybody. Ordinarily her things sell for prices which, although not high, are certainly not low.

Dignified Stationery.

People have no business judging you by your stationery, but nevertheless they do. If you pick up the first piece handy and it happens to be a bit scrappy looking they'll say you're not tidy and have no eye for the niceties. On the other hand, if you choose to pen your notes on vivid blue or red sheets just because you like loud colors, they'll say you have poor taste.

A downtown store is offering stationery, plain and beautifully engraved, for a very small cost. Twenty-five cents will buy 12 sheets and 12 envelopes of ivory paper, edged in brown, with a steel die engraved monogram at the top.

Prints on Trays.

Some wooden trays have a walnut finish—and something else besides. Across the ample bottom is a colorful print, depicting red-coated hunters galloping after the hounds; or colonial gentlemen enjoying their ale in a tavern. Some are French scenes, other Italian, and all of them are splendid reproductions of original prints.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

What Today Means

"Leo."

If August 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m.

This might prove a very lucky day for you, especially in business matters. Care, however, should be exercised that overconfidence does not make you careless. Time may prove a very essential element in the successful furtherance of a plan you have had in the back of your head for a good many days. It might be a good idea to remember "there is no time like the present." It may prove good judgment not to become too familiar with a friend who seems to radiate good humor. There is a possibility if you rub this person the wrong way, a very disagreeable disposition might be revealed. You may be requested to make a quick decision involving the expenditure of money. If you refuse to be rushed into making up your mind you may be using good business sense, which may prevent a mistake being made. Discrimination might pay if you are contemplating any form of entertainment, regarding the people you invite. Married and engaged couples will find tact a good quality to exercise today, as there is a possibility of irascibility developing if arguments are indulged in. Indiscriminate love making may prove a dangerous sport, so it might be wise not to indulge in it.

If a woman and August 22 is your natal day, it might be well to control any impulse to be too hasty in decisions, especially if it comes to passing judgment on the character of others. Dame Fortune will very likely treat you unusually well in the very near future. The generosity of a friend may prove a pleasant surprise, and give you something you have wanted a long time. Work along educational lines should not only prove interesting, but also profitable. If you embark on the sea of matrimony, the sailing should prove smooth and conducive to happiness.

The child born on August 22, as it grows up, may have a tendency of wanting its own way and show an inclination to dominate its playmates.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

By Susan Mills.

IT'S JUST the right weather for a meat loaf. If you're tired of the hamburger kind and want something just a bit fancy without the additional fancy price, try these:

Lamb Loaf.

2 pounds lamb shoulder, ground
1 cup bread crumbs
1 onion, minced
½ green pepper, minced
1 egg
1 cup meat stock or milk
Salt
Pepper

Mix all the ingredients thoroughly, and shape into a loaf in a buttered baking dish. Place in a moderate oven (350 degrees, Fahrenheit) and bake for 1½ hours.

Baked Ham Loaf.

1 pound smoked ham, ground
½ pound fresh ham, ground
1 cup soft bread crumbs
2 eggs, well beaten
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons chili sauce
1 small onion, diced
Salt and pepper

Mix all the ingredients very thoroughly and pack into a greased loaf pan or into individual muffin tins. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees, Fahrenheit) for 1½ hours. Half an hour before the loaf is finished cooking, pour one cup strained tomato juice over it and finish baking. Serve hot or cold.

Going back to the subject of lamb, here's a chop with a new flavor.

Lamb Chops With Horseradish Cream.

Have the chops from rib cut rather thick. Pan-broil for about 10 minutes, until nicely browned on both sides. Then put on top of each a heaping tablespoon of horseradish cream, spread evenly with a knife. Place a large broiled mushroom cap on top of each chop. Place in hot oven for two minutes.

Horseradish Cream.

Blend 1 tablespoon flour with 1 tablespoon butter. Do not brown at all. Add paprika, ½ lump sugar, salt, a few drops onion juice, and a little beef broth; cook 15 minutes, then add ½ cup cream and cook for 10 minutes more, stirring to prevent lumping. Add 2 heaping teaspoons grated horseradish and cook 5 minutes longer.

Alcohol Held Not To Harm Hearts

Specialist Says Tobacco Is Not Injurious.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21 (U.P.).—Smoking, alcoholic beverages and coffee in moderate quantities do not harm the heart, according to Dr. S. Calvin Smith, noted heart specialist here. Instead of causing injury, Dr. Smith points out in his new book, "That Heart of Yours," indulgence in the three items, which usually are considered harmful, is really beneficial.

In defense of alcohol, he says that a highball now and then need not be feared by persons who suffer from a weak heart, "since alcohol is more than a stimulant to the circulation—it is a food to the human body."

The mild stimulation caused by a cup of coffee increases the efficiency of the circulation and is the most beneficent beverage for adult hearts, he states.

As for smoking, Dr. Smith terms it a pleasure that should not be denied weak-hearted persons, since there is no scientific proof that tobacco affects the heart adversely. But, he adds, all these stimulants should be taken in moderation, even by persons in the best of health.

Sleeves Have the Simplicity Of Other Details for Autumn

Tricky Fullnesses at Odd Places Have Almost Disappeared; What There Is Left Is Concentrated Around the Elbows.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Everywhere fall fashions are talked about—and that means almost everywhere — you hear the word "simplicity" over and over again. The silhouette is simple. Details are simple. And so on. And here it is again—sleeves are simple.

They aren't, however, so simple as the rest of the silhouette. And that's because with such an unadorned background, sleeves can afford to show some interest.

Sleeves are simple in this way: all those tricky exaggerations are gone * * * the bulky shoulders, the big puffs, the jutting "extras."

At the Elbow.

Generally this fullness is concentrated at the elbow or just below. And that is a natural place for fullness to be, for the bent arm needs easy, comfortable fit at that point.

Of course not all fullness is put in exactly the same way. You'll see several variations in the sketches and there are still others.

In the dress sleeve at the center in the sketch the fullness also comes at the elbow and the sleeve tapers in to the wrist without a cuff. This sleeve shows, too, how smooth shoulders have grown and shows how very fine trimming, such as tuckings or metal thread, may also be used on a sleeve.

In the coat sleeve sketched at the upper right the fullness is below the elbow and there is considerable of it. But it is snugged in around the wrist with a narrow cuff.

Smooth Raglan Shoulders.

Then in the sketch at the lower left, one of the dressier dress sleeves is shown, shirred through the shoulder to make it lie flat with the fullness released below the shirring and again caught in the band cuff.

Sleeves of this type are used in the softer, informal afternoon types of dresses, and often are made with a slightly deeper armhole.

You'll also see some sleeves this fall which are straight and tight. That's the newest sleeve fashion, and many women will like it best of all.

Chicken Salad Roll Is Tasty Home Special

Do It This Way and You'll Get to Be a Famous Hostess.

DO YOU have a food specialty? Something you're famous for, that you make particularly well, that people expect when they come to your house for a social occasion? The old-fashioned girl's specialty was usually cake, fluffy, frosted layer cake or delicate angel food. Chafing dish parties featured Welsh rarebits and chicken a la king; some housekeepers are famous for their hot biscuits and others for their cold aspics.

Here's a summer specialty suggestion which you can use for lunches or suppers or evening refreshments, and you will need very little else to go with it. You will find this specialty on the summer menus of a famous chain of restaurants—chicken salad roll.

Choose large sized, long, soft rolls. Split them lengthwise and butter them lightly, or mix plenty of mayonnaise with your salad and omit the butter. Fill each roll with a generous helping of chicken salad. Arrange choice little leaves of lettuce and a chicken-salad roll on a lace-paper doily on each plate. Fasten the top of the roll down with a toothpick speared through an olive. Decorate with a radish rose or two or a few slices of dill pickle.

To make the chicken salad the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions:

Chicken Salad.

5-pound-fowl, salt, 1 onion, sliced; ½ cup vinegar, few drops tabasco sauce, 3 bunches celery, thick mayonnaise dressing, lettuce.

Place the chicken on a rack in a kettle, half cover with hot water, add 1 teaspoon salt, and simmer until tender. Let the chicken cool in the broth. After it is cold remove the skin, strip the meat from the bones, and cut it into small pieces of even size. In the meantime soak the onion in the vinegar. Remove a cup of chicken fat from the cold broth, mix with this vinegar, pour over the chicken, and add the tabasco and more salt and vinegar if needed to season it well. Let this stand, or marinate, for several hours, or overnight. Cut the celery stalks and some of the tender leaves into small pieces and let stand in a cold place until crisp. Mix enough thick, well-seasoned mayonnaise dressing with the chicken to coat the pieces well. Shortly before the salad is to be served, add the celery and more mayonnaise if needed. Stir the mixture lightly so as not to break up the chicken. Add still more salt if needed.

If desired, add ¼ cup of capers when the celery and chicken are combined. Hard-cooked eggs may be used as a garnish or cut in pieces and mixed with the chicken to make it go farther.

POTOMAC PARK

WASHINGTON was making plans for a cherry blossom festival. The merchants hoped it would promote business, and the cliff-dwellers shuddered at the commercialization of natural beauty. Americans could not be satisfied with pure esthetic qualities of nature, they must have ballyhoo and cheap banality. They overlooked the fact that the cherry trees were enjoying their twenty-second spring of the edge of the Tidal Basin, and Americans had apparently been satisfied to go without a festival until now. They wrote letters to the editors about it. One man confessed peevishly that he found this inroad of spring tourists to Washington most annoying. Wanda sniffed. Whose Capital do you think this is, anyhow?

The committee on preparations was troubled about nothing but the weather, being unable to predict the date of blooming. Once they almost decided to give up and hold an ice festival instead.

Days Were Raw.

The queue in the cafeteria curled through the door and far down the hall. Wanda felt cross. She seldom bothered with the cafeteria, but today she felt a special need for hot soup; something had been wrong with the radiator all morning, and the day was raw. Neverless, she had no mind for spending twenty minutes of a half-hour lunch period standing in line to watch other people eat before she had a chance to gobble down her little bite, and so she passed on to the less crowded sandwich counter and then out into the park for a breath of fresh air. It wouldn't be any colder outside than in.

Walking around the reflecting pool, she was forced to share her sandwich with a pair of shivering mocking birds, bewildered tourists from the Southland, making noises like catbirds, finding nothing to sing about. They seemed to be dissatisfied with the Nation's Capital, and in bird language and wing and tail gestures, as interpreted by the human observer, were saying:

"You may call this a New Deal if you like, but, in my opinion, it's pretty raw. Washington was never like this before. Here it is the middle of April almost and the trees as bare as a nudist colony."

Starling Pie.

"Why, a worm can't stick its head out of the ground without getting a rake in its eye. We'll starve to death."

"Cheer up. This is election year. Maybe enough Republicans can be put back in Congress to bring us the good old times again."

"I dunno. I was kinda leary of that campaign slogan—a chicken in every pot. It smacks too much of that pretty dish of four-and-twenty blackbirds that was set before the king. And now they've had starling pie in the Capitol restaurant, and they say that even the Speaker of the House asked for a second helping. When a thing like that gets started, you never know where it's going to stop. I prefer to dispense cheer for the tree tops."

"I must say you're not very cheerful this morning."

"What can you expect if you won't provide for me. I'm hungry."

"Maybe Congress will do something. They say it is going to set aside several million dollars for the protection of wild life."

"If you ask me, I think wild life in America is safe enough."

Relief Not Dole.

"What can I do? This dole system is demoralizing."

"It isn't dole; it's relief."

"Well a bird gets mighty little relief. Look at that bloated plutocrat down there, hogging up a whole sandwich and never giving a thought to the little fellow. Wonder what code she thinks she's working under anyhow."

Wanda was still hungry, for the cold spring days had stimulated her appetite, but she broke the bread in bits and scattered it over the grass.

They showed their white feathers by flying in alarm to the next tree, from which vantage point they made catcalls at their benefactor until she went away.

The wind was stiff by the water and she turned into the park and came to the office by the front door.

The CWA had spent the winter widening Constitution avenue in front of the building, and had made a beautiful street. The purpose of Washington pavements, Wanda had decided years ago during her previous residence, was to provide the colored race with something to hack. They were running true to form. The concrete walk to the entrance had barely set so that Federal employes could pass over it without the necessity for a shoe shine, but they were taking it up again.

Spring Lent Hope.

A burly Negro was grinning all over his face as he enlivened the task with retrospections.

An' I look aroun' at my girl—hah!—I look aroun' at her—hah!—An' I say to her—hah—I say, "Oh Yeah?"

Judging from the laughter of those who had heard the beginning of the story, his retort had been apt, crushing and unanswerable.

In the spring the darker fancy brightens at the thought of her—whether the fancy flutters in the brain of a mockingbird or the cranium of a street mender.

Spring optimism brightened the office. Easter outfits, having done their part in the fashion parade, now raised the office morale; crowded lockers jeopardized new millinery, and so empty milk bottles were appropriated for hatstands and stood perkily on the file cases. Oliver's humor, kept fresh by seasonal variations, had lately tapped a new reservoir of mixed proverbs.

"You buttered your bread, now lie in it," he was saying as Wanda entered.

An Efficient Leader.

Leaping Lena prevented an answer by her inquiry as to the cafeteria luncheon special, and upon learning that it was strawberry shortcake, elbowed an energetic pass to the file case, and with her customary, "Excuse me, girlie," grabbed a shiny straw brim from a milk bottle and departed on her toothsome quest.

Miss Hamilton never nagged, seldom expresed disapproval, but had a bloodhound scent for shirking and sloppy work. She could spot a typographical error across the room and a shirker through six walls. But she managed her staff with a skill which was nothing short of fine art. Wanda had heard plenty of fault-finding since she had been there, had witnessed plenty of irritability, most of it arising excusably from the crowded condition under which they worked, but not one word of criticism of Miss Hamilton had she heard.

Wanda, not yet having outlived her gratitude for regular salary checks, thought, "Truly the lines have fallen to me in pleasant places." And then she wondered if she were mixing her Scripture in the fashion of Oliver's proverbs. Maybe it was pleasant pastures.

Work Was Heavy.

Wanda resumed her typing.

They were as busy as the proverbial bees in a hive, and swarmed over each other quite as thickly. The NIRA work was piling up and the new captain viewed it with alarm.

"Get six extra clerks in here right away," he commanded. "I know you're doing all you can, but this correspondence has got to move out of here."

"And so will we," they sighed sorrowfully but respectfully behind his back. "If six new clerks move in here, we'll have to sit in the park."

A requisition was made, however, for six new civil service clerks, six new typewriters, six new desks, and six new line-a-times. Where they were going to be put when they came, only God and the captain knew, and the captain's worried frown indicated that he had not been let whole-heartedly into the secret. He wandered through the corridors hunting space, and looking as though he were losing faith in the old promise that the Lord will provide. Apparently, space was not one of the blessings included in the rewards to the pious.

Major Was Busy.

Now and then Wanda stayed till after 6 o'clock, and, when leaving, would meet the major in the corridor, rushing with papers to the general's office. She wondered if he went home at all. Probably stretched out on the desk for a little snooze before dawn with a fat file for a pillow. He was beginning to look awfully tired. A fishing trip would be good for him, she thought; maybe he would take one now that the President had returned with glowing testimonials of what the rod had done for him. A president who has learned to bear the rod with a smile is a true philosopher. Majors are different; they just naturally think more about stripes.

I like this office, Wanda thought. I like my work. I think I'd be perfectly happy now if I didn't have to type these leters to people who want jobs. Twelve million people hunting work, and I have a job.

She typed furiously. How do you account for it, Wanda Mallory? Are you smarter than they are? You are not! There's only one answer, old dear . . . Luck—just plain, unvarnished luck!

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Brain Tumors.

Centuries ago physicians thought that the brain, because it was regarded as the seat of the soul, was exempt from tumor formation. Later, when post-mortem examinations became more common, tumors were revealed in the brain substance. We now know that tumors grow in the brain just as they grow in other parts of the body; not quite so frequently, perhaps, but when they do occur they are disabling to an unusual degree. Sometimes these tumors grow from the coverings of the brain, sometimes from the brain substance itself, or they may be cystic in character.

With the great progress in surgical technique and asepsis and as a result of intensive studies of the functions of the brain and its nerve pathways, this region, hitherto considered immune from attack, now yields to the deft skill of the brain surgeon.

There are many signs and symptoms of brain tumor. Among these may be mentioned persistent headache, sometimes momentary loss of memory and speech, paralysis, convulsions, and swelling of the optic nerve as it enters the eye. This latter manifestation is usually associated with blurring of vision. In certain types of tumors the loss of vision may be the first objective sign. These symptoms may be considered as signs of pressure.

If there are signs of pressure within the brain it is frequently difficult to locate the exact area in which it is exerted. X-ray pictures of the brain may supply no information whatsoever, as the tumor substance may not be sufficiently dense to cast a shadow. In other words, tumor tissue may appear on the X-ray plate exactly like brain tissue.

A method of increasing the efficiency of X-ray examinations consists in the injection of air into the spaces within the brain. These spaces are called ventricles. Air in such a situation will cast a shadow, and should such a shadow appear distorted it may indicate the site of pressure. Sometimes symptoms will determine the location of a tumor. For example, a tumor in a given area is usually attended with a definite set of symptoms; in another position the symptoms may be quite different.

Cysts in any region of the brain are just as disabling and symptom-producing as true tumors. They are saclike affairs filled with fluid and vary greatly in size. They may be attached to the membranous covering of the brain, or may exist in the brain substance, causing pressure and destroying tissue. As a rule the surgical attack on cysts in the brain substance is attended with spectacular relief of symptoms. Many of these cysts do not recur.

Tumors, if they are deeply imbedded in the brain, or if they involve vital structures, are removed with great difficulty. Sometimes they can not be removed without destroying life, and hence are considered inoperable. Naturally brain surgery has not as yet reached that degree of safety that attends abdominal surgery in skilled hands.

Parisian Atmosphere Offered at the Shoreham; Homelike Air Rules Penn Daw Hotel; Latest Music at Powhatan.

By Kay Ware.

There's something nice about going places
Where you see your friends, relatives, enemies, taxidrivers and other familiar faces;
And that gentleman who used to be a Congressman
And the torch singer who manages to don less than
Is customary.
Then there's the pompous person who is so famous he might do well to be a bit more wary
And take his wife out once in a while. Instead of his secretary.
Or you might watch the debutante, you knew when she wore pigtails in high school, dancing with her latest crush.
And the matron in the corner who frowns and hisses, "Hush!"
When her husband remembers his youth and yells, "Hi, Cutie!"
At the cigarette girl who once was and still thinks she is a beauty.
And you might see an attache with mustachios and goatee, and diplomatic compliments on the mental Accomplishments of the blondine with him who simpers and titters, "Oh, you're so continental!"
And there's the "pfs-s-s-sht!" of charged water in tall glasses, and cherries and olives that won't roll and you have to dig them out with your fingers,
And smooth music that once in a while produces a melody that lingers,
And all-in-all you're sure to have a fine time if you go places,
And see your friends and relatives and enemies and taxidrivers and show-people and celebrities and—oh, well, all those familiar faces.

Foreign Atmosphere.

If you want to travel, there are many ships that pass in the night that will take you wherever you want to go. If the purse is slim, take a paddle; if fat, prepare for an ocean voyage.

For instance, the Shoreham offers a delightful foreign port. Hopping across the Atlantic, they take you to Paris for another international night. Everybody, from the chef to the entertainers, is going French in the best style. French delicacies and drinks, artists' berets, fancy favors and perhaps a "parlez-vous?" or two are to be expected.

So brush up your French, wear your imported accessories, and go.

Entertainers: Phillip and Yvonne, ballroom dancers with a tango. Have you a weakness for the tango? Davy Kraft, fancy acrobatic dancer who climbs steps, and Elviro and Stephen, presenting among other numbers, "Sensuistic Mood." They claim it is an original. It's in the form of a bolero.

Held over: Raul and Eva Reyes. Patrons pleaded with manager to keep them another week. Raul rushed to New York for costumes. They fall in with the Parisian atmosphere, in spite of their Mexican identification of last week.

Finale: The Reyes Rhumba.

Extra: Cecil de Mille is expected tonight. He's looking for Spanish talent.

Native Chinese Dishes.

Another port in a storm: The Lotus. For native Chinese dishes from a fastidious chef, the Lotus is the place.

Show includes Theodor and Wright, same as last week, and with a tango; also Kathryn Irwin, who sings. Medley from "We're Not Dressing," purported to bring down the house. A Russian jazz dance and an Oriental fantasy are offered by Dorothy Merritt.

For a grand Sunday chicken dinner with a lot of home-like atmosphere thrown in, stop at the Penn-Daw Hotel, on the Washington-Richmond highway. The lady in charge sells a beautiful collection of pottery on the side.

Pete Macias believes in being ahead of the times. When it comes to music, he plays the latest hits almost before they're written. He keeps one eye on New York music houses and the other on Washington patrons of the Powhatan. The result is that you hear something different there all the time. The reason it's different is because Pete gets the music straight off the presses before it has time to get popular.

So if you want to be snooty about your musical education, stop up there, listen carefully, and when the song becomes the "latest hit," you can scoff and say, "Oh, I heard that months ago."

Capital Visitors.

The young couple who came for a week because the city is so cosmopolitan.

The dear old lady who is so disappointed because George Washington didn't live here after all.

The curious individual who doesn't want a job.

The bright child who is going to do a composition about Washington, and expects you to furnish all the information.

The person who asks the name of everyone who goes by and then says patronizingly that of course you haven't been here very long.

The man who shook hands once with the President, and who has never heard of coals or Newcastle.

The people who want to see everything personally conducted.

The carload on depression vacation, who just drop in and stay a week.

More From Arthur Godfrey.

Arthur Godfrey's activities go on and on. First thing in the morning it's the radio broadcast; next, a series of shows over the footlights; then up to the roof of Club Michel to be "genial host." But he's earning his much-needed vacation anyway. He's due to travel south in about a week. It is whispered that he is going down to see Walter Winchell about something.

Club Michel has engaged a new chef. Andrew H. Lohnert is the name. What about supper there tonight?

Hangar Club has some new highlights. A particularly active dancer, Jack Regan, and another acrobat are on the bill. Joan Moss remains to cheer the heart with song.

If you get tired of dancing take a swim in the big pool, if you get tired of swimming, dance on the big floor. Everything is of large proportions at the Hangar Club, including Bill Levy's smile.

Hi-Hat's always convenient whether you feel like a quick lift in the afternoon, or a long draught in the cool of the evening. The Hawaiian minstrels stroll between the tables in best continental fashion and play for the guests whatever they wish. The management has spent a lot of money decorating the place, and the result is smartness in italics.

What about Hall's for sea food? What about Hall's for steaks? It might be said that Hall's is a man's restaurant if it weren't for the fact that women are just as much gourmets as men. Homelike atmosphere, and excellent cuisine.

For Cool Weather.

If the weather stays cool, it will be ideal for a hike and picnic. Harpers Ferry has some fine walking-places near by; Bear's Den, near Bluemont, is steep enough to give you an appetite and a wonderful view of the surrounding country. The ever-useful "weinie" is particularly appealing when consumed on the top of a mountain.

La Paree has a French name, Chinese waiters and excellent food. It has a dance floor and a musical group under the direction of Eddie Browne. Prices are reasonable, setting attractive. Delightful for luncheon, still more delightful for dinner.

"Drunkard" still goes on at the Willard. Ditto at the Roadside Theater.

A "siffleur" is a fancy whistler. For fancy whistling go to Glen Echo. They have some there.

For nationalistic foods, Pierre's for French cooking, Pierrette for snacks or cocktails. L'Escargot, another French. Syrian-American restaurant for what its name implies; Macinas, Jeans, Italian-American restaurants for spaghetti; Madrillon for Spanish; Gendleman's for kocher foods; Danish Rose for good Danish pastry and desserts.

Navy Suspect Is Held In Death of Girl, 16

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 21 (AP).—A 20-year-old Navy man was held in technical custody by police today as a suspect in the slaying of Celia Cota, 16-year-old girl. His name was not disclosed.

Police said a suit he sent to a cleaning establishment was found to bear "stains which might be blood." The man will be detained until his whereabouts Friday night—the night of the murder—have been established, police said.

Dirigible Off to Seattle.

A. B. Griffith Is a Collector, Even of Noises

Has Playbills Dating Back to 1878; Draws Many Famous People.

"Yes, I collect playbills, autographs, stamps, and—noises!" A. B. Griffith grinned, and finished off the sentence with a perfect imitation of an angry cat.

The hearty comedian and seasoned entertainer is responsible for the playbills adorning the walls of the Willard's Tavern Club. His collection numbers several thousand, all the way from 1878 up. At his apartment, 1414 V street, he thumbed some of them through, mentioning an anecdote or a name forgotten by most of us.

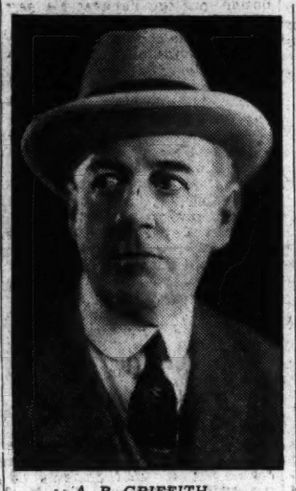
"I started out as an usher at Ford's Opera House," he continued. "Later I played a drum in front of the old Comique, when they had musical selections on the street to attract crowds. I used to hang around the theaters all the time; had a $2 allowance each week, and used to spend nearly all of it at shows.

"But I used to wonder why there wasn't more variety in the shows. They'd have a singer, a dancer, and that was about all. So because I wanted to do something different I began to collect noises."

Has Score of Noises.

His first "noise" was probably a dog or a cat, he remembers. Now he has 20 to 30 of them at the tip of his tongue. He doesn't stop at sounds of nature, but includes in his repertoire such mechanisms as calliopes, tug boats, the series of "pfffts!" and splutters that accompany the action from the opening of a bottle to the sipping of the drink.

"I've tried almost everything," he says. "Used to do a little tap-dancing, can whistle four ways, sing bass and soprano, draw in pencil or chalk, paint in water colors.



A. B. GRIFFITH, who is the donator of the play bills on the walls of the Willard's Tavern Club.

"Look!" He led the way into the sitting room of his apartment. The walls are literally plastered with famous faces, actors in the movies, opera singers, prize fighters, producers, aviators and many others. They are all his drawings, copied from photographs, and every one is autographed.

Caught Maurice Chevalier.

"Yes, I caught Maurice Chevalier in his pajamas at the hotel. He waved his hands and sputtered French, but I got his signature. Thomas Edison wouldn't sign the picture I drew, but he signed another. I have a daughter in Hollywood, secretarying for a firm there, and she gets the movie signatures for me.

"Oh, yes, and I collect pictures of funny people. Tall men that are over 7 feet tall, all the fattest men in the world—many are dead now.

"But I guess I'll never get too old to play the fool. I was in a drug store recently and thought it would be a good opportunity to pull a dog fight. So I let loose, near the door, all the noises and everything. A colored boy buying a prescription dropped it on the floor and ran for his life. Guess he's still running. The girl behind the cigar counter screamed and climbed on a chair.

But It Was Fun.

"I winked at the manager, who knew what was going on, and quietly walked out. I almost bumped into two policemen, looking mad." He laughed, "but it was fun!"

Mr. Griffith says he can speak the language of all the animals. He can make a horse look surprised by his whinny, and prompt a duck to quack back. But he says that something must be wrong, because he can't understand them. Perhaps it's their dialects.

The following excerpts are from "The Pastime," a little theatrical "paper" published in Washington. The date is February 20, 1878.

And then—

"And this while Germany keeps comparatively quiet.

"Will it be England and Austria versus Germany and Russia?

"The next great European funeral will probably be—whose?"

Menjou, Miss Teasdale Planning Matrimony

Los Angeles, Aug. 21 (AP).—The screen's "best-dressed man" and one of its "best-dressed women" appeared at the marriage license bureau today and filed notice of Adolphe Menjou and Veree Teasdale's "intention to wed."

They arrived, in high spirits, barely 24 hours after Menjou's second wife, Kathryn Carver, also a film actress, had entered a final decree of divorce from the star who plays sophisticated roles.

Police Report New "Racket"

Arrest Capital Youth on Fake Collection Scheme Charge.

Police yesterday said they had uncovered a new "racket" with the arrest of Gail D. Shroyer, 19, on a fugitive from justice charge.

Shroyer, arrested at his home in the 4300 block of Second street northwest, is held for postal authorities of Altoona, Pa.

The youth, it was charged, swindled an Altoona collection company of several hundred dollars. Police said he picked names from the Washington city directory and forwarded them to the concern as "bad accounts." He requested collection. Then, police declared, he received a commission for sending the names. The described "bad accounts" were all found to be fictitious.

Assistant District Attorney Louis Whitestone, after an investigation of the case, said Shroyer would be charged with using the mails to defraud.

Court Procedure Studied by Clerks

Federal court clerks, now in convention at the Mayflower Hotel, are discussing means of standardizing court procedure throughout the country.

A business session at 10 a. m. today at the hotel will be addressed by People's Counsel William A. Roberts John B. Colpoys, district U. S. marshal, and Miss May Sickman, clerk of the U. S. Court at Buffalo, will speak at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m.

A trip to Mount Vernon by bus, returning by boat in the afternoon, and dinner and dancing at the hotel in the evening will complete the day's program.

Film Writer Divorced By Lucille M. Tasker

Los Angeles, Aug. 21 (AP).—Lucille Morrison Tasker, former stage actress, was granted a divorce in Superior Court here today from Robert Joyce Tasker, film writer who first won literary fame while an inmate of San Quentin Penitentiary.

Mrs. Tasker, heiress to a patent medicine fortune, testified her husband "flew into uncontrollable rages and would storm out of the house and be gone for long intervals, later refusing to explain where he had been."

Three in Wife Sale Arraigned

All Plead "Not Guilty," Two Finally Agree to Admit Misconduct.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 21 (AP). Installment plan wife-selling ($200 down, the balance in easy payments), such as allegedly figured in the Hoboken bride-bartering triangle, today occupied the attention of Judge R. V. Kinkead as the three sides of the triangle appeared before him to enter pleas.

Gravely the judicial eye contemplated the defendants, Richard Rost, 40-year-old stamp collector and alleged wife-seller; Mrs. Hildegarde Rost, 30, the "merchandise" of the installment plan transaction, and Paul Herman, 41, of Union City, a stationary engineer who allegedly knew a bargain when he was offered one.

The trio entered indignant "not guilty" pleas when the judge asked them how they pleaded to charges of conspiracy to violate the moral code.

Then Assistant Prosecutor F. G. Schlosser, who announced he would seek a grand jury indictment of the defendants on a conspiracy charge, also informed the court he would prefer charges of misconduct against Mrs. Rost and Herman.

There was a hurried conference and Mrs. Rost and Herman offered to plead guilty to misconduct as soon as the proper papers could be prepared. The judge said he would accept the plea, and added bail would be fixed later on the conspiracy charges.

Five D. C. Golfers Qualify in U. S. Amateur Trials as Peacock Fails

Rowe Hurls 15th Victory to Near Record as Tigers Rout Red Sox, 8-4

Vinson Leads Field With 147 Card

Shorey, Dettwiler, Drain and McCarthy Also Among Select.

By Dave Herman,
Post Staff Correspondent.

FIVE FARMS COURSE, Baltimore, Md., Aug. 21.—Gene Vinson, 22-year-old Manor Club golfer, won the medal, and four other District golfers qualified for the National Amateur championship in the sectional trials here today at Five Farms' rough and rugged course.

Playing the steadiest golf of the day, Vinson, son of a Meridian, Miss., mayor, reeled off rounds of 73-74—147 to nose out Ernie Caldwell, of Hillendale Club, Baltimore, by one shot for the qualifying prize.

The other Washingtonians who made the grade after 36 holes of hectic golf were John Shorey, of Kenwood, with 76-75—151; Billy Dettwiler, of Congressional, with 75-78—153; Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, with 75-78—153, and Jimmy Drain, of Washington Golf and Country Club, with 74-79—153.

Yoder Loses in Playoff.

A Sixth District player, Levi Yoder, of Indian Springs, made a game bid for one of the 14 qualifying places, but lost after a thrilling playoff late in the evening with Spencer Overton and Don McPhail, of Baltimore, and Judd Brunley, of Knoxville, Tenn. They were tied with 154s each. Overton won on the third hole with a par 4 as Yoder's missed putt on the opening hole proved costly.

Washington's three favorites, Roger Peacock, Harry Pitt and Maury Nee, failed to qualify after some of the most miserable shooting of their young careers. Peacock, after struggling in the morning for a 78, made a great comeback at the start of the afternoon round, but met his "Waterloo" on the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth holes.

Consumes 7 Strokes.

On the former, a short and treacherous hole, he took 7 strokes, the direct result of an almost unplayable tee shot that stuck deep in the bushes far to the left of the green. Peacock was only 1 over par for this nine up to that point. Apparently discouraged, Peacock took a ghastly 8 on the next hole, with 2 penalty strokes causing the damage.

Pitt, hooking badly, putting poorly, blew up in the morning for 84, and picked up in the afternoon, while Nee disappointed with 81, 79—160, 5 shots out of the play-off circle.

Twenty-five Washingtonians were entered.

Virginians Qualify.

Virginia's stalwarts captured six places, Richmond getting four of them. Charlie Kent, whose 72 set in the morning pace, scored 151 to tie with Shorey for third place. J. Davis Ewell, Billy Howell, 1931 National amateur, and Bobby Reigel, Middle Atlantic titleholder, all from Richmond, made the grade. Howell and Ewell had 152 and Reigel 154.

Thad Street, of Charleston, S. C., champion of North and South Carolina, qualified with 73, 81—154, and Overton took the fourteenth place.

The two "floaters," Dave Davis, of Culver City, Calif., and Jennings Gordon, Atlanta, qualified with 150 and 152, respectively, but since they were from other sections they were not charged against the Middle Atlantic district.

Qualifiers.
Gene Vinson (Manor)	73	74—147
Erne Caldwell, Baltimore	77	71—148
Charlie Kent, Richmond	73	78—151
John Shorey (Kenwood)	76	75—151

McLarnin Flies East; Starts Training Today

Newark, N. J., Aug. 21 (U.P.).—Jimmy McLarnin, who will attempt to regain the world's welterweight boxing championship in a bout with Barney Ross September 6, arrived at Newark Airport today after a flight from Los Angeles.

McLarnin said he would start training at Gus Wilson's Orangeburgh camp tomorrow.

Asked about rumors that he intended to marry, he said:

"Maybe I'll go to Ireland on a wedding trip after the Ross bout, if I beat Barney. Nothing definite, though."

Martinsburg Club Lists Speedboat Races Sunday

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—The second annual speedboat races sponsored by the Potomac Boat and Motor Club will be held Sunday, beginning at 2 o'clock at the club landing on the Potomac, a short distance northeast of Dedington.

The program of events will include three class races—A, B, and C, and a free-for-all, and Harry Avey, of Hagerstown, Md., will stage a surfboard-riding exhibition. All of the drivers who attended the races last year will be present and a number of new drivers have also entered.

Perry and Wilde Defeated In National Doubles Upset

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21 (AP).—Tow-headed Gene Mako and his red-haired partner, slim Don Budge—a pair of persevering California youngsters with a lot of "what it takes" in tennis—turned back the ranking foreign threat in the National doubles championships today to furnish the tourney with its greatest upset.

Making up in will what they lacked in experience, the Pacific Coast lads came from, behind to crush the English greats, Fred Perry and Frank Wilde, and brush into the quarter-final round at the Germantown Cricket Club.

After dropping the first set, they rallied by splendid team work and a "do-or-die" attitude toward every shot to conquer the foreigners, 3—6, 6—0, 7—5, 6—3.

Their totally-unexpected conquest stole the spotlight from an earlier performance by the defending champions—the Davis Cup combination of Lester Stoefen and George Lott.

In quest of their second National crown, the California giant and his speedy Chicago partner played all over Arthur Hendrix, Lakeland, Fla., star, and Burtz Boulevard, of Atlanta, to gain a straight love-set victory in what is believed to be the record time of one half hour for a three-set, National competition match.

Sweeping into the quarter-finals with the Coast contenders and the present crown holders were four other American-seeded pairs, a ranking foreign team, and two Philadelphia district players.

Although the favorites marched through second-round competition, virtually none came out unscathed without the loss of a set.

Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, former champions and one-time Davis Cup teammates, felt the pressure of play along with the others. Opposed to Jack Tidball, former intercollegiate titlist from California, and Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., they too, were carried to four sets before they came through, 6—1, 6—2, 8—10, 8—6, in a bristling two-hour set-to.

The third-seeded pair, Frank Shields and Sidney Wood, America's Davis Cup singles players in the competition just ended, nosed out the New York-Georgia duo, Amand Bruneau and William Reese, 6—0, 6—2, 6—8, 6—3, only after displaying all their net guile.

Tigers Invade Today for Series

Bridges to Face Burke or Whitehill; Manush May Not Play.

ON the trail of their first pennant since Hughie Jennings captured three in a row, the last in 1909, Detroit's snarling, clawing Tigers are in town for a four-game series with the Nats that opens today and ends Saturday — four games of vital importance to the league leaders, who are storming through the East like an unchecked forest fire.

Batteries for this afternoon's battle will be Tom Bridges, Washington's favorite jinx, the slim, trim Detroit fireball hurler, and either Earl Whitehill or Bob Burke, a couple of southpaws with more curves that Blair road. Cronin yesterday was undecided which would start, but in all probability it will be Whitehill.

Bridges has enjoyed phenomenal success against Washington. The Nats have two strikes on them when he puts foot on the rubber, and last season he came within a pinch-hit single of shutting them out with nary a hit or run. The Tiger ace trimmed the Nats on their last Western trip, but only after recovering with remarkable speed from a bad case of first-inning jitters.

Whitehill Won Last.

Whitehill, the victim of some tough breaks this season, won his last start, which was against Cleveland. Burke bumped off the same club and made a clean case of it, as his three-hit performance will attest. But good or bad, either will be on the spot this afternoon against the bloodthirsty Bengals.

Detroit arrives in Washington with three wins in five games with the Yankees, and three out of four wins over the Red Sox. Mickey Cochrane freely admits that he expects to sweep the cluster with the Nats. Good pitching, flawless fielding and timely hitting, three requisites of a championship ball club, the Tigers have. Add to that an indominatable, unconquerable, pugnacious spirit and it can readily be seen why they top the league.

Crowder to Work.

Schoolboy Rowe, sensation of the visitors' mound staff, and the old Washington mainstay, Al Crowder, will pitch two of the three remaining games for Detroit. El Auker probably will take his turn in the one left. Mister, that's a pitching staff and you'll see some real baseball.

To Washington the series means a berth in the first division or oblivion in the second. Cronin freely admits that the Nats must get at least an even break with Detroit to achieve their goal, though in poor physical trim for the battle.

Ossie Bluege will be on third this afternoon in place of Cecil Travis who is out indefinitely with a bad charley horse, and Heine Manush is not certain of playing because of a similar injury. Should Manush be held out, Dave Harris will sub for him.

Salisbury Tennis Title Is Won by Miss Purnell

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.). Play in the annual tennis tournament for the men's single championship of this city has started on the courts of the State Teachers College here, with a seeded list of eight players awaiting the outcome of first-round matches between 16 contestants.

In the women's tournament, completed yesterday, Miss Leslie Purnell won from the title holder of 1933, Miss Margaret Townsend, in straight sets, 6—4, 6—1. This match did not furnish the thrill expected as Miss Townsend was not playing the game of which she is capable as witnessed by a hard-fought three-set match with the same opponent in the Handicap Tournament earlier in the season.

Turner Signs Willard to Referee

Garibaldi and Szabo Clash; Shikat on Gala Program.

BIG JESS WILLARD, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, will do his stuff at Griffith Stadium tomorrow night, but not as a leather-pusher. Mons. Joe Turner, the big-wig of wrestling here and hereabouts, has signed Willard to referee the feature brawl on the mat card, which pits Sandor Szabo against Gino Garibaldi.

Mons. Turner is a great believer that nothing is too good for his public. And, furthermore, Mons. Turner is willing to put out good, cold cash in order to get for his fans any new fad or fancy that happens to be in vogue.

Reading in yesterday morning's Post that Big Jess was in the East and craved jobs of refereeing wrestling bouts, Mons. Turner grabbed the phone forthwith, asked the long-distance operator for Camden, N. J., where Big Jess was hanging out, and signed him to show here.

Willard Drawing Card.

Willard, the biggest fighter who ever held the crown until he was somewhat dwarfted by Primo Carnera, is a drawing card in himself. The big boy, who won the title of the universe from Jack (Li'l Arthur) Johnson and who lost it to Jack Dempsey, essayed a ring comeback about a year ago against Floyd Johnson, but like some vaccinations, it did not take.

Then Jess became a fight referee, but there weren't enough fights to keep him busy. So now he is calling the shots of the grunters and groaners—and he is not only calling 'em, but doing a little punching, too, if the performers do not heed his commands.

In signing up Willard, Mons. Turner indirectly fell in line with Garibaldi's request that Bennah Bortnick did not get the call. But Turner is doing the Italian no favors in this respect, for Willard is one of that type of arbiters who "roughs the rougher," meaning that it will be just too bad if Garibaldi forgets that he is supposed to be wrestling and starts fighting. Willard, it might be added, has handled many mat bouts on the Pacific Coast and, it also might be reported, he has had no trouble with any of the performers, who have plenty of respect for any former heavyweight boxing king.

Completing the card will be Dick Shikat and Harry Fields in the semifinal and the usual trio of preliminaries, in this case pitting "Father" Lumpkin against Vanka Selesniak, Henry Piers against Joe Devito and Jim Heslin against Bert Rubi.

Collins Holds Cubs To 6 Hits and Phils Win

Chicago, Aug. 21 (AP).—Phil Collins' six-hit pitching beat the Cubs, 6 to 1, today and gave the Philadelphia Phillies their first victory in eight games of their Western trip. Only a pinch homer by Augie Galan in the eighth inning spoiled a shut-out for Collins.

Filling the bases on three infield errors, the Phils gave Collins two runs in the sixth, with Johnny Moore's single driving in the pair, and then added three more off Lon Warneke, Cub starter, in the eighth on doubles by Bartell and Chiozza, a single by Camilli, a walk and a fourth Cub error.

Detroit Feature Won by Campagna

Filly Comes From Far Back to Win; Pays $11.20.

Detroit, Aug. 21 (AP).—Campagna, strong-hearted filly racing under the colors of Mrs. A. J. Abel, came from next to last today to win the featured sixth race at the Detroit Fair Grounds track.

Campagna was shuffled about at the first turn and was sixth at the half, then started her drive. She was third at the three-quarter pole, and led My Turn by a length and a quarter at the finish. My Turn also made up lots of ground, coming from the fifth at the three-quarter pole to finish a head in front of Chatterdoo.

The win price in the mutuels on Campagna, $11.20 for $2, was the smallest of the first six events, every one of which carried a headache for the form players. Cherof paid $11.80 in winning the first race; James Boy, $26.80 in the second; Saunter, $20.60 in the third; Merry Caroline, $22.60 in the fourth and Capitalist, $11.40 in the fifth.

15th Win for Mungo As Dodgers Beat Bucs

Pittsburgh, Aug. 21 (AP).—Van Mungo finally recorded his fifteenth pitching victory of the season today as the Dodgers belted out a 9-to-5 decision over the Pirates in their final visit of the season here. It was Brooklyn's twelfth victory in 18 games against Pittsburgh.

Mungo was rapped for 11 hits and finally had to be relieved by Tom Zachary in the eighth. The Dodgers, however, pounded Larry French and Hal Smith for a safe lead before Red Lucas finally checked them in the last three innings. Glenn Chapman pounded a homer with one on to start a four-run rally in the sixth.

Davis-Elkins Coaching.

Elkins, W. Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—College and high school coaches from a number of States numbering upward of 100 are registered for the seventh annual training school in progress here under the direction of Cam Henderson, coach of Davis and Elkins College.

Included among the instructors are Don Peden, of Ohio University, who is in charge of football; Eddie Cameron, of Duke University, who has the basket-ball assignment; J. O. Hunicutt, of the college staff, who is in charge of physical education, and Henderson, who is dividing his time between football and basket ball.

Gehrig Slams 2 But Yanks Succumb

Van Atta, MacFayden Pounded; Lou Now Leads Foxx.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (AP).—The Browns salvaged the final game of the series of four today as they pounded Russell Van Atta and Danny MacFayden for enough runs to overcome the effects of Lou Gehrig's thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth homers of the season. The score was 8 to 6.

It was the only St. Louis victory of the season in the Yankee Stadium and the forth in 18 games against the Yanks. The defeat, coupled with Detroit's victory over Boston, put the Yankees 5½ games behind the Tigers.

Gehrig's two homers, one off Ed Wells and one off Jack Knott, accounted for five New York runs, and put him one ahead of Jimmy Foxx in the major league race. Van Atta, making his first start in nearly two months, was driven out in the fourth, when the Browns scored three times.

Van Atta, who hasn't been able to complete a game all season, gave up two runs in the first inning when Al Bejma, Jack Burns and Ray Pepper hit singles for one run, Bruce Campbell walked and Oscar Melillo drove in a second tally by forcing Campbell. Gehrig squared that by smashing his first homer of the game behind a pass to Babe Ruth.

Browns Take Lead.

St. Louis forged a run ahead in the second when Alan Strange opened with a double, an error by Lazzeri and a pass to Sam West loaded the bases and Burns repeated the stunt of bringing in a run with a force out. The Yanks evened it again off Knott after Wells had been forced out by damage done when Frank Crosetti's drive hit him in the first. Ray Pepper's muff of Ruth's high fly after Jack Saltzgaver had walked produced the run.

A pass to Knott followed by West's double and Burns' triple drove Van Atta out in the next inning and Pepper greeted MacFayden with a double that brought Burns home. That ended the scoring until the seventh when another force-out with the bases full, brought in a run, Hemsley bringing Pepper home after Ray had opened with a single. A walk to Bejma, West's sacrifice, Burns' infield out and Pepper's fourth hit of the game brought the final Brownie run in the eighth.

A single by Saltzgaver and another muff by Pepper on Sam Byrd's fly paved the way for Gehrig's second circuit smash. Knott retired at that point and Blaeholder retired the next three men.

Cards Down Braves, 6-2, Behind Carleton

St. Louis, Aug. 22 (AP).—Behind the steady pitching of Ted Carlton, the Cardinals turned in a 6-to-2 victory over the Braves today. The home club ran up a 3-0 advantage in the second inning and coasted the rest of the way. R. Moore accounted for one of the Braves' runs with a homer. Brown went the route for the Braves and did well after that shaky second inning.

Tribe Scores 9 in 9th to Win, 12-11

6 Walks, 4 Hits, 1 Boot Combine to Nose Out Mack's Team.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21 (AP). Six bases on balls, coupled with four hits and a boot by Pinky Higgins, enabled the Cleveland Indians to score nine runs in the ninth inning and wipe out an eight-run lead to beat the Athletics, 12 to 11, today.

The victory enabled the Indians to divide the four-game series.

The Athletics, who went into the ninth with a lead of 11 to 3, pounded Oral Hildebrand and Belve Bean for 18 hits, among them Pinky Higgins' twelfth home run of the season.

Reds Win, 4-3, From Giants On 6 Hits

Five Safeties and Jackson's Error Net All of Victors' Runs in Fifth.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 21 (AP).—Fred Fitzsimmons found the Reds a different proposition today as he attempted to repeat Saturday's two-hit victory and Cincinnati drove him out in five innings to defeat the Giants, 4 to 3, in the final game of the series.

As the second-place Cubs also lost today, the Giants finished their final visit to Redland 5½ games in front and with a record of 13 victories in 18 games against the last-place club.

The Reds got only five hits off Fitzsimmons and one off his successor, Al Smith, but they bunched them with telling force in the fifth after an error by Travis Jackson let the world champions in for trouble.

Burning Up Surprises With Three-Length Victory in Narragansett Feature Race

Bylona Cops Runner-up Honors

Beats Redress, Choice, by 1½ Lengths; Mr. Khayyam Victor.

NARRAGANSETT RACE TRACK, R. I., Aug. 21 (AP). Burning Up, 6-year-old gelding owned by J. D. Mikel, today scored a surprisingly easy victory in the fifth event, a $2,000 claiming race, featuring the Narragansett Park program.

Well handled by T. King, Burning Up went to the front after leaving the back stretch and proved easily the best in a field of eight, beating the 5-year-old Bylona by three lengths. C. V. Whitney's Redress, a 4-year-old gelding and the favorite, lost so much ground in the early running that he was unable to finish better than third, a length and a half farther back, despite a strong finish.

The winner paid $8.70 straight for each $2 ticket in the mutuels, $5.10 to place and $3.20 to show.

Mr. Khayyam by Nose.

Saratoga Race Track, Aug. 21 (AP). Mrs. James M. Austin's Mr. Khayyam and the Wheatley Stable's Dark Secret staged a great finish in the thirty-second running of the mile and a furlong Champlain Handicap here today, with the former taking the $2,900 winner's share of the purse by a nose. Larranaga, representing the Anall Stable, finished three lengths behind the pair in third place. Don Meade, leading rider at the meeting, and Charlie Kurtsinger thrilled the crowd with their whipping finish, Meade scoring his second triumph in a row.

Mr. Khayyam receded from 9 to 5 to 16 to 5 in the betting. Top weight, under 125 pounds, the Omar Khayyam colt ran the distance in 1:52.

At the Post . . .

Narragansett, Aug. 22.

Dear Al:

It looks as if Bennings, Inc., has struck its true stride again. I have had seven winners in two days and Mike came through with four winners and a second at Cumberland. I guess that isn't giving the horses the one-two punch. Old Traffic Judge did the trick for me today, along with Eldee and Westys Duke, but I would have traded two of them to have been able to put over Kibitzer. As I had forecast, Kibitzer was a live horse, and a more intelligent ride might have found us collecting the first dough instead of the show—and at 13 to 1. However, I may not dig up a Khorasan or a Gift of Roses every day, but believe me, fellow, I'm trying. If you feel the urge to wager tomorrow, you might look these over before making up your mind.

BILL.

First race—Blind Praise and Tracker are a close fit in this maiden race and I look for them to finish in the order named. The former has a shift in the weights that may decide the issue. On Our Way breaks off the rail and will be ready if the top pair makes mistakes.

Second race—Moane Keala gets the Bennings call in the second, but will have to step along, because Cantersine and Gay Banner are fit horses. Clocker Mike has a notation in his workout book on Fred Almy and I'm passing it along.

Third race—I tried to put over Boy Crazy last week and the rascal failed me. He is just as well suited tomorrow and should the word be given we will hang up a nice mutuel. Calome and Mayvite to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Stepbrother seems to have found a good spot here. I expect him to draw the bulk of the play, but any price will be a good one. Red Badge and Cold Spill for the place and show.

Fifth race—That last seems to indicate that Cutie Face is back in stride. We may get a race tomorrow, and we may not. This one is of the brand generally saved for Saturday's heavy play. Bedight's last was a beaut. Carisbrooke to complete the money picture.

Sixth race—Big Beau will carry the Bennings backing into the feature race. I'm placing Khorassan second, despite that powerful winning effort he brought us last out. Flying Cadet is one that will have some say in the distribution of the purse.

Seventh race—This is Brass Monkey's route, and I expect the veteran to dispose of Fabius. Vested Power is a long shot with a fighting chance to upset the top pair.

Eighth race—Periodical is either tailing off or seeking a price, but I can not overlook him. Should take care of Brown Wisdom and Plucky Lady.

1—Kaharon, Wise Pete, Rancher.
2—In Clover, Jane Porter, Bright Tess.
3—Golden Castle, Wandering Jim, Stylish Mac.
4—Easter Herald, Ada Wan, Clear Knight.
5—Schley B., War General, Aella.
6—Washout, Wise Mollie, Postponement.
7—The Gen, Bokie B., Dunstar.

Army Poloists Win From Ft. Myer

Captain Davis Shines as U. S. Team Rolls Up 17-6 Margin.

By John R. Vosburgh.

SOME Fort Myer officers rebelled against the American Army yesterday at West Potomac Park but the uprising was quickly and effectively quelled by a picked squad of Army sharpshooters. In fact, it would not be amiss to say that Uncle Sam's forces somewhat decisively took the mutinous faction into camp, as the saying goes in the Army. All of which is by way of reporting that the U. S. Army polo team, which is to meet the Mexican Army team next month, enjoyed its first Washington work-out yesterday by romping to a 17-to-6 conquest over the gallant but outclassed defenders of Fort Myer.

It was the first practice session the Army squad has enjoyed in nigh onto two weeks and they galloped hither and yon with such devastating results as to make the most loyal Mexican a bit apprehensive.

All Combinations Good.

The Army tacticians, seeking the best combination possible, juggled the line-up into quite unrecognizable form by the time the afternoon had ended. It did not seem to make a whole lot of difference which line-up was used; they all looked powerful enough.

The first arrangement with Lieut. Harry Stadler at No. 1, Capt. C. C. Davis at No. 2, Lieut. George Read at No. 3 and Maj. C. E. Smith at back, started off slowly in the first chukker, but had a lead of 5 to 2 at the end of the second period.

At this point, 24-year-old Lieut. Eddie Walker was shoved in at back in place of the veteran Smith and the latter went to No. 2, Capt. Davis to No. 1 and Stadler, who indicated he was in fine form by slamming over two goals in the second quarter, went to the sidelines. Maj. Swing went in at back in place of Col. Devers for Fort Myer and Devers went to No. 2, Lieut. Hank Reed going out.

Maj. Swing and Lieut. Gordon Rogers were the shinging lights of the Fort Myer outfit and it would not be at all surprising if the major finds himself at back for the Mexican series, despite the fact he is on the selection committee.

Walker Too Green.

The second Army combination worked for two periods, but the youthful Walker, although showing fine promise, appeared too green for the vitally important back post and this four was held to three points. In the fifth chukker, Lieut. Walker went up to No. 2, Capt. Davis went out, Smith went back to No. 4 and Stadler replaced Davis at No. 1.

Walker went much better in the forward berth and this quartet tore through the last three chukkers for eight goals. An extra chukker was played.

Capt. Davis was the outstanding man on the field from an offensive standpoint, rolling up seven goals and scoring in every chukker but the sixth. Col. Patton was the Fort's high scorer, with three goals, but Maj. Swing's defensive work was perhaps the chief feature of the post's play.

5,000 See Cumberland Races; Feature to Tulyries Wand

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—With an attendance of more than 5,000 and fair skies, the Maryland fall racing seison opened at the seventeenth annual Cumberland Fair today on a fast track.

The feature race was the Windsor Hotel Purse, the fourth race, which carried a trophy and was won by Tulyries Wand, owned by Mrs. L. Bull, Berryville, Va. This race paid the largest mutuel, one of $30.20.

The fastest time, which equaled the track record, was made in the D. R. Sloan Memorial race, won by Rustic Cuba, owned by Mrs. M. Nelson Bond, Baltimore, the time being 0:56 2-5. This race was in honor of the late Duncan R. Sloan, of Lonaconing, Md., the first president of the fair. Big Dipper, owned by Mrs. G. F. Cook, Washington, was second.

The betting was equal to the first day of last year, it was stated, but the pari-mutuel people said they would not give out the totals until the end of the week. The bets were almost exclusively $2 and $5. Tendollar bets were few and far between.

There are 276 horses on the ground and 5 horses from Saratoga are stabled in trucks, owing to overcrowded stables. Nineteen horses were turned away, while tents have to be erected to accommodate the great influx of horse attendants.

Six pickpockets were escorted off the grounds to the railway station by police and ordered out of the city.

Approximately $29,000 was bet the first day last year and the figures today are expected to go slightly above that amount.

Racing Secretary Edward J. Brennan said the racing card tomorrow was most attractive, with two trophy races to be followed up with the "Hancock."

Net Upsets Mark Capital City Event

Shenkin, Deck Beaten by Unseeded Players.

Upsets marked yesterday's play in the annual Capital City League tournament on the Henry Park courts. Herb Shenkin, seeded No. 3, bowed to Bill Buchanan, unseeded, 6—4, 6—4, and Pat Deck, seeded No. 4, was eliminated by Happy Jacob, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. Jacob was also unseeded. Both were quarter-final matches.

Hy Ritzenberg, seeded second, advanced to the semifinals with a 6—4, 6—4 triumph over Don Garber, while Mario Erana and Allen Staubley entered the second round of the doubles by defeating Cullen and Post, 13—11, 6—0. Tony Latona and Shenkin, advanced by default over Staubley and Hugh Trigg and Staubley then teamed with Erana.

In today's matches Latona and Shenkin face Goubeau and Stocklinski, and Deck and Ritzenberg, seeded second, play Erana and Staubley in second-round matches.

Stamford Track Fire Kills Two Race Horses

Niagara Falls, Ontario, Aug. 21 (AP).—Two valuable race horses, Clarry, of the J. C. Fletcher Stable, of Toronto, and American B, were destroyed by fire that burned a stable at the Stamford race track, near here at noon today. Handlers led 38 other horses to safety.

Second in Row For Acacia Tossers

THE second game of the play-off between Acacia and Center Market for the championship of the National Capital League of The Post Association found Acacia taking up where it left off the day before and when the game was called on account of darkness at the end o fthe eighth inning, the Insurancemen walked off the field with an impressive 4-to-2 victory under their belts.

One more victory will give Acacia the league championship and the right to compete in the series of the week-day league champions of The Post Association, which will begin on September 8.

Tomorrow, on the North Ellipse diamond, with their backs against the wall, the Marketmen will make a supreme effort to head off the rush of Acacia boys.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINNANT, $17.30, $9.40, $6.20; ROYAL DUCHESS, $4.20, $3.20; INDIAN NEWS, $6.30.

MINNANT went to the command in the first few strides, drew clear in the opening furlong and, rated along in front, held ROYAL DUCHESS safe at the end. The latter gained a prominent position soon after the start, chased the winner closest for the entire journey, but was unable to seriously menace, despite being placed under punishment through the stretch. INDIAN NEWS went into contention with a rush before leaving the back stretch, responded determinedly to urging and, coming to the outside in the stretch, finished with good energy. EARLY DAWN, unruly at the post and a prominent factor early, was hard ridden in an effort to reach the leaders and faltered in the last furlongs. COONEY, well placed early, but in close quarters coming the far turn, was pinched back and was unable to recover. PANTOUFLE, slow to begin and unable to fully settle into best stride during the opening quarter-mile, moved up fast in the last three-sixteenths.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:03. Off at 3:06. Winner, F. D. Watts' b. g. (5), by Angon—Mother Machree. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47, 1:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRAFFIC JUDGE, $10.40, $5.00, $3.70; DECORATE, $6.60, $4.10; MYNAH, $3.30.

TRAFFIC JUDGE was not hurried during first quarter-mile, moved up steadily approaching the stretch, came to the outside and, closing with a rush, was going away at the finish. DECORATE, sent to the lead from the start, shook off JESS, opened up a clear lead and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to cope with the superior late speed displayed by the winner. MYNAH, in close quarters down the back stretch, and unable to find racing room, closed with keen speed in the last furlong. LIQUEUR, under urging all the way, was unable to keep pace through the closing test drive being placed under punishment in the last quarter-mile. POMPHONE had early speed, but faltered when the real test came. JESS faltered in the last furlong from her efforts of forcing the pace. SONNELLI tired through the stretch. The others were never prominent.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward; maidens. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:38. Winner, Mrs. Laurin B. (3), by Campfire—Nature's Child. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ELDEE, $4.40, $3.10.• $2.40; SUN CLOISTER, $4.40, $2.60; HEEDLESS GAL, $2.80.

ELDEE, raced under steadying restraint while in close attendance of the pace, responded gamely when called upon in the stretch and was up in the concluding stride. SUN CLOISTER went to the front at once, was steadied along under slight reserve, withstood repeated bids from HEEDLESS GAL and just managed to hold on long enough. HEEDLESS GAL, in nearest attendance of the pace, made determined effort from the outside at the head of the stretch and weakened slightly in the last three-sixteenths. FLYING MERCURY held to a prominent position throughout, though unable to improve his position under punishment. THE RAKE went evenly. ROSE HAZEN never could enter into contention. PERPETUITY was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:06½. Off at 4:10. Winner, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wilson's blk. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WESTYS DUKE, $4.50, $3.40, $2.90; SAND CLOUD, $16.70, $9.50; TIGER JOHN, $6.70.

WESTYS DUKE, a prominent factor from the outset, shook off TIGER JOHN, drew away into a good lead and had enough left to hold SAND CLOUD safe. The latter worked his way up gradually and closed with a rush through the last three-sixteenths. TIGER JOHN, a forward factor all the way, weakened slightly through the stretch run. STROLLING MISS moved up steadily, but forced to lose considerable ground, was unable to reach the leaders. TEETER TOTTER closed gamely on the outside through the stretch. PETEE BLUE was unable to reach the leaders. PROSECUTOR, prominently placed, weakened badly in the last quarter-mile. LIEBCHEN, never prominent. JAY D faltered badly after displaying early speed. DANCING QUEEN was away slowly and was outrun throughout.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Metta-comet. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, ridden out. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:37½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BURNING UP, $8.70, $5.10, $3.20; BYLONA, $5.80, $3.20; REDRESS, $2.70.

BURNING UP followed in close pursuit of the pace while racing under slight reserve, went to the front after leaving the back stretch and drew out as if much the best. BYLONA, placed well all the way, continued determinedly to the end. REDRESS dropped back soon after the start and trailed far back; began moving up in the last quarter-mile, but was unable to reach the leaders. FLOWERY worked her way up gradually and closed gamely. OLD JUDGE made up some ground in the last furlong. PRIMUTE weakened badly in the last half-mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:06½. Off at 5:07. Winner, A. A. Baroni's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCOTCH SOLDIER, $5.10, $3.20, $2.70; FRIAR MARK, $4.30, $3.20; KIBITZER, $5.70.

SCOTCH SOLDIER went to the front straightening out on the back stretch, withstood repeated bids from KIBITZER, drew into a good lead and, ridden sharply, held FRIAR MARK safe. The latter swerved early, closed stoutly under punishment through the stretch, but was unable to reach the winner. KIBITZER, in the forefront from the beginning, continued with good energy to the end. JAMBALAYA, well up for the first five furlongs, weakened in the last five-sixteenths. UKRAINE loomed up threateningly nearing the stretch, but faltered badly in th last three-sixteenths. OLAMAY could never enter into contention. PRINCE TOKALON was outrun throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 5:37½. Off at 5:39. Winner, T. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GUIDING LIGHT, $73.60, $30.40, $13.40; BATTLING KNIGHT, $9.90, $6.10; YAP, $15.90.

GUIDING LIGHT took command in the run to the first turn, was rated along in front under slight restraint and, ridden out through the closing furlong, was never seriously threatened. BATTLING KNIGHT, prominently placed all the way, made a determined effort to reach the leader through the closing quarter-mile, but was always held safe. YAP went prominently placed from the start and held on well under pressure. PRECIOUS KING, well up throughout, continued with good energy to the close. SISKO went evenly throughout. LAWLESS LADY never could reach the leaders. PEACH BUD, a trailer for the opening five furlongs, made up some ground. PERNICKETY was never prominent. SARSITA, away slowly, was outrun throughout

Pig 'n' Whistle Nine Beats Heurich's to Tie Industrial League Play-Off Series

Brewers Get But 4 Hits; Lose, 8-1

Pitcher Watt Also Has Perfect Day at Bat; Colliere Stars.

AFTER several postponements caused by rain and wet grounds, the playoff for the championship of the Industrial League was resumed yesterday and while the lay-off may have dimmed the batting eyes of the Heurich Brewers, who got but four hits, it had no such effect on the Pig 'n' Whistle boys, who banged out 11 lusty blows at opportune moments to bring home an 8-to-1 victory.

It was simply a case of too much Pee Colliere and Frank Watt, veteran Pig battery. In addition to setting down the Heurich sluggers with four hits, Watt had a perfect day at bat with three for three, one of which was a double, while his battery mate, Colliere, came through with three telling blows. The Barbecue boys batted around in the second inning and when they were finally retired, they had scored five runs and practically put the game on ice.

Knight Fielding Star.

The fielding feature of the game was supplied by Dick Knight, Heurich center fielder, whose brilliant catch with three Pig 'n' Whistle runners on the bases cut off a potential home run and saved Reggie Brown, Heurich hurler, further embarassment. As the series now stands, each team has won one game and the deciding one, which will give the winner the right to compete in the series of week-day league champions, will be played today on the West Ellipse at 5 o'clock.

Pat C., 22-1, Surprises In Feature at Chicago

Chicago, Aug. 21 (AP).—Pat C., from the barns of Harned Brothers, of Louisville, Ky., doing his best running in the stretch, galloped to a surprise victory today in the 6½ top race race at Hawthorne.

Almost ignored in the wagering, Pat C. rewarded his few backers with $46.78 for each $2 straight ticket. J. Emery's Secret Tryst set the pace most of the distance, but weakened on the stretch turn and Pat C., ridden by H. Tinker, assumed command. He went on to win by two lengths over Secret Tryst. The favorite, Stuyvesant Peabody's veteran campaigner, Martie Flynn, was third. The time was 1:19 2-5.

Celtics, Kann's Nines Play Sunday

Game in Alexandria Pits Teams With Five Records Against Each Other.

ALEXANDRIA, Aug. 21 (Spl.). The St. Mary's Celtics, who won their last dozen games after having gotten away to a shaky start, take on Kann's here next Sunday and a great game appears to be in the offing. The Kann's team, winner of the Washington Departmental Store League and boasting a record of 21 victories in 22 starts, should provide the Celtics with as stern competition as they have yet faced. Archie Scrivener probably will twirl for the Celts against the Store nine.

Commercial Loop play will be resumed Thursday, when The Post and Police nines meet in the first game of a series to break a triple tie for the second half title. Columbia Firemen drew a bye and oppose the winner of Shursday's game next Monday.

Gridmen Working Out.

Fritter and Luckett, co-captains of the Alexandria High football team, began preliminary training for the season today at Baggett's Stadium. Both are slightly overweight and their self-imposed workouts are planned to get off the extra poundage before the rest of the squad begins drills.

The Fraters and Hopkins Furniture elevens are both anxious to use Baggett's Stadium. The officials of the Alexandria A. A., who lease the field, are not ready to announce what team or teams will get the use of the gridiron.

Middleburg Poloists Beat Wash. County

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.). The Washington County polo team was defeated in a hotly contested game here by the Middleburg, Va., team, 11 to 10. The visitors came from behind in the final chukker to score twice.

The line-up and summary follows:

Middleburg.	Position.	Wash. Co.
Capt. Hulbert	1	Ed. Mason
J. Rollins	2	J. Jamison
R. Woodward	3	R. Jamison
J. Walker	4	Capt. Mallonee

Score by chukkers:

Middleburg	2	1	3	2	1	2	—11

Champion Barney Ross Goes Back to the Training Grind

Hunters Show This Week at Berryville

BERRYVILLE, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—The battle for the mythical supremacy among the hunter stables of northern Virginia again will be fought here Thursday and Friday when the thirty-third annual Berryville horse and colt show is held with more than 300 entries for the two-day exhibition.

Dr. Lewis M. Allen, of Winchester, and Mrs. John Hay Whitney, mistress of Llangollen Farm, near Upperville, long contenders for honors in the hunter field, will again be strong competitors. Dr. Allen has entered such prize horses as Royal Wonder, Clifton's Queen, Clifton's Gem, Clifton's Lad, Clifton's Lady, and Clifton's Bear, while Mrs. Whitney's colors will be represented by her famous Glory Road, Gay, Spring Hope, Paulett and others.

Competition Keen.

But the colors of Dr. Allen and Mrs. Whitney will have competition aplenty from other stables this year, members of the equine world point out. Peach Brothers, of Upperville, will be on hand with Cataract, Dorothy, Doody and others. Mrs. Allen Potts, of Gordonsville, one of the veteran exhibitors of the show, has among her entries Sentiment's Dam and Nesbit. Miss Margaret Cotter, of Washington, is bringing Rocksie to the show, while W. Carlton Eacho, of Washington, is expected to be another strong competitor from the District of Columbia.

Other northern Virginia horse fanciers who are expected to offer keen competition in the hunter classes include Miss Ellen Wheeler, Boyce; Cockerill Brothers, The Plains; D. O. Furr, Middleburg; L. R. Colbert, Fredericksburg, and a dozen other stables. George C. Greenhalgh, Toledo, Ohio, fianancier who recently purchased a country estate near here, is exhibiting at the show for the first time.

The show will open Thursday morning with the heavy draft classes. Competition among Clarke County farmers for honors in the heavy draft field is always keen. A number of out-of-the-county entries have been made. C. E. Norman, veteran horseman of Purcellville, is bringing a string of horses. Others who will try for heavy draft honors include Mrs. W. C. Langley, Middleburg; Dr. Robert Snavely, Hagerstown, Md.; Ralph Field, Round Hill; J. W. Orrison, Paeonian Springs; Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Upperville, and others. Two heavy draft features, the two-horse and four-horse teams, will be shown the second day. Mrs. Whitney has the only entries in the two-horse team class and to date there are no entries in the four-horse team event.

Hunter classes on the initial day's program will include thoroughbreds suitable to become hunters, 2-year-olds; thoroughbreds suitable to become hunters, 3-year-olds; hunters, 4-year-olds and under; handicap jump, lightweight hunters, thoroughbred road hack, ladies' hunters and pair of hunters.

There will be three flat and one steeplechase race each day. More than $3,000 in prizes is offered for the two days' events.

Oriole Field Trials Listed Oct. 8, 9 and 10

Baltimore, Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Officials of the Oriole Amateur Field Trials Association have designated October 8, 9, and 10 as the dates for the organization's annual field trials at Loch Raven, near Baltimore. Sportsmen and dog lovers from throughout the State, and from Washington and nearby Virginia and Pennsylvania, are expected to compete.

Most important of the competitions is that for the Jack Dunn Trophy, donated by the famous baseball manager's widow in his memory. There also will be a derby stake and a ladies' stake.

Culpeper Downs Charlottesville

Victory, 4-3, Is 37th Out of 45 Played This Season.

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Culpeper Athletic Club defeated the Charlottesville Cardinals here this afternoon, 4—3, for its thirty-seventh victory of the season, as against eight defeats.

"Pete" Crowe was on the mound for the visitors, allowing seven hits, walking five and striking out six. "Lefty" McIntyre, for the locals, allowed nine hits, struck out six and issued no walks.

There were eight passed balls in the game, which figured in scoring of three runs.

Culpeper plays a league game at Charlottesville tomorrow, Fredericksburg here on Thursday, goes to Front Royal Saturday and stages the last game with Harrisonburg on Sunday at Harrisonburg. This Sunday may definitely decide the Valley League championship, as Culpeper is now one game ahead of Harrisonburg, in second place, and has five games to play, where Harrisonburg has only two.

Tricounty Title Captured by Church Hill

Wins in Second Half Southern Section; Walkersville Is Victor.

CHURCH HILL, Md., Aug. 21 (Spl.).—Church Hill won the second half pennant in the southern division of the Tricounty League by defeating Brunswick, first half winners, in a close, hard-fought tilt, 5 to 4. The teams will meet later to decide the county title.

The game was a hurling duel between B. Carey and Bohn, in which the latter had a slight edge. Church Hill scored three runs in the second inning on a pass to Bohn, wild throw by Mahone and singles by Hickman, R. Shook and Dutrow. One more was added in the fifth and the winning tally was put over in the eighth frame.

Bohn held Brunswick scoreless and allowed but one hit for five innings. In the sixth the Railroaders scored two and put over two more in the eighth. Bohn then settled down and held Brunswick hitless while Church Hill scored its winning tally.

ACTION, fast and furious, should be the keynote when the Heurich Brewers and Pig 'n' Whistle hook up today on the West Ellipse at 5 o'clock in the deciding game of the play-off for the championship of the Industrial League. Each team has won one game. Manager Bill Flester probably will depend upon the sturdy right arm of Ev Russell to lead his team to the championship, while the Pig 'n' Whistel mound selection will not be made until game time. These two teams are warm rivals and have on their rosters some of the outstanding ball players in The Post Association ranks.

On the adjoining North Ellipse, Acacia and Center Market will also take the field at 5 o'clock in what may be the deciding game in the play-off for the championshp of the National Capital League. Acacia, with two wins already, needs but one more to put the pennant

Market Shakes Off Torpor as Sales Expand to 579,010 Shares.

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—Emerging from extreme torpor, the stock market resumed its recovery movement today, regaining more than it had lost in three sessions of slow decline.

Turnover expanded to 579,010 shares, small compared with last spring and winter sessions, but more than double yesterday's volume, which set a 12-year record for dullness.

On the average, stocks pushed forward to a new top on the recovery from the July 26 low points. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 issues rose 1.8 points to 73.

Commodity Price Gains.

Further gains in commodity prices, although motivated chiefly by short crops, kept inflation talk simmering in the background. The Moody Index of spot commodity prices rose to a new 1934 peak at 153.9, aaginst 153.4 yesterday.

Rail shares initiated the advance in early trading, but much of the buying again converged on shares standing to benefit from appreciation in commodity values. Gains of 1 to nearly 5 points were recorded for American Can.

Can, Smelting, Armour of Illinois preferred (new), Santa Fe, J. I. Case, Caterpillar Tractor, Chrysler, Corn Products, Du Pont, Goodyear Tire, Johns-Manville, Cuban-American Sugar preferred, International Harvester, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward and U. S. Smelting.

Closings Near Top.

The advance embraced virtually the whole list. It continued quietly to the finish, closing prices being about the best of the day.

Railroad shares were stimulated by predictions of moderate expansion in traffic movement over the next few weeks and indications, in weekly carloading reports, that drought conditions so far had tended to improve loadings of Western carriers through the movement of live stock and emergency demands for water and feed.

A tendency to look forward to a seasonal bulge in business, some optimistic forecasts on the domestic outlook for rising markets and the dearth of liquidation in stocks the past few days encouraged buying.

Farmer Buying Gains.

Increased farmer purchasing power, despite drought devastation, was foreseen this fall as leading farm staples held strong, with the top price of hogs approaching $7 a hundredweight. Cotton extended its rally 60 to 70 cents a bale. Wheat added ½ to 1¼ cents a bushel to its previous rally gains. Corn held gains of 1⅜ to 1½ cents and other grains were strong.

Softness in Treasury issues was accompanied by renewed mild pressure on the dollar in foreign exchange dealings.

Action of the market itself, rather than outside developments, moved some traders to switch to the bull side. A substantial gain in demand deposits and a further rise in "all other," or commercial loans, in the weekly Federal Reserve Member Bank condition statement, were commented upon favorably as possibly indicative of a credit expansion trend.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Reports That the Steel Industry Is Considering Giving Up Its Code Reflects the Growing Dissatisfaction With Labor Burdens.

By Ralph West Robey.

Reports that the steel industry is considering giving up its code provide one of the most interesting commentaries that we have had upon the advantages of having business regimented. For if the steel industry can not realize benefits from operating as a unit under the NRA, it is fairly certain that no other industry will. One would think, in view of the code under which it operates, that steel would be one of the last industries to become restive.

This is because the steel industry to an unusual degree lends itself to forced regimentation. There are only comparatively few operating units involved. In consequence, the problem of enforcement is relatively easy. Here, the code either stands or falls on its merits. The companies either make profits or suffer losses while complying with its provisions. There is, in a word, little opportunity for the chiseling that is prevalent in industries where there are thousands upon thousands of companies.

If Any Group Likes a Code It Should Be This Industry.

If operating an industry as a unit under the NRA is an advantage, therefore, the steel group should be one of the most ardent defenders of this attempt to regiment business. Its code is among the most favorable that have been approved from the point of view of the employers. Under it the industry can do things that heretofore have been illegal, or at least have been of doubtful legality. To an extraordinary degree it can operate as a monopoly.

Obviously there must be some powerful drawbacks in order to offset this right to fix prices, &c. The first one, perhaps, or the one that tends to make members of the industry dissatisfied, is that, under the code, business has not been good. By and large the companies still are unable to make money. For a while they enjoyed a good volume of activity, quite enough to put them in the black, but more recently the demand has dried up. Today the rate of operation is within whispering distance of the low of the depression. And while the outlook for the fall is said to be encouraging, the development of a renewed demand has been slower than expected.

Additional Costs Help The Dissatisfaction.

Combine with this the fact that under the code the industry is subjected to additional costs, through higher wages and shorter hours, and it is easy to see why there should be talk of giving up the code. The advantages of operating the industry as a monopoly have not been sufficient, in view of the general level of business activity in the country, to offset the additional costs. It is a short step, therefore, to the conclusion that the whole code should be abandoned. Then costs should be reduced again. Then, even if profits could not be made at the moment, the losses would not be so great.

It is one thing, however, to think along these lines and quite a different thing to carry out the plan. For what the steel industry wants basically, it may be assumed, is not the giving up of its greater freedom from anti-trust legislation. This it would like to keep. All it wants is to be freed from the additional expense of the present wage and hour provisions, and not to be subject to labor domination. The ideal situation from its point of view would be to get rid of these burdens and still have the right to operate as a monopoly. Failing this, the next best thing, the dissatisfied members apparently reason, is to throw over the whole NRA and trust to operating under gentlemen's agreements.

If the NRA desires a long life it must prevent the steel industry from realizing either of these possibilities.

Bonds Pulled Slightly Lower By Federals

Decline Totals One-tenth as Trading Increases to $13,672,000.

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—The bond market showed signs of revival today, but backwardness of United States Government securities tended to dampen trading enthusiasm considerably and closing prices were somewhat irregular.

Due to an expansion of activity in the Federal section, transfers totaled $13,672,000, par value, against $6,245,000 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporates eased one-tenth of a point to 83.8.

Government issues apparently had neither important public nor Treasury support. With buying power relatively small at top prices, the list showed a lower trend from the start. Final losses in this department ranged from 2-32nds to 13-32nds of a point.

Federal Farm 3s dropped 11-32nds to 98.21, a new low. The Treasuries were the most active losers. The Federal turn over amounted to about $7,070,000, compared with $8,890,000 in the previous session.

While the majority of prime investment corporation loans were inclined to yield fractionally to around a point, the so-called secondary groups developed renewed strength along with stocks. The lower-priced rails proved the most consistent gainers.

Among the carriers, up 1 to around 2 points, were some issues of Alleghany Corporation, Chesapeake Corporation, Chicago & Alton, Chicago Great Western, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, M. K. T., Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific, Southern and Texas & Pacific.

Union Pacific first 4s lost 1½ points at 106½, Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s were off ½ at 103½ and Santa Fe general 4s yielded ⅜ at 102¼.

Paramount Publix bonds responded to estimates of increased earnings and progress on reorganization plans with gains of 4 to 5 points. Warner Bros. Pictures 6s also advanced 2½ to 56.

Curb's Prices Pushed Higher; Volume Up

Demand for Mining Shares Aid; Transfers Rise to 117,000 Shares.

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—The curb market rallied under a substantial demand for mining shares and specialties today. Numerous stocks closed fractions to around 2 points higher. Volume was fairly large at time.

Utilities and oils were quiet and narrow. Prices were steady at the start, but worked higher during the first hour. Rallying tendencies continued into the noon period. A lull followed, but the upward trend was renewed in the final dealings.

Gains of around 2 points or so were recorded by Buckeye Pipe, Dow Chemical, Driver Harris, New Jersey Zinc and Newmont.

Shares finishing up sizable fractions to about a point included American Gas & Electric, Hiram Walker, Swift & Co., Lake Shore, Technicolor, and Silver King Mining. Quotations were about even in Aluminum Company of America, Electric Bond & Share, American Cyanamid "B," Standard Oil of Indiana and Glen Alden Coal.

Transfers approximated 117,000 shares compared with yesterday's record low of 82,000.

(Associated Press.)

Gasoline—The spot market has an easy tone with low octane ranging from 3½ to 4 cents a gallon. Most recent sales have been in the range of 3¾-3¾ cents.

Hides—Chicago advices report the sale of about 3,000 light native cows at 7½ cents a pound, against a price of 6¾ to 7 cents on August 16.

Pig Iron—Current gossip indicates that the trade is looking for maintenance of present price levels for fourth - quarter deliveries. The schedule will be announced around September 1.

Copper—Metal at European centers holds around the low levels of last week at 7.05-7.10 cents a pound. Blue Eagle Copper for domestic shipment is unchanged at 9 cents. Buying is light here and abroad.

Stocks—Trading revived and the market moved forward. Prices averaged 1.8 points higher. Sales volume expanded to 579,010 shares, more than double the turnover on Monday.

Bonds—Declines in Federals seemed to pull the bond market downward. The fall averaged only one-tenth of a point. Trading volume was increased to $13,672,000.

Curb—The curb market rallied under a substantial demand for mining shares and specialties. Utilities and oils were quiet and narrow. Transfers advanced to 117,000 shares.

Wheat—New strength in foreign grains aided wheat prices to climb ½ to 1¼ cents. Buoyancy remained throughout the session. Corn gained 1½ cents. September wheat sold at 1.04¾, December, at 1.05⅞.

Cotton—Prices were reduced right after opening sales, but steadied up and advanced later. Proposals to loan from 12½ to 13 cents a pound to growers by the Government were reported. October sold at 13.39. The general market rose 12 to 13 points. December closed at 13.53.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed quiet, 6 to 11 points higher. September sold at 15.58; October, at 15.73.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.28; refined sold at 4.70.

Dollar—The United States dollar was steady on foreign exchange. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.09⅛ to the English pound; 6.67¾ cents to the French franc, and 40.15 cents to the German mark.

Bond Trading Facilities Enlarged by Exchange

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—The increasing importance of the bond market, especially the constantly expanding activity in Government issues, has led to a general rearrangement of trading facilities on the New York Stock Exchange.

Not only has the floor space available for bond trading been considerably enlarged, but the number of telephones and other facilities of the members have been increased. Under the new arrangement, the space previously occupied by "inactive" 10-share stocks has been given over entirely to trading in Government bonds, approximately doubling the floor space available for dealings in these issues, while the general rearrangement of the trading floor has provided additional space for "active" bonds and "book" bonds.

Wheat Scores Further Gains; Market Firm

Foreign Prices Stronger; Inflation Gossip Aids Buoyant Trading.

Chicago, Aug. 21 (AP).—New strength in foreign grain markets today prompted another price rise here, wheat advancing ½ to 1¼ cents a bushel and corn showing a gain of about 1½ cents.

The buoyant undertone of the market remained firm throughout the session. Price upturns in European markets and at Buenos Aires were leading constructive factors, although buying was stimulated to some extent by continued strong position of cash grains and by revival of inflation gossip at the pits.

Wheat shot up early to an overnight gain of almost 2 cents, but profit-taking sales induced reactions at times. At the top May deliveries reached $1.08¼, about 9 cents below the season's high established early this month.

Gains Shaved Slightly.

At the close all wheat deliveries were fractionally below the day's best figures, September new at 1.04¾@1.04⅞; December new at 1.05⅞@1.06, and May at 1.07¾@1.07⅞.

Corn showed relatively more strength than did wheat. Bulls in corn derived much encouragement from sharp advances of that grain at foreign centers and from reports of insect damage in some sections.

An important bullish feature, especially in the market for coarse grains, was a report from Canada that the Dominion government might place an embargo to prevent movement of feed or forage to the United States. There was uncertainty with respect to the government's intention to lower import duties on forage because of reduced animal feed supplies in this country.

Liverpool Wheat Rises.

Liverpool wheat advanced 1 to 1⅝ pence, reflecting light offerings of Canadian wheat for prompt shipment and the removal of hedges by Argentina shippers.

Relatively light wheat offerings here met with good commission house buying, but the aggregate trade was not large. Caution was noted in operations on both sides of the market. Leading observers ascribed this feature to uncertainty regarding developments in the agricultural program at Washington.

Milling demand for wheat was not as active as it has been recently.

Fears in Argentina.

The inflation talk, while largely ignored, centered around a published report that devaluation of the silver dollar may not be far distant. Another bullish item was word that traders in Argentina feared threatened labor troubles might prevent shipment of grain.

Observers expressed a belief the threatened strike accounted for buying of wheat futures in Liverpool attributed to removing hedges against Argentina grain.

Oats prices were up ½ to ¾ cent and rye and barley showed gains ranging from 1⅜ to 1⅞ cents. Provisions were moderately active and higher as a result of strength in hogs. Both lard and bellies sold at new highs for the season.

Paper Industry Drives Ahead On Wide Front

Consumption Is Increased as Code Aids Price Stabilization.

New York, Aug. 21.—Encouraging reports relating to conditions in the paper industry are becoming more general in practically all divisions. Code regulations, which were instrumental in stabilizing prices, greater interest in advertising programs, and the many new uses of paper in commerce and industry have been factors contributing to recovery movements in this industry.

Consumption of paper is running steadily ahead of last year's, newspaper advertising lineage for the first six months being up 16.7 per cent from the 1933 total, while magazine advertising lineage rose nearly 30 per cent, and wrapping, book and writing papers were used in quantities from 5 to 20 per cent larger.

Most of the manufacturers reported that output increased from the close of 1933 to the end of the first quarter, but that a recession started in May which reached its low for the year in July. Since that time, schedules have been widened in some divisions.

Wholesale Orders Up.

In spite of the recession in July, wholesale distribution of paper and paper specialties ranged from 20 to 30 per cent larger than for the comparative seven months of 1933.

While consumption is upward, and prices for all grades, with the exception of newsprint, have risen from their lows of the early part of 1933, production costs also have increased, which may affect the profit possibilities of the leading companies.

Thus far this year, however, the losses of 1933 have been halved by some of the most important producing units, while many of the small producers have shifted balances to the right side of the ledger for the first time in four years, according to a survey of the paper industry, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Since the middle of the second quarter, the comparison of production with that for the corresponding months of 1933 makes a less satisfactory showing, as at that time the rush to build inventories carried output 25 to 35 per cent ahead of 1932, and in some divisions the widest schedules in several years were reached.

In the tissue division, production both in value and units still is ahead of that of last year, even though there was a decided spurt in sales in July, 1933, due to the anticipated advances in prices, as a result of the NRA.

Output of newsprint in the United States and Canada for the first six months of 1934 was the highest for any six months' period since 1930.

The production for both countries reached 1,759,118 tons, compared with 1,350,989 tons in 1933, a gain of 408,129 tons, or 30.2 per cent.

While this exceeded the output for the first half of both 1932 and 1931 it fell below the total of 1,970,449 tons in the comparative period of 1930. Canadian mills in June produced more newsprint than in any June of recent years, topping even the high points of 1929 and 1930.

A total of 229,637 tons was produced, compared with 171,419 tons in 1933, an increase of 58,218 tons, or 33.9 per cent. In June, 1929, production was only 225,055 tons.

Weather Conditions.

U. S. Dept. of Agri., Weather Bureau, Washington, Tuesday, Aug. 21—8 P. M.

Forecast for the District of Columbia: Partly cloudy and warmer Wednesday; Thursday fair and somewhat cooler; gentle southerly winds becoming northwest Thursday.

For Maryland—Partly cloudy and somewhat warmer Wednesday, possibly light rain on the Eastern Shore Wednesday morning; Thursday fair, slightly cooler in interior.

For Virginia—Partly cloudy and warmer Wednesday, possibly light rain on the coast Wednesday morning; Thursday fair.

Conditions.

A tropical disturbance is apparently developing in the extreme eastern Caribbean and is central tonight about 16 degrees north, 64 degrees west, probably moving west-northwestward.

The disturbance that was over Manitoba has moved east-southeastward to Ontario, Moosonee, 29.62 inches, with a trough extending southeastward to the Texas Panhandle. Del Rio, Tex., 29.66 inches, and pressure is low and falling over the Plateau region and the interior of the Pacific States, Red Bluff, 29.78 inches. Pressure is relatively low off the South Atlantic Coast, Charleston, S. C., 29.94 inches. An area of high pressure is moving eastward over the ocean south of New England and another area of high pressure is moving southeastward over the Northern Plains States and northern Rocky Mountain region, Miles City, Mont., 30.16 inches. Scattered showers and thunderstorms have occurred in the southern Plateau region, the middle Canadian Provinces, the Mississippi Valley, the upper lake region and the South Atlantic States. The temperature has fallen along the Atlantic Coast and in the upper Missouri Valley and northern Rocky Mountain region, while it has risen in the middle Mississippi Valley and the lake region.

Hound Dog Is Able to Sit Up

Well, well: I nearly forgot to tell you where Hound Dog was when Aunt Lindy went out to take his dinner to him last Sunday. You remember that she did not find him, and that she was so busy telling Uncle Joe and Aunt Judy about the things that happened the night before that she didn't pay much attention to what was happening that day. All she wanted to do was talk.

But some of you children were going to guess where Hound Dog was and what he had for his dinner. It is pretty sure that some of you guessed right. Of course Hound Dog knew all about who tied him up, and he knew just as well who was going to have a great big old ham for dinner. Another thing he knew was that there would be plenty of room at the table, and that there would be lots of howdy for an old friend of the family.

So, after Uncle Joe and Aunt Judy came, and they were all busy talking about the "strange aminal," Hound Dog just lolled around the the house. Nobody was paying any attention to him, and so he jumped over the back fence and started through the woods to Blackie's house. Blackie didn't know for sure that he was coming, and hadn't said a thing to him the night before; but Billie Possum just grinned when they were talking about him, and asked the crowd if any of them thought Hound Dog was going to stay over at Aunt Lindy's, where he would get nothing for his Sunday dinner but scraps from the tabe, where he knew he could sit at a table with his friends and have thick slices of old ham put on his plate. Nobody in the crowd did think any such thing, but they didn't have to think anything very long, for here came Hound Dog loping up just like he was afraid he would be late for dinner.

"Well, old fellow," said Blackie to Hound Dog. "I really did hate to tie you up so last night, but if I hadn't done it you wouldn't have had a thing but scraps for your dinner today, and none of us folks out here would have had any good old ham; so I reckon you don't mind the little joke we played on you by tying you up.

"Not a bit, not a bit," said Hound Dog, as Jocko passed him a plate just filled with old ham and new cornbread.

There's no use trying to tell what all they talked about at dinner, but they did go over some plans for some more real frolics. Hound Dog said he must go back rather early, as Aunt Lindy might be worried about him, and so he didn't stay long after dinner. On his way back he jumped in the creek and got his hair all mussed up, and when he got back Aunt Lindy looked at him and patted him on the back, and she told Tom to look how wet and tired the poor dog was from hunting for the robber.

Kin of Rich Brewer Dies in Plane Crash

Norwalk, Conn., Aug. 21 (U.P.).—Louis B. Conley, jr., 28, of Norwalk and New York, grandson of the late millionaire brewer, George Ehret, was killed today when his airplane spun to the ground when he attempted a practice landing at Norfolk Airport.

Conley, who purchased the plane two weeks ago and was training for a pilot's license, died at Norwalk Hospital shortly after he had been taken from the wreckage.

Walt Mason, Himself

One Certainty.

I know not what the end shall be, of all these modern schemes, wherein our statesmen, wild and free, work out their jazzy dreams. It may be that we shall regain prosperity, that boon, if we blow in, as though insane, the ruble and doubloon. In strange and winding paths we stray, in alleys dark and queer; I only know I'll have to pay more taxes every year. The statesman shows me diagrams that he has lately drawn, to prove this realm of Uncle Sam's full soon will know a dawn; depression's clouds will drift away, the skies will all be clear; and I feel sure I'll have to pay more taxes every year. The statesman takes me by the hand and leads me to his lair; he has a project great and grand, the blue prints all are there; he has a lot of things to say which comfort not nor cheer; I only know I'll have to pay more taxes every year. The tax collector stands behind all schemes that may be sprung, and he has venom in his mind, and poison on his tongue. Whatever project is devised, whatever plan is phrased, the people all will be surprised if taxes are not raised. Great men are thinking all the time on how to slay the slump, and they have projects most sublime to save us from the dump. I know not how they plan to slay, what weapons may appear; I only know I'll have to pay more taxes every year. The gifted statesmen weave and wind, and while they plead their cause, the tax collector stands behind, with fierce and clutching claws. The tax collector stands behind the New or Ancient Deal, and we must groan and grunt and grind to answer his appeal.

Nevils Greets Scientists at Georgetown U.

3-Day Convention Opens for American Jesuit Association.

With about 75 scientists and teachers attending, the thirteenth annual meeting of the American Association of Jesuit Scientists opened a three-day session last night at Georgetown University.

The Rev. Coleman Nevils, S. J., president of Georgetown, welcomed the delegates at the opening business session in the chemistry amphitheater, and the Rev. T. H. Quigley, S. J., president of the association, outlined the scope of the annual meeting and discussed "Sadi Carnot and the Laws of Thermodynamics." A brief business session followed.

The association is composed of scientists and teachers of science in various Jesuit institutions in Eastern States. Today's sessions will consist of sectional meetings on biology, chemistry, mathematics and physics.

The Rev. Frederick W. Sohon, S. J., director of the Seismological Observatory at Georgetown and newly appointed dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, is chairman of the mathematics section, which will discuss giving students earlier training in higher mathematics. The Rev. Thomas D. Barry, S. J., who is soon to depart for Rome to assist the director of the Vatican Observatory, will discuss "The Differentiation of the Definite Integral."

The biology section is headed by the Rev. Charles A. Berger, S. J., of Woodstock College, in Maryland, who is to take up special studies this fall at Johns Hopkins University. Its meeting today will be in the nature of a symposium on the blood. The Rev. Francis W. Power, S. J., of Fordham University, New York City, will conduct the chemistry section, the principal speakers being the Rev. Richard S. Schmitt, of Loyola College, Baltimore; the Rev. Joseph J. Sullivan, of Boston College, and the Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, acting dean of Georgetown College.

The physics section is headed by the Rev. Emeran J. Kolkmeyer, of Georgetown, and included among the speakers are the Rev. Henry M. Brock, of Weston College, in Massachusetts; the Rev. John A. Tobin, of Boston College; the Rev. J. Joseph Lynch, of Fordham, and the Rev. John S. O'Connor. Officers will be elected Thursday.

Irish Block Roads In Tax Sales Fight

Farmers Protest Action Against Defaulters.

Limerick, Irish Free State, Aug. 21 (AP).—Farmers of Limerick and Waterford Counties today registered their objections to annuity land tax sales by blocking roads and by verbal protests.

The sale of cattle of farmers who fail to pay the annuity taxes has brought sharp criticism from Gen. Eoin O'Duffy's militant Blueshirts.

The strategy of the farmers in this section was milder than that of those in Cork, who used a truck as a battering ram against officers and brought on a fight in which a man was killed and a number wounded.

Overnight the Limerick farmers felled trees, cut wires, ripped up railroad tracks and otherwise made it difficult for police to reach the scene of the sale. The officers, however, found no resistance when they arrived.

Escaped Felon Back; Strain Was Too Great

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 21 (AP). A man who said he was Ralph Perrins, of New York, an escaped prisoner from the Federal prison at Leavenworth, Kans., surrendered to police here today and said he "couldn't stand the strain of being constantly on guard."

He said he learned to cut silhouettes in prison and, since he walked away from the prison garden, where he was a trusty, three months ago, had made his living cutting out such pictures on street corners. Several times, he said, he snipped likenesses of policemen.

Miss Gene Tennyson, one of Internal Revenue's popular workers, is secretary to Arthur J. Mellott, acting deputy commissioner of the alcohol tax unit. Miss Tennyson was born in Missouri. She began her Government service last May.

During Morgan Baker's vacation the Federal Diary is being edited by Robert F. Whitney.

GREATER public health protection from poisonous sprays on fruits is promised by new tests developed in the laboratories of the Food and Drug Administration by H. J. Wichman and his associates. The new test makes the detection of lead on fruit much quicker than was formerly possible.

HARD at work in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, a young woman who is proud of being a fast typist was put on her mettle by the sound of incredibly fast keys clicking in the next room. All through the night shift she tried to keep up with the cadence of her neighbors.

The next day she remarked to a friend that that the typists she had heard certainly set a hot pace without even any breathing spells. The friends asked from what room the frantic clicking came—and the joke was on Leonora Morgan (*). She had been trying to follow the rhythm set by telegraphic instruments' singing.

Figures issued yesterday by the Civil Service Commission show that its reemployment list has shrunk from 1,045 to 874 during the week. Twenty persons received probational employment or were reinstated, while 151 names were removed from the list due to expiration of eligibility or other reasons. Of those on the reemployment list 203 persons are working in temporary positions.

WINNERS in the Federal Bridge League's duplicate game Monday night at 2400 Sixteenth street were as follows: In the Howell section, Mrs. Walter S. Frisbie and Mrs. Leslie Hart (*), top score; F. Munchmeyer and Leslie Hart, runners-up. In the Mitchell section, Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Corley and George L. Bitzer won top score, North-South; Lester D. Johnson and J. P. Powell were runners-up. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Zimmer won top score, East-West, with W. Shofnos and A. J. Brylawski, runners-up. The next open pair game will be September 20.

Perfect Pets.

As the favorite household pet.
I prefer a bowl of guppies,
Thermostat, and little net.
Think of all the fun in breeding
Fish so pretty and petite
And you don't have to keep on feeding
Things better than you eat.
There's no need to watch or mind them
(Dogs are friskier than fish);
You know just where you can find them
Any time of day you wish.
Guppies do not need a muzzle.
They don't bite or even sneeze.
And you're not faced with the puzzle
Of extracting little fleas.
A. CHASANOW (*), Navy.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, in a radio address last night warned Federal employes to be on their guard against renewed activity on the part of the "so-called economy advocates."

Mr. Babcock said: "We may expect further efforts to curtail Federal expenditures on the part of those interests that are eager to depress living standards and force the working man and woman to bear the whole cost of the depression."

Sheriff's Aid Slain In Battle at Mine

Goodwill, W. Va., Aug. 21 (AP).—A volley from 15 pistols and shotguns was fired into a group of miners as they emerged from the Goodwill Colliery mine today, killing a deputy sheriff and critically wounding another man.

K. C. Peterfish, a mine company policeman deputized by the sheriff, was shot to death, and Earl Overstreet, a member of the United Mine Workers of America, is in a serious condition in a Princeton Hospital. Peterfish formerly was a State trooper.

A strike called by the local union of the United Mine Workers of America started at the mine yesterday.

Youth Sues for Injuries In Rescue of Children

$30,000 Asked for Burns Laid to Explosion of Paving Materials.

An 18-year-old youth who risked his life in a desperate attempt to save a group of smaller boys from possible serious injury yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to award him $30,000 damages because of injuries he sustained in the attempt.

The boy, Daniel Leonard, 1755 Euclid street northwest, was passing the intersection of Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest last October when he noticed that a group of children had started a fire near a barrel of highly inflammable paving materials.

He rushed in to stamp out the fire, and while he was taking other children away a barrel exploded and he was splattered with burning asphalt. The small children were saved, but three companions of Leonard also were burned.

Attorneys James F. Reilly and Reeves R. Hilton told the court that the defendnat, the Highway Engineering & Construction Co., should be held accountable for leaving an "attractive nuisance" in a place where children of immature years could see it. Leonard sustained burns about the face, body and arms, and has a crippled left leg, the muscles of which have become atrophied and are wasting away, it was charged.

Shortage in Tin Supply Probed

House Committee Decides to Retain Services of Investigator.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee voted late yesterday to retain a special investigator to inquire into this country's shortage in tin resources, with its possible damaging effect on National defense.

Preliminary testimony by State Department experts, disclosing this country entirely dependent on foreign interests for vital tin supplies, persuaded members to delve deeply into the question of international quotas.

No decision was reached on applications for the job, but the committee reviewed a mass of evidence collected by Roy Veatch, State Department attache. Further studies will be made and hearing held in the fall.

Consuming half of the world's tin, the United States has no voice in international agrements determining tin output, and to date has found no satisfactory tin substitute, Veatch disclosed.
